1

full with hafty firides, to the complete ruin of the once opulent province, was established severa years after that event A noble governor fent to command in Bengal by the East India Company, arrived in that kingdom in the May of 1765 The expulsion of the Nabob Cassim Ali, and the reduction of Suja ul Dowla, by our arms, had enabled the fervants of the Company to establish The treaty which perce upon their own terms they concluded was abfurd, and had it been lefs excep ionable it would not probably have pleafed a man, who went not to India to be idle

on th tecaty

The various revolutions of Fortune which had subjected several of the richest provinces of India to the Company's fervants, threw the undoubted heir of the Mogul empire into their hands governor availed himself of this circumstance Other Nabobs had converted the unfortunate prince into a tool and it was now the turn of our Lovernor to do the fame for the benefit of his conflituents Confcious of his power over the empe for and having the absolute direction of a Nabob. who owed his elevation to the governor, himfelf, and to his own crimes, he threw afide the former A perpetual commission for the office of Den an or receiver general of the revenues of Ben gal Behar and Oriffa was obtained from SHAW The office of perpe ALLUM for the Company tual Nabob mu ht have been as eatily obtained, but the former balanced a thouland disadvantages by rendering the nature of the tenure perplexed

e th th empe or

In confideration of the Imperial mandate which with the revenues conferred the government of Bengal for ever on the Company Shaw Allum was to receive an annual pention of three hun dred and twenty five thousand pounds putty was moderate to the lineal fuccessor of He was, at the same time, guaranteed

HISTORY

or

HINDOSTAN,

FFO": THE

DEATH OF AKBAR,

TO THE

COMPLETE SETTLEMENT OF THE EMPIRE UNDER A U R U N G Z E B E.

TO WHICH ARE PREFITD,

- I A DISSERTATION ON THE ORIGIN AND NATURE OF DESPOTISM IN HINDOSTAN
- II AN ENQUIRY INTO THE STATE OF BINGAL, WITH A PLAN FOR RESTORING THAT KINGDOM TO ITS FORMER PROSPERITY AND SPLENDOR

IN THREE VOLUMES.

VOL III.

SHEET HER ALL TO A LABOR.

By ALEXANDER DOW, Esq.

LONDON

PRINTED BY JOHN MURRAY, No 32, FLEET-STREET

fo th De MARRY

Arguments crowd in to support this positi but there are full stronger reasons for placing emperor in the territories of Bulwant Singh residence, in such a case, might have been fix at Patna or Mongeer, and our army, instead being cantoned at Allahabad and Cora, two hu dred miles from the frontier of our province might have remained in Patna in the center c our dominions Bengal, had this measure been adopted, inflead of losing the pension paid to the emperor and the enormous expence of a brigade in a foreign country, would have been enriched by the greater part of the revenues of the territories of Bulwant Singh for which he had paid twenty two lacks of roupees to Sup ul Dowla though in reality he collected double that fum upon the tuby ct

Ital f a d inconvent i ce

The latter polition will appear more obvious had the mea Bengal from the following flate fure been adopted, would annually have faved

325 000 The pension paid to the emperor, £ 187,500 The expence of a brigade, 250,000

Twenty lacks from the territories of Bulwant Singh spent at Patna

762,500

to the Compa 3

This measure alone we may venture to affirm would have preserved Bengal in a flourishing con dition, in spite of avarice and inismanagement It would, at the fame time, have been attended with many falutary effects in our political fyftem The emperor would have been more immediately under our eye for though he at present labours under an echpse he may, some time or other thine forth like a comet, in the hands of an ambinous and able man now obliged to protect and support him, under

The annual investments of the Company, for which no specie is received, amounts, at an ave f. 927,50 rage of ten years, to Those of the Dutch, for which the fervants of the Company take bills on Europe, for remitting 200,000 fortunes acquired in Bengal, 350,000 Those of the French, paid for to the natives in the fame way . 100,000 Those of the Portuguese and Danes, 1,577,500 Bengal, it shall hereafter appear, to replace all this waste scarce annu ally receives in bullion. She lofes, therefore, yearly, 1,477,500 Europe,

The above estimate of the exports of Bengal ind clare for which the receives no specie, is formed on the prime cost of her manufactures against her comprehends the favings of the Com pany on the revenue, the value of Bruth exports, the private fortunes of individuals, which center in this kingdom This ruinous commerce with Europe is not balanced by a lucrative intercourse The increase of with the various states of Asia the demand for the manufactures of Bengal, for our markets here and the revolutions which shook and greatly depopulated that kingdom, have raised the price of goods The demand would, upon this head fink in proportion in the East, but belides the internal ftate of the various coun tries which formerly exchanged bullion for the goods of Bengal, has been long unfavourable to foreign commerce.

Perfia, about thirty years ago a great and a flourishing empire, has been torn to pieces, and nth Pr almost EGIP

ADVERTISEMENT.

THOUGH the Author of this volume derives by far the greatest part of his facts from Eastern writers, he has not overlooked the interrupted glimpses of the transactions in the Mogul empire, preserved by intelligent Europeans, who travelled, the last century, into India. He relies upon their authority with regard to what they had seen. He prefers the accounts of domestic writers, to what they only heard. He draws his information chiefly from the following authors; and the originals are, at this moment, in his hands.

- I. MIRAT UL WARIDAT; or, The MIRROR OF OCCURRENCES, written by MAHOMMED SHUFFIA of Delhi. He undertook the work at the request of Byram Chan, in the reign of Mahommed Shaw. He professes his book to be a continuation of the work of Ferishta; and it contains a compendious history of the Mogul Empire, from the death of Akbâr, to the invasion of Nadir Shaw.
- II. JEHANGIRE NAMMA; or, THE HISTORY OF THE EMPEROR JEHANGIRE. By MATIMID CHAN of Delhi.
- III. SHAW JEHAN NAMMA; or, THE HISTORY OF THE EMPEROR SHAW JEHAN. By MIRZA CASIM, the fon of MIRZA AMIN, private fe-Vol. III. b cretary

pire, has almost destroyed the inland comi of Bengal with the upper parts of Hinde Every prince levies heavy duties upon all go that pass through his dominions The mercha who formerly came down towards the mouths the Ganges to purchase commodities, have o continued a trade, not only ruined by imposts b The province of Oi even unfafe from banditti and Mam are the only inland countries wit which Bengal drives at prefent, any trade former has greatly the balance in its favour against us of late years, from the money expended by feven thousand of our own troops, which till of late have been stationed in the neighbourhood of the dominions of Suja ul Dowla, in confe quence of an impolitic treaty, and to answer pri The commerce of falt beetle nut, and tobacco, with Affam, is almost balanced by the quantity of filk, Mugadutties and lack, which we receive from that kingdom in return and the re gions f east ro Asa.

The trade of Bengal, with the kingdoms and islands of the eastern Asia, still continues in some de gree, but it has been long on the decline. The coast ing trade with the maritime provinces of Hindostan has, upon various accounts, decayed We may venture to affirm upon the whole, that the ba lance in favour of Bengal, from all its Afiatic commerce, exceeds not annually one hundred The council of Calcutta have thousand pounds calculated it at less than half that sum estimated in the year 1768, the importation of bullion into Bengal for the space of four years, at fifteen lacks of roupees which amounts annu ally to forty fix thousand pounds of our money But the cause of this decay has more in negligence than in the present state of the maritime regions and islands beyond the eastern mouth of the Gan

ADVERTISEMENT

cretary to Aurungzêbe Our Author succeeded his father in that office

- IV Rose Namma, or, A Journa' of the first Ten Years of Autungzebe. By the same Writer
- V ALLUMGIRE NAMMA, or, THE HISTORY OF ALLUMGIRE OF AURUNOZEBE By the same This work is little more than an abridgment of the above.
- VI MIRAT ALLUM, OF, THE MIRROR OF THE WORLD By NAZIR BUCHTAR CHAN, a man of letters, who led a private life near Fe ridabad, within a few miles of Agra. This work contains the history of the first Ten Years of Aurungzebe.

A D 3605 line 1014

He pru dent and great pomp at Secundra, near Agra, minds of men were distracted between gr. joy funeral folemnity, and the festivity att upon the accession of a new sovereign

Chan Azım, the discontented Visier, an Raja Man Singh, were fo formidable in the nillration, pire, that Jehangire thought it most prude accept of the offered allegiance of both, and confirm them in their respective honours and vernments, without animadversion upon th late conduct Man Singh was dispatched to . fubaship of Bengal, Chan Azim to that of Malas The prince Chulero made his appearance at court and his father, after a fevere reprimand, too. him at last into favour. The emperor in the mean time began his reign by a strict administra tion of justice and by a minute inspection into the finances and refources of the state. He issued a public edict to confirm all the laws and regula tions in force Many fubas were removed from their respective governments into other provinces fome were difmiffed to make room for the empe-The deprived gover ror s abettors and friends nors repaired to court to reflore themselves by money and intrigue, to their former dignities Some fucceeded in their views others were re duced to despair through want of success latter began to form treasonable designs to recover the consequence and power which they had lost

A confp Tanf ieros

To accomplish their purpose the discontented of his lords turned their eyes upon Chusero and hoped, by his means to effect a revolution in the state They pretended to have the greatest attachment to his person they magnified the number of his They rouzed his friends and his own merit ambition by the praise of past actions and ani mated it by the fair prospect of present success But what had most weight with the prince, they intimidated

K I N G,

THIS VOLUME IS MOST HUMBLY INSCRIBED,

r a

HIS MAJESTY's

MOST DUTIFUL

MOST HUMBLE

AND MOST DEVOTED

SUBJECT AND SERVANT,

ALEXANDER DOW.

A D 16% Hig 1015 back from their purpose, and began to she themselves behind one another The emper in the mean time, was in part informed of t He prepared to feize the prince the latt was apprized of his father's deligns. By a pre mature discovery, this conspiracy, like many o the same kind sailed Fear took possession of He himfelf was afraid the adherents of Chusero They neglected to execute the daring stroke, which their fituation and fafety required. They began to remove themselves from immediate danger, as if the present were more to be feared than those which in future they had to oppose They however, did not altogether relinquish their deficus

Frft cif

On Monday the eighth of Zehidge, fix months after the accession of Jehangure to the throne of India near one hundred of the conspirators as fembled privately in the evening, at the tomb of the emperor Akbar Chufero having joined them on presence of paying his devotions at his grandfather's fhrme, they proceeded, that very night, toward Delhi. About day-break, next morning they had reached the city of Muttra, about thirty eight miles from Agra and entered the town, when the troops, who garrifoned the place, were on the parade. They halted for re freshment and they had the good fortune not to be suspected by the officer who commanded at Muttra Hussein Beg Chan Buduchshi, who had been governor of the province of Cabul during a confiderable part of the former reign, being turned out of his office by the emperor, was on his way to court Having travelled in the night on ac count of the heat of the weather, he happened to enter the city of Muttra at the opposite gate just when the prince airived. They met in the mar ket place. Chulero was no stranger to the dif cont--

A D 1506. Hig 1015

their burning houses, and mourned over their infants and aled parents, who had not strength to avoid the flames Some more resolute de fended themselves against the rebels, and to their The orders of the prince. valour owed their lives it must be owned, did not extend to such rigour and cruelty But he found it impossible to re strain from excesses his undisciplined soldiers He had fet them an example of wickedness by rebel lion, and it was not to be expected that they would submit to his commands in favour of huma nity and justice Such was the wasteful progress of Chusero to Lave the fubu be of Delhi. His followers having greatly increased buttons.

de contra their numbers in the march, he laid the suburbs of that capital under contribution. The gates being thut, the city infelf was preferved from pil The unfortunate people who lived without the walls, from their delay in raising the sum imposed upon them, had their houses consumed Many thousands were ruined Many, to retrieve their affairs, joined the rebels make reprifals upon the world for the lofs which they had fustamed

The em peror pur fues Chafero

At eleven o clock of the fame night on which Chusero lest Agra, his father was informed of his flight by the captain general, who was ordered to purfue immediately the fugitive. About an hour after this officer's departure with a confider able body of horse, the emperor suspecting his loyalty dispatched his commands to him to re Ferid Bochari lately raifed to the dignity of Murtaza Chan, and to the office of paymar ter general of the forces, was dispatched upon that fervice, with an additional number of troops The whole under Ferid amounted to ten thousand horse which greatly retarded his march ro, of course, had the more time to harafe the country.

CONTENTS

TO THE

THIRD VOLUME.

DISSERTATION ON THE ORIGIN OF DESPOTISM IN INDOSTAN.

	1
Page Page	STATE OF BENGAL UNDER THE
HE Climate and Soil of	MOGULS.
India—favourable to Despot-	•
fm—encourage Conquest 1, 11	Preliminary Observations
ia always the Seat of Slavery 11	Page
ture of the Tartar-and Af-	Reflections xxv
gan Aristocracies - 111, 1V	Defign of the Author xxvi
spotism of the Patans—differ-	A brief Account of the various
ent from that of the Moguls v	Revolutions of Bengal - xxvii use of that Difference—from heir Religion v	77 67
spotssm of the Masters of Fa-	Various Tenures under the Moguls
milies vi, vii	Dalvar of the Mague Turbuta
w of Compensation for Mur-	Policy of the Moguls—Tributa—
der—Bathing—Predestination,	ry Rajas-Mahommedan Ze-
-Polygamy viii, ix	mindars xxviii, xxix
ncealment of Women, its	Their Power restricted by the Effect on their Manners - ix, x	Crown - XXX A double Revenue—Various Zeeflections on the Nature of De-	1 - fpotifm – – xi, xii	Different Tenures under the Em-ıld under Baber— Humaioon—
Akbar—Jehangire—Shaw Je-	pire xxxiii
han—Aurungzebe - xiii, xiv, xv
te of landed Property - xvi Titles of Honour - xvii	Civil Officers and Courts of Justice.
Titles of Honour - xvii
rm of Justice xvii	Despotism limited among the uncil of State xviii	Moguls xxxiv
effections on the Communica-	Nabob - xxxv
non of Power xlx, xx	Dewan xxxvi
the Rules of Succession to	Crone—Carcun—and other Offi-

xxi

xxii

Chief Justice-Judges

Inferior Officers

ldness of the Hindoo Govern-

the Throne

ment Vol. III. A D 1606. Hile. 1015

fhan, in favour of the prince. Chusero, during the debate, fat filent Having at length weighed each opinion, he declared in favour of that of - Hussem, alleging, that the troops of the north were most faithful to their chiefs The observa tion displeased the other chiefs they murmured. and left his presence They saw that their affairs were desperate, and they resolved to retreat to their respective habitations, covering their fears under a pretended disgust at the preserence given to the counsel of Hussein

He smires

Chusero in a few minutes found himself desert on the birks of ed by those who had made him the tool of their the Attoe i ambitton and revenge. Reproaches were to no He blamed his adherents for their timidi effett. ty and perfidy, but he himfelf was not less cul His mind was agreated with various pal pable Rage against his own folly was the most fions predominant Hussein was the only chief of note who remained of the conspirators His followers, confifting of three hundred horse, and a few of the prince s menial fervants, formed their whole retinue. With these they set out for Cabul Being forced to depart from the high road, they frequently loft their way, as they were obliged to whee for want of mat.

travel in the night Keeping their course through unfrequented paths, and by roads, they at length arrived on the banks of the river Attoc, the largest branch of It was impassable without boats the Indus was then midnight. They moved down the river to the ferry of Choudera Finding no boats at that place though a much frequented passage, they understood that orders had been sent to conceal The ferryman and villagers were afleep It was proposed to feize them, to force them to discover where the boats were laid. Some were taken in their beds, others escaped, and, with

	Page
Revenue and Commerce	Impolitic and cruel Mode of
Re enue of Bengal and Behar xl	The bad Confequences of that
Increase under the Empire - xl	Mode - lzvii
Sum Annually remitted to Del	Wretched State of the Country from the Officers of Govern-
hl - xll	ment lxvili lxix
Commerce of Bengal - ald Balance of Trade in its Farour	Fatortions of the Collectors Ixx
Obfervations - zilli	Negligence of the Company in Examining into various fieldtous Tenures and Encroach-
State of Bergal under the revolted Na	ments İzzi lexli lexlii
$461	Perserfice of Juffice - ibid
Gradual Decline of the Power	Salutary Regulations made in
of the Empire zilv ziv	-7/10 IIII
Effect of its Diffolution on the Province of Bengal - zlvi	Idea of the present Government of Ben
Erief Recapitulation of its late	gal
Revolutions - xlviii	•
STATE OF BENGAL UNDER THE	Total Suspension of all Justice
EAST INDIA COMPANY	Apology for the Companys Governors lxxy
	Every Thi g left to the firm mary Decisions of Mahom Observations on the Teaty for the Dewanny	med Rita - Ixxv Impolitic and runous Conduct
Reflections xlx	of the Mint laxyi laxyii
Observations on the Treaty with the Emperor Shaw Allum
for the Dawanny 1 11	General Oblervations
I a Lofs and Inconvenience to	General Objervations Conclutions deduced from the
I a Lofs and Inconvenience to	Conclutions deduced from the preceding Observations laxviil laxis
Is Lofs and Inconvenience to the Company lii	Conclutions deduced from the
Is Lofs and Inconvenience to the Company li State of Commerce in Bergal under the Company Page	Conclutions deduced from the preceding Observations lxxviii lxxlx lxxx
Is Lofs and Inconvenience to the Company li State of Converce in Bergal under the Company Page Observations on the prefent	Conclutions deduced from the preceding Observations laxviil laxis
1 s Lofs and Inconvenience to the Company li State of Commerce in Bergal under the Company Page Oberrations on the prefent Commerce of Bengal hill	Conclusions deduced from the preceding Observations lawfil laxis laxis PLAN FOR RESTORING RENGAL. Residions on the Government
1 s Lofs and Inconvenience to the Company li State of Commerce in Bergal under the Company Page Observations on the prefent Commerce of Bengal Caufe fits Decil e with Persia Egypt S 7 is Babylonia the	Conclusions deduced from the preceding Observations lexistics. PLAN FOR RESTORING REMOAL. Refections on the Government of India.
Is Loss and Inconvenience to the Company lile. State of Converce in Bergal under the Corpany Observations on the prefer Commerce of Bengal Lufe in Drell e with Perfix Egypt Sy 12 Babylonia the reft of findolfan and the Re	Conclusions deduced from the preceding Observations lawfil laxis laxis PLAN FOR RESTORING RENGAL. Residions on the Government
Is Lofe and Inconvenience to the Company State of Company Observations on the prefent Commerce of Bengal Cuife fits Deell e with Perfix Expressions of Fixed Bulleting of the reft of Hindollan and the Regions of Eastern Afix 1 y 1 vi	Conclusions deduced from the preceding Observations laxyill laxis laxx PLAN FOR RESTORING REMOAL. Residions on the Government of India laxxi Design of the Author - laxxii
Is Lofs and Inconvenience to the Company lil State of Company Page Company Observations on the preferst Commerce of Bengal Carlos fits Deell a with Perfers Page Syrus Babylonia the rest of findedEm and the Regions of Eastern Afia 1 v lv Britmate of the Lofs of Species of Br gul	Conclusions deduced from the preceding Observations lexistics. PLAN FOR RESTORING REMOAL. Refections on the Government of India.
Is Loss and Inconvenience to the Company lii State of Converce in Bergal under the Corpany Observations on the prefert Commerce of Bengal Lufe in Deeli e with Perfax Egypt Sy 12 Babylonia the reft of Hindolfan and the Regions of Eastern Afia 1 v 1 liii Britinate of the Loss of Speede o Br gal 1 v 1 live performed in the preference of the Loss of Speede o Br gal 1 v 1 live performed by the bergion of Eastern Afia 1 v 1 live performed by the bergion of Eastern Afia 1 v 1 live performed by the bergion of the Loss of Speede o Br gal 1 live performed by the bergion of the Loss of Speede of Sp	Conclusions deduced from the preceding Observations laxyill laxis laxx PLAN FOR RESTORING REMOAL. Residions on the Government of India laxxi Design of the Author - laxxii
Is Lofs and Inconvenience to the Company lili State of Commerce in Bergal under the Company Observations on the prefent Commerce of Bengal Carlo first Deeli e with Perfus Payor Sy is Bubylonia the reli of findedlan and the Regions of Estlem Afia Iv Iv Britimate of the Lofs of Species OB et al. Iv	Conclusions deduced from the preteding Observations lixivil lixir lixix PLAN FOR RESTORING REMOAL. Reflections on the Government of India lixxi Design of the Author - lixixi Proposal for Madisform lander Property New Arrangement proposed
Is Loss and Inconvenience to the Company lii State of Converce in Bergal under the Corpany Observations on the prefert Commerce of Bengal Lufe in Deeli e with Perfax Egypt Sy 12 Babylonia the reft of Hindolfan and the Regions of Eastern Afia 1 v 1 liii Britinate of the Loss of Speede o Br gal 1 v 1 live performed in the preference of the Loss of Speede o Br gal 1 v 1 live performed by the bergion of Eastern Afia 1 v 1 live performed by the bergion of Eastern Afia 1 v 1 live performed by the bergion of the Loss of Speede o Br gal 1 live performed by the bergion of the Loss of Speede of Sp	Conclusions deduced from the preceding Observations laxvill laxing laxing of the preceding Observations laxvill laxing preceding Observations on the Government of India laxing Design of the Author - laxxiing Design of the Author - laxxiing properly of the Author of India laxing lax of the Author of laxing lax of the lax of the laxing lax of the
Is Loss and Inconvenience to the Company lii State of Converce in Bergal under the Corpany Observations on the prefert Commerce of Bengal hill Cause first Deell e with Persa Egypt Sylva Babylonia the retit of Hindollan and the Regions of Eastern Afia ly less littinate of the Loss of Speede o Br gal living the prefer to compared with her sancient Commerce little of Bengal lix	Conclusions deduced from the preteding Observations lixivil lixir lixix PLAN FOR RESTORING REMOAL. Reflections on the Government of India lixxi Design of the Author - lixixi Proposal for Madisform lander Property New Arrangement proposed
Is Los and Inconvenience to the Company State of Converce in Bergal under the Corpery Observations on the prefert Commerce of Bengal Lung first Deell e with Persa Lung first Deel e	Conclusions deduced from the preceding Observations laxvill laxing laxx PLAN FOR RESTORING REMOAL. Reflections on the Government of India laxxii Design of the Author laxxii Proposal far chability landed Property New Arrangement proposed Reflections on landed Property Ty proposal for chabilithing landed Property Proposal for chabilithing landed Property in Bengal laxxiii
Is Lofs and Inconvenience to the Company State of Converce in Bergal under the Company Obervations on the prefent Commerce of Bengal Lufe fire Deeli e with Perfu Lufe fire Deeli e with Perfu Lufe fire Bengal to the reft of finedoffun and the Regions of Eastern Afia 1 v luft luft luft luft luft luft luft luft	Conclusions deduced from the preceding Observations laxvisi laxis PLAN FOR RESTORING REMGAL. Reficient on the Government of India laxis Defign of the Author - laxxis Proposal for chabithing landed Property New Arrangement proposed Reflections on landed Property Typosal for chabithing landed Property in Bengal Its great and immediate Ad
Is Los and Inconvenience to the Company State of Converce in Bergal under the Corpery Observations on the prefert Commerce of Bengal Lung first Deell e with Persa Lung first Deel e	Conclusions deduced from the preceding Observations laxvill laxing laxx PLAN FOR RESTORING REMOAL. Reflections on the Government of India laxxii Design of the Author laxxii Proposal far chability landed Property New Arrangement proposed Reflections on landed Property Ty proposal for chabilithing landed Property Proposal for chabilithing landed Property in Bengal laxxiii
Is Los and Inconvenience to the Company like Corpery Observations on the prefer Company of the	Conclusions deduced from the preceding Observations laxvill laxis PLAN FOR RESTORING REMOAL. Reflections on the Government of India Defign of the Author - laxxii Proposal for chabiliting landed Property Typosal for chabiliting landed Property of the Property in Bengal laxxii Proposal for chabiliting landed Property in Series and lamned lax laxxii laxxii great and lamned late Advantages
Is Los and Inconvenience to the Company like Corpery Observations on the prefer Commerce of Bengal Lufe Lufe in Bengal with the reft of findedin and the Regions of Eastern Affa 1 v less litemate of the Los of Specie o Be gal 11 r pref of the Los of Specie of Eastern Affa 1 v less litemate of the Los of Specie of Eastern Affa 1 v less litemate of the Los of Specie of Eastern Affa 1 v less litemate of the Los of Specie of Eastern Affa 1 v less litemate of the Los of Specie of Eastern Affa 1 v less litemate of the Los of Specie of the Los of Specie of the Los of Specie of Bengal like like the Los of Bengal like like like the Los of Bengal like like like like like like like lik	Conclusions deduced from the preceding Observations laxvill laxis preceding Observations laxvill laxis preceding Observations laxvill laxis present of India laxis laxis laxis perpetual for chabitishing landed Property Page New Arrangement proposed Research laxis proposed for chabitishing landed Property in Brazil laxis laxis proposed for chabitishing landed Property in Brazil laxis laxis property in Brazil laxis laxis property in Brazil laxis property in Brazil laxis laxis laxis property in Brazil laxis
Is Los and Inconvenience to the Company like Corpery Observations on the prefer Company of the	Conclusions deduced from the preceding Observations laxvill laxis PLAN FOR RESTORING REMOAL. Reflections on the Government of India Defign of the Author - laxxii Proposal for chabiliting landed Property Typosal for chabiliting landed Property of the Property in Bengal laxxii Proposal for chabiliting landed Property in Serial laxxiii Proposal for chabiliting landed Property in Serial laxxiii Proposal for chabiliting landed Property in Serial laxxiii Proposal for chabiliting landed Property in Serial laxxiiii Proposal for chabiliting landed Property in Serial laxxiiiii laxxiiiii great and immediate Ad vaninges

A D 160 h Hig 1015 complete the ruin of the unfortunate Chusero had been inndvertently thrown overboard with the wood with which the boat had been found loaded. These inconveniencies, joined to a want of skill in the rowers, rendered it impossible for them to manage the boat. She was carried down the stream. The consultion was great, and danger

II is t ken pri ion t

The confusion was great, and danger every moment increased The zemindar, and the party who guarded the ferry, were not idle. They feized upon those They fired at the boat, and followed her down the river She struck at last on a fand Some plunged into the water to push her off the remained immoveable. The fire confi No resource was left Many were killed The fun was just sisting Casim Chan, who com manded the party of horse feeing the unfortu nate prince in this unextricable fituation, flopt the Being by this time joined by another officer who commanded a body of troops in the neigh bourhood, both mounted their elephants, and, riding in to the bank on which the boat lay, feized the prince. Casim placed him behind him on the elephant while the other officer secured Hussein The few that remained of their attendants were carried ashore in another boat

His beha nou he e his th r Such was the end of a rebellion begun without any just cause, concerted without judgment, and carried on with very moderate abilities by a prince scarce more unfortunate than he deserved to be. The emperor was at the time encamped in a garden near Labore He received the news of the sizure of the prince with excessive joy. He ordered him to be brought before him with a golden chain from his lest hand to his lest foot, according to the laws of his ancestors, Zingis and Timur Hussen, loaded with iron chains was placed on the right hand of Chusero, Abdul,

CONTENTS.

Page

J great and immediate Advantages - lexevin, lexelix

Monopolies.

Monopolies abolished—superior Servants debarred from Trade xe

Religion

An absolute Toleration of all Religions - xci

The executive Power

Reflection on the Mode of Legillation—the Council—Boards of Revenues—necellary Reformations xcii, xciii, xciii

Judic al Power.

Reflection—Various Jurisdictions in Bengal - xev Constables and Justices of the Peace—Cutwal or Mayor, Courts of Cutcherri - xevi Its Jurisdiction - - ibid
Provincial Courts - - vevii Supreme Court, its civil and criminal Jurisdiction - xcviii
Court of Exchequer, its Jurisdiction, confined as such xcix

Observations on the Judicial Power.

Reflections on what of their own Laws ought to be left Entire to the Natives - c, ci Expence of the Supreme, the Provincials and Cutcherri Courts - cni observation - ibid

Gereral Reflections on the Plan.

Reflections on the immediate and future Advantages to be derived from the Plan - civ, cv Concluding Reflection - cvi

Concluding Reflictions

Present rumous State of the Revenue - cvii, cviii
Obvious Advantages of the preceding Plan - cix, cx

A D 1621 Hie 1010 throne He expanded upon the uncertain fate of Shaw Jehan, and upon the doubtfulness of their own fortune, as connected with that prince One Raja Bandor, a notorious villain, understood the meaning of Shaw Jeh n s friend In hopes of a reward, he went at midnight to the tent of Chusero, and pretending a message from the em peror, he was admitted by the attendants of the prince, without suspicion He found him fast rsleep, and stabbed him to the heart. The fa vourne wife of Chusero, the daughter of the visier Chan Azem, came to her husband s tent in the She found him cold in his blood, she morning filled the camp and the neighbouring city of Azere She ran about distracted, and with her cries called down the vengeance of God upon the mur Shaw Jehân, who had removed to the country for the benefit of the air, returned upon the news of Chufero's death, and shewed such apparent fymptoms of grief, that he was believed, for some time, innocent of the murder

The emras tat the n pr der

The news of the death of Chusero came foon Retaining full fome af to the emperor a cars fection for his unfortunate fon, he was shocked at the murder, and gave himself up to grief He suspected Shaw Jehan, but common fame had not yet fixed the crime on that prince. wrote a public letter to him and his principal of ficers fignifying that he was determined to mak a first and fevere enquity concerning the affa fination, and that he would punish the murde ers with the utmost rigour He ordered the bor to be dug up from the grave and examined openly acculed Shaw Jehan, who, finding hi felf discovered, resolved to commue in his rel hon

Apology fo Shum Jehan

The author of the life of Shaw Jehan, afer his rebellion to the violence and ambition of favor

THE HISTORY OF HINDOSTAN

JEHANGIRE	A D Hig
	1606 1015 He re taken Prifoner 16 His behaviour before his
CHAP I	Father IMC
)	Execution of his Adhe-
bleroations—Death of Abbar—Ac	rents 1
ceffion of Selim by the name of Jehan	Candahar myefted by Differ of Street of the Asiat of Street	the Perlians - 1
gire-Rebellion of Sultan Chufero-	The Siege raifed - re
Battle of Labore-Chusare & Mis	A Peace with Perfix 104 fortunes - Rebellion quafted - Ex	A Confpiracy discovered as ecutions - War with Perfia-A Con-
fperacy	FEHANGIRE.
Page	3
A D Hg General Obfervations	CHAPII
1605 1014 1 $
Ex ent and Refenues	Disturbances in Bengal-Story of Chapi
of the Empire 3	Aussi-His flight from Tartory
Intrigues against Sul an	Diffress in the Desert-Burth of the
Selim ibid	Sultana Neer Mabil-Marrier
He Accession to the	with Shere After Perfection
Throne - 4
Hi Tides and Ag 5	and Murder of that Omrab-He
His prudent and wife Administration 6	Marriage with the Emperor-Pro motion of her Family
A Conspiracy in Fa	A D Hig Difterbances in Ben-
to spo telege s	1606 1015 Est #
Proposal of Astaffi a	Story of Chafa Aisle a
tion 7	He Diffres in the De-
The Plut diforered ibid	fart #
1606 tors Flift Rift g	His Arrival and good
Chufero marches to	Fortune at Laboro ibio
Delhi 9	Character of his Dingh
Ravages the Country ibid	ter Mher ul Nuffa &
Lays the Suburbs of	She captivates Sultan
Delbi under Contri	Selim - ibie
butto 10	Marties Shere Afkun
The Loperor pursues Chuf ro who takes	who is perfecuted by Selim si
the Route of Labore 11	He i called to Court gi
He is defeated by Fo-	He Attacks and Kills an rid Bochari 15	enormous Tiger - g
Fluct ating Counfels of	Defeats a Defien againft
hu Adherents ibid	his Life 21
Th ∉ difn=rfe 13	D fcomfin fo ty Affaf
H arrives on the Banks	Gas 3
of th Attoc 14	He is murdered - 1
Where fo want of Boats	Mher al Nilla ill re to it in great Diffress 16

1611. Hie 1012

prince, in the mean time, endeavoured to ex his own conduct, by affirming, that he driven to extremes, by the intrigues of the & tana against his power. She carried, he faid, before her with the emperor and to throw d grace upon him, perfuaded Jehangire to ord him to the Persian war, without the necessar fupplies of money and warlike stores He, there fore, alleged, that his demands had been made in fo peremptory a manner, merely because he did not confider his father as a free agent, fwayed and commanded as he was by the pernicious coun fels of a vindictive and ambitious woman allegations leffened his crime in the eyes of the fuperficial, and tended to strengthen in his army, the attachment to his interest, which he had purchafed with donations.

Diffress of 101

The emperor was impatient to come to action the empe with his fon. Aliph Jah, the vilier, opposed this measure, by affirming that it was imprudent to rifque all, with a small force, while reinforcements were daily expected The emperor suspect ed his fidelity, and he had fome reason was faid to have provided against all events, by keeping up a correspondence with Shaw Jehan. His enemies affirmed, that it was his advice which hastened the prince from the Decan, though this agrees but little with the preparations which Afiph had made against Shaw Jehan from fore feeing his rebellion Jehangire, however, beheved his minister guilty. He gave himself up to rage and despair

Hisdream

In the heat of his imagination upon the occa fion, he fell affeep in his tent He dreamed that he faw a pole fixed in the ground, before the Im penal palace. On the top of the pole, which almost reached the skies, a meteor seemed to play, and to lighten the whole world with its fplendor

CONTENTS.

A D. Hig Page 1606 1015 Not seen by the Emperor until the End of four Years - 33, 34 Her Nuprials with Jehangire—P omotion of her Family - 35 JEHANGIRE. CHAP. III. Prudent Administration—Insurrections quelled—Bad Success in the Decan— Emperor's Progress to Asmere— —Peace with the Rana—Prince Churum in Favour—Character of Sultan Purvez—An English Ambassador—His Reception at Asmere —Transactions at Court—Power of the Sultana—Progress to Mando— To Guzerat—The Emperor's return to Agra—Death and Character of	A D Hig dor arrives at Court ibid Disturbances in Guzerat 52 Quashed by Ablalla 52 Disturbances in Cabul quashed - ibid Bad Success in the Decan - 53 Sultan Churrum's Name changed to Shaw Jehan ibid Forces the Princes of the Decan to a Peace 54 Cause of the Former bad Success - ibid The Empeior removes from Ajmere 55 Great Power of the Empress - 56 Transactions at Court during its Residence at Mando - ibid Emperors Progress to Guzerat and Return to Agra 57 Death and Character of the Visier 58
A D Hig Page 1611 1020 Prudent Administration 37 Afgans rebel - 38 An Insurrection in Bengal 39 Another in Behar - 40 Quashed 1bid Prince Purvez sent against the Pana - 41 Feuds in the Imperial Army - +2 Their Distress and Retreat - 1bid 1613 1022 Purvez recalled 43 Emperor's Progress to Ajmere - 44 Prince Churrum sent to Command in the De can 45 The Rang offers Terms ibid	JEHANGIRE. CHAP. IV. Disposition of the Court—Expedition to Servalic—The Emperor in Cassumere—Disturbances in the Decan—Prince Chusero murdered—Rebellion of Shaw Jehan—He is repulsed at Agra—Deseated at Delhi—Pursued by his Biother Purvez—Deseated at the Nirbidda—He reduces Orixa, Bengal and Behar—He marches toward the Capital—Totally deseated by Purvez—Besieges Brampour—In great Distress—His Submission—Candahar lost to the Empire.
1614 1023 Prince Churrum in great Favour - 46 A Whim of the Emperor 47 Difgrace of Chan Azim and Death of Man Singh 47 1615 1024 Character of Sultan Purvez - 48 His courteour Reception of Sir Thomas Roe 49 Transactions at the court	A D Hig Page 1618 1027 Despotism of the Court 59 Expedition into the Nountains of Sewalic 60 Aurungzebe born - ibid 1619 1028 Reinin of the Ambassa- dor to Persia - 61 The great Roads im-

THE HISTORY OF HINDOSTAN

A D 1611
11 g 1044 Hugl v tal n by effault

- 34

he laid up the farcasm in his mind. He, there fore, listened with ardour to the representations of Cassim, and ordered him to invest Hugley

Casim, in consequence of Imperial orders, appeared with an army before the Portugueze facto-Their force was not fufficient to face him in the field, and he immediately made his ap proaches in form A breach was made, and the duch filled up in a few days, and the Imperialifts carried the place by affault The Portugueze. however, behaved with bravery They continued to fight from their houses Many were killed, and the living proposed terms. They offered half their effects to Cafini, they promifed to pay an annual tribute of four lacks, upon condition that they should be permitted to remain in the country. in their former privileges of trade. The victor would liften to no terms until they laid down their I bree thousand souls fell into his hands Their lives were spared, but the images, which had given so much offence to the savourite Sulta na, were broken down and destroyed These were the first hostilities against Europeans re corded in the histories of the Last

Revit th R; of Bund

The perty war with the Portugueze was fuc ceeded by the fecond revolt of the Raia of Bun de la The terms imposed upon him at the reducti on of hi country by Mohabet, were too fevere, and he only hid remained quiet to prepare for another effect against the imperial power. Au rungache the third fon of the emperor was fent against him, under the tumon of Nuserit, the This was the first opportunity Suba of Malava given to that young hon of rioting in blood Raja though much inferior in force, was oblis nate and brave Possessed of many strong holds, he refe hed to fland upon the defensive, against an enemy whom he could not, with any affurance of victory. ı

A D Tr	A D Hig Page
a b mg	1625 1034 Candahar loft to the
1620 1029 Diffurbances m the De	Empire - ibid
"can 61	Irreption of the Ufbees 84
Shaw Jehan fent to quell	1
the Infurgents - ibid	l i
The Rebels reduced ibid	FEHANGIRE
Chulero delivered into	Jannotha
the Hands of Shaw	1
_Jeban - 63	CHAPV
The Sultana fulpeds has	"""
Defigns 64	167.1.
1621 1030 Character of Chulero ibid	Mobabet in Favour-Accepted of in
He is affaffina ed 65	Istated I realog Ordered to Court
Manner of he Death ibid	Machinetions of his Enemies-In
The Emperor nraged	disputes of the II To CI
at the Murder 66	dignities affered but He Refoloes to
Apology for Shaw Jehan ibid	fence the Emperor-He Takes bum to
1612 1031 He aff mes the Imperal	bu Test-Defeats the Vifier-Com-
Title 67	LESS the Sullana to Donth Rus
I repulfed at Agra 68	pardons ber-Geoerns the Empire
1613 1032 His Demands on his	- Attached by al. Co.
_ Father refused 69	-Attacked by the Current of Cabul
Preparations against Himib d	-He lays down bis Power-
He endeavours to excuse	Obliged to fig-Sent against Show
his Conduct ibid	Jeban Death of Prince Parves
Diffrefs of the Empe-	His Charatter—Death of Chan
For - 70 Hu Dresm - shid	Chanan.
The Action begins ibid	AD Hig Pers
	tote tote Mahahas 111 Page
Gi cumflances during the	1615 1035 Mohabet in high Fa
Battle 73
S han P rvez arnves in
the Camp ibid	The Grounds of the Ac
Aff nithe Pecan 24	culation ibid
Shaw Jeh 3 Party de	Hi Foem es at Court 8
fes d Guzerat 75	The empe or all remail that
Purvez D-Jents blaw	Mohabet commanded to Jehan et the N rhidda ibid
1624 1033 Shaw J han flies to	He o eys 89
Orlina 76	1010 1015 Hus M ff-my r grofly
Tr ters menkar ann no-	ur nt a fbid
feats the Suba Bind Bengal fubmits and	He f pof the Fmpe
Behar
He divides his Army in	ries blon to and ar
to three P rts 28	him Pifo pd ar ries blim to ron Camp
Po vez Advances toward	C ty off Some Ch - y' ye
Him - Ibld	1 be wher determines
Preparations for Action 79	to relege the Emperor itset
The Army of Shan Je	Dut is defeated with ban totally defeated to	great Slaughter and
His bravery - 81	t∡ken Prifoner or
He flies toward the De	The bultana felfed 11
can - ibid	Condemned to Death
1685 1034 Belieges Brampour 8s	saved time Request of
His Aff in ruined - ibid	the Emperor - Ibid
He is pardoned 83	March to Cabul 97
1	Designs

A B 1613 H : 144

the strength of Dowlatabad was not proof aga trenchery latte, the son of Maleck Amber, w was the governor, sold at to Mobabet for a su of money, and an annual pension of twenty si thousand pounds, secured on the Imperial trefury

The \i

The old Nizam was dead before the treacher of Fatte had delivered up the impregnable fortrest of Dowlatahad to Mohabet An infant fucceeded and Tatt chose to make terms for himself, under the uncertainty of the young prince : for The delivery of the Nizam into the hands of the Imperial general, was one of the conditions imposed on Fatti for the bribe which he received He was treated The prince was carried to Agra with apparent respect and kindness by the empe ror, but it was dangerous to permit him to re main at large He was ordered into confinement in the castle of Gualiar, with an attendance of women and fervants to alleviate his captivity His dominions, in the mean time were annexed to the empire and Mohabet, with his wonted abilities ellablished the form of government, by which the new province was to be, for the future,

Suga Int t the De

The animolity and jealouly which broke out regulated afterwards among the princes the four fons of Shaw Jehan, made their first appearance at this Aurungzebe who shewed a courage and understanding beyond his years, was in great fa He delighted to encou your with the emperor rage him in the martial exercises, which the prince ardently loved and though he did not abate in his regard for his other fons they re pined at the preference given to Aurungzebe A feat which that prince performed on his birth day, when he entered his fifteenth year, ftrength ened his interest in his father's affections. He fought A. D. Hig. Page | Defigns of the Sultana against Mohabet de-98 feated 1626 1036 Mohabet resigns his Power-heis obliged to fly 99 Conference with Afiph in Favour of Shaw Jehan Death of Purvez - 100, 101 His Character ıbıdı Affairs at Court and in the Decan Death of Chan Chanan ibid

FEHANGIRE.

CHAP. VI

Schemes of Mohabet and Afiph—Death of the Emperor—His Character—Anecdotes of his private Life—His Religion—His Violence—Severe Justice—And humanity—The Son of Prince Chusero raised to the Throne—Defeat of Shariar—Shaw Jehan marches from the Decan—Young Emperor deposed and murdered—Children of Jehangire—State of Persia.

A D Hig. Page 1627 1037 Schemes of Mohabet Death of the Emperor October the 27th -105 His Character pidi His private Life and 108 Opinions Scheme of establishing a new Faith 109 His Violence LIO An Instance of his feverity in the Execution of Justice 111, 112 Of his humanity Dawer Buxsh raised to the Throne 113 Shariar defeated, taken and blinded 1 bid March of Shaw Jehan 114 Suspicious Conduct of piqi Lodi Dawir Buxsh deposed and murdered

A. D. Hig Page
1627 1037 Shaw Jehan arrives at Agra 116
Jehangire's Children ibid
State of Persia and Usbekian Tartary - 117

SHAW FEHAN.

CHAP. I.

Reflections—Accession of Shaw Jehan
—Promotions—The Emperor's Children—State of the Emperor with regard to foreign Powers—Incursion of the Usbecs—War in Bundelcund —Disgrace—Tragical Story—And Flight of Chan Johan Lodi—Death and Character of Shaw Abas of Persia—Emperor's march to the Decan—War in Golconda and Tellingana—Irruption of the Afgans—
—The Visier Asiph takes the Field.

Page

A. D Hig

1628 1037 Reflections Accession of Shaw Jehan 120 Promotions Afiph Arnves at Agra Children of the Emperor 122 State of the Empire Lodi submits 124 Invalion of the Ulbecs repulsed 124 War with the Raja of Bundelcund - 126, 127 He is taken Prisoner - ibid Mohabet removed from the Head of the Army 128 Irruption of the Ulbecs Story of Chan Jehan Lod_1 1bid 1629 1038 Cause of the Emperor's Resentment that Omrah ibid He is disgraced in the Presence 131 . His Diffress and Flight 132, 133 His gallant Behaviour and Escape 134 His Distress and Bravery 135 Uneafiness of the Emperor ibid Death

1511

He

1844.

der the tuition of fo able an officer as Mo But he had no intention of that kind fixed on Dara as his fucceffor, though there little policy in his placing Suja in the chann acquiring the favour of the army, a knowle of the world, and a superior skill in war upon these grounds, that Dara suffly complaine and the fequel will show, that he judged bett than his father of the confequences

Emperor

On the fifth of April, 1634, the emperc progref to marched from Agra toward Lahore He moves flowly, taking the divertion of hunting in all the forests on the way le hims if was an excellent fportfman, and the writer of his life relates, that he flot forty deer with his own hand before he reached Delhi In that city he remained a few days and then proceeded to Lahore, where he arrived after a journey of more than a month The governors of the northern provinces met the emperor near the city and, with these and his own retinue, Shaw Jehan went with great pomp to visit the tomb of his father He dif tinguished, by peculiar attention and acts of fa your, Mirza Bakir and Sheich Beloli, two learned men, who refided at Lahore, and, having made a confiderable prefent to the Fakiers, who kept up the perpetual lamp in his father's tomb, he fer out for the kingdom of Cashmire, on the lim to of which he arrived on the thirteenth of June. Pleasure was his only business to Cash mire He relaxed his mind from public affairs for fome days and amufed himfelf with viewing the curious fprings the cafcades, the hanging woods and the lakes, which divertify the de lightful and romantic face of that beautiful coun try. His progress was celebrated in verse by Mahommed Jan but his care for the flate foon brought him back to Lahore

Page My D Hig I Say 1038 Death and Character of 136 Shaw Abea 631 1040 Preparations for War 137 Emperor Arrives in the 138 Decan He detaches Armies the Imperial from Camp 130 łы́d Success in Golconda the T.od) commande Confederates 140 Affairs at Court lbid Ап Астип 141 Afgana repulfed 141 Eradit supe seded i the command of the Ar ibid

SHAW FEHAN

CHAP I

The Vifer commands the Army—Defeat of the Confederates—Right Muferium and Death of Lodin-Progress of the War in the Decem—Death of the Favorests Sultans—A Femme—Peese in the Decem—Emperor Returns to Agra—Persecution of Idolators—War would the Portuguss—Than Fallary taken—Raya of Bunded reduced and flam—Marriages of the Practs Dara and Soyn—War in the Decem—Gel conda reduced—Death of Mobabet—Affairs at Cent

A D Hig P ge 1631 1040 Vifier takes the com m nd fth Army 144 Nizam pre pofes Term 145 Flight Misfortunes and Death of Lode 147 Hi Char & Negous tion brok 148 Progress of the Impe is Arms 149 1612 1042 Death and Character of ibid the Sultana Public Cal mides 150 The Confederates ſe 1bid for Peace

Page A D Hig 1631 1043 Return of the Emperor to Agra Perfecution of the Hundoos 151 Suba of Beneal complains of the Portu guele 153 Their infolence to Shaw Jehan Hugh y taken by Affault 154 Revolt of the Rais of Bundela ibid Hia Misfortunes Brace ry and Doath 155 Marriages of he Princes Dara and Sula 156 Mohabet invades Gol conda takes Dowlata

bad 157
The Nexam confined 158
Sula fent to the Docan 158
Je, loufy of Dara 159
1634 1044 Emperor a progress to

Caffini e 160
Suja recalled 161
Desti and Character of Mohabet 1bid

1635 1045 Avecdotes concerning him 162 163
Embaffy to the Utbees Ibid
Property returns to Agra 164
Promotions ibid

SHAW FEHAN

CHAP III

Esperors expedition to the DecamPedultion of that Country—Death of Chan Zunum—An Information in Bubdin—Qualitd—Canadahar reflored to the Empire—Investion from Affirm
—Reduktion of Tibet—Opperfice Governmer pumified—Prince Suya narrowshy Espays from the Flames of Rayamabha-An Embaffs to Confiantimple—Calamities in the Northern Provinces—Death and Character of Affish Jah-Tirkes pusified for Opperfism—An Investion threatened from perfis—Interrupted by the Death of Show Seft.

A D 1615 Illie 1055 broke through all refraint and custom, quired power by her own address, more i the weakness of Jehangire fionate, infinuating, cunning, bold and tive, jet her character was not flained wit elty, and the maintained the reputation of tity, when no restraint but virtue rema Her passions were indeed too masculine we see her acting the part of a foldier, she ex ridicule more than admiration; and we are to forget that delicacy, beyond which her ceases to please

War * th

The meffectual expedition of Ali against i the Uth-ca Uthece, did not induce the emperor to relinqui the war. He fet up an antiquated claim, which his ancestors had on Buduchshan, and the distric of Bulich, and moved with a great army toward Cabul, to support his pretentions When he ar rived in that city, he detached fifty thousand horse with a large train of artillery, under the conduct of prince Morad, to the north Mahommed, who had taken Balich and its dif trid by force from the Usbecs, shut himself up in that city where he was belieged by Morad Mahommed made but a poor defence, for he evacuated the place in a few days Morad en tered the city in triumph. He protected the in habitants from beinj, plundered and detached a party in purfuit of Mahommed His own army fell, in the mean time, upon Mahommed and having plundered him of fixty lacks of roupee, feparated, and left him alone. The unfortunate prince had no refource but to fly his dominions, which were now over run by the conquerors He hoped to engage Persia in his interest, and he hastened to Ispahan The prince Morad, in the mean time, took all his towns and castles, at leafure there was no enemy in the field, and fearer

CONTENTS.

Death of Afril the I imperor 'Preceptor' - ibid Death of Afril the I imperor 'Preceptor' - ibid Death of Afril the I imperor 'Ibid Death of Afril the I imperor ibid Excellent Government of the I imperor - 177 The Capital of Bengal defit of the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Emperor Trives at Agra Applies to the public Business in Agra Applies to the public Business in Excurr of the Ufbecs Excellent Government of the Imperor in Encursion of the Ufbecs Excellent Government of the Imperor arrives at Agra Applies to the public Business in Excurr of the Ufbecs in Excurring in Excurri	rence de- the ons ake in ecs
sinvace the Decan - 166 He fets out from Apra - 167 He lays wafte the line- my's Country, which fubmits - 168 1638 1648 Emperor returns to Ap- mere - 169 Death of Chan Ziman - 170 InfurreQuoi in Behar - 170 Candahar delivered up to the limpite - 181 Al Nitralan rewirded - 172 Al Nitralan rewirded - 172 Invation from Affam - 173 Death of the Milhar in the Perfact of Reduction of Affam - 173 Death of Affait the limperor's Preceptor - 182 Invation from Affam - 174 Death of Affait the limperor's Preceptor - 182 Excellent Government of the Imperor - 177 The Capital of Bengal defined fireyed by lire - 184 Return of the Ambuffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid 1640 1050 Calamntous Hoods - 179 Buff furprifed and retal en 180 An Ambuffador from Conflantinople - 181 Death of the Vifier - 181 Death of the Vifier - 181 Death of the Vifier - 182 Death of the Vifier - 184 He leaves his Fortune to Prince Of the Ufbecs fles	de- the ons the ons the ons the
He fets out from Agra 167 He lays with the line- my's Country, which fubruts - 168 1638 1e48 Emperor returns to Aj- mere - 169 Death of Chin Zimin - 170 InfurreCtion in Behar - 170 Candishar delivered up to the limpite - 101 Alt Mirstan rewarded - 172 Invition from Affirm - 173 Death of Mrith Ray intil Reduction of Affirm - 173 Death of Affirth the limpite - 104 Death of Affirth the limpite ror's Preceptor - 104 Death of Affirth the limpite ror's Preceptor - 104 Death of Affirth the limpite ror's Preceptor - 104 Death of Affirth the limpite ror's Preceptor - 177 The Capital of Bengal defined floyed by Irie - 104 1639 1049 Ali Murdan promoted Return of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor indice to the Ottoman Emper	de- the ons ake in accs ur-
He lays withe the Incomy's Country, which fubmits - 168 1638 1e48 Emperor returns to Apmere - 169 Death of Chan Ziman - 170 Infurredian in Behar - 170 Candahar delivered up to the Impure - indid Perfians defeated - 171 Alt Mirchan rewarded - 172 Invision from Affam - 173 Death of Afril the Impuration of Affam - 173 Death of Afril the Impurator's Preceptor - indid Perce with Perfia - 174 Death of Afril the Impurator's Preceptor - indid Dyra and Suja promoted 175 Suja made Governor of Henjal - 176 Excellent Government of the Imperor - 177 The Capital of Bengal deferor's Preceptor - indid Dyra and Suja promoted 175 Suja made Governor of Henjal - 176 Excellent Government of the Imperor - 177 The Capital of Bengal deferor's Air Mark & Agria Applies to the public Business to the public Business (and Death of Amar Singh - 1643 1053 An Accident Rashines and Death of Amar Singh - 1644 1054 Aurung zebe removed from the Decan - 1804 1640 1050 Calamitous Hoods - 179 Bull furprised and retal en 180 An Ambassador from Constantinople - indid He leaves his I ortune to Prince Dara - 182 Death of the Visier - ibid He leaves his I ortune to Prince Oara - 182 Uniform Mark the Usbess—Who fubmit to Emperor jealous of his Sandhar — Aurungzele bestieges to no 19 Bull furprised - 174 Death of Mark Ruja ibid Candahar — Aurungzele bestieges to no 19 Bull furprised - 174 Death of Mark Ruja ibid Candahar — Aurungzele bestieges to 20 An Ambassan — 175 Bull furprised in the Usbes 100 An Ambassan — 170 Bull furprised and retal en 180 An Ambassan — 181 Death of the Visier - ibid He leaves his I ortune to Prince of the Usbess flies	de- the ons ake in accs urmy's Country, which fubmits - 168 1638 1e48 Emperor returns to Apmete - 169 Death of Chan Ziman - 170 Infurrection in Behar - 170 Candibar delivered up to the Impute - idid Perfiams defeated - 171 Alt Miritan rewarded - 172 Invition from Affirm - 173 Death of Affird he Impute - idid Peace with Perfia - 174 Death of Affird he Impute - idid Peace with Perfia - 174 Death of Affird he Impute - idid Peace with Perfia - 174 Death of Affird he Impute - idid Peace with Perfia - 174 Death of Affird he Impute - idid Peace with Perfia - 174 Death of Affird he Impute - idid Peace with Perfia - 175 Suja made Governor of Benjal defined Governor of the Impute - 177 The Capital of Bengal defined to the Ottoman Emperor idid to 1640 1050 Calamitous Hoods - 179 Buff furprifed and retal en 180 An Ambiffador from Confiantinople - idid He leaves his Iortune to Prince Dara - 182 Death of the Vifier - idid He leaves his Iortune to Prince Dara - 182 Heaven of the Ufbees - 1864 He leaves his Iortune to Prince of the Ufbees Prince of the Ufbees flies	the ons ake in occs ourfubmits - 168 Emperor returns to Apmer - 169 Death of Chin Zimin - 170 Infurred ion in Behar - 170 Candahar delivered up to the I impire - ibid Perfians delivered up to the I impire - ibid Reduction of Affilm - 171 Death of Afril the I impirator's Preceptor - ibid Dara and Suja promoted 175 Suja made Government of Hengal - 174 Death of Afril the I impirator's Preceptor - ibid Dara and Suja promoted 175 Suja made Government of Hengal - 177 The Capital of Bengal defitroyed by 1 irc - ibid 1640 1050 Calamitous Hoods - 179 Buff furprifed and retal en 180 An Ambaffidor from Confiantimople - ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad diffinguish imfelf - 181 Death of the Vifier - ibid He leaves his Fortune to Prince Dara - 182 Linguish returns to Apmer Acturnal at Delibit—Perfians of Incuring at Delibit Perfians of Incurin	ons ake in accs ur- age 188
1638 1e48 Emperor returns to Apmer	nke in lecs ur- ur- 188 189
Death of Chan 7 man - 170 Infurre@ion in Behar - 170 Candahar delivered up to the I mpire - abid Perfiam defeated - 171 All Miralan rewarded - 172 Invation from Affam - 173 Dea h of the Mah-Raja abid Perce with Perfia - 174 Death of Affait the I mperoral Preceptor - abid Dara and Suja promoted 175 Suja made Governor of Bengal - 176 Excellent Governor of Bengal - 1	in iccs iur- iur- iss iss iss
Death of Chan 7 man = 170 Infurrection in Behar = 170 Candahar delivered up to the I impure = - ibid Perframs defected = 171 Ali Mirclan rewarded = 172 Inventor from Affam = ibid Reduction of Affam = ibid Perce with Perfra = - 174 Death of Af-il the I impuror's Preceptor = ibid Dera and Suja promoted 175 Suja made Governor of Benyal = - 176 Excellent Government of the I imperor = - ibid I639 1049 Ali Mirclan promoted 178 Return of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Limperor ibid I640 1050 Calamitous I loods = - 179 Buff furprified and retal en 180 An Ambaffador from Conflantinople = - ibid I641 1051 The Prince Morad diffinguishes himfelf = 181 Death of the Vifier = ibid He leaves his I ortune to Prince Dara = - 182 Prince of the Ufbees flies	ur- 188
Infurrection in Behar - 170 Candidate delivered up to the I mpire ibid Perfiam defeated - 171 Alt Mitrian rewarded - 172 Investion from Affirm - ibid Reduction of Affirm - 173 Dea h of the Mah-Rija ibid Perce with Perfia 174 Death of Afril the I mperor's Preceptor - ibid Dara and Suja promoted 175 Suja made Governor of Benyal - 176 Excellent Government of the I imperor - 177 The Capital of Benyal deferous defeated to the Ottoman Emperor ibid 1639 1049 Ah Murdan promoted 178 Return of the Ambiffieder to the Ottoman Emperor ibid 1640 1050 Calamitous Hoods 179 Buff furprifed and retal en 180 An Ambiffiedor from Conflantinople ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad diffinguishes himfelf - 181 Death of the Vifier - ibid He leaves his Fortune to Prince Dara - 182 Prince of the Ufbees flies	ur- 188
Candahar delivered up to the 1 mpire - and Perfians defeated - 171 Ali Miran rewarded - 172 Invition from Affam - ind Reduction of Affam - 173 Dea h of the Minh-Rija and Peace with Perfia - 174 Death of Afril the 1 mperor ror's Preceptor - and Dara and Suja promoted 175 Suja made Governor of Bengal - 176 Excellent Government of the 1 mperor - 177 The Capital of Bengal defered to the Ottoman Emperor ind 1639 1049 Ali Murdan promoted 178 Return of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ind 1640 1050 Calamitous 1 loods - 179 Buff furprifed and retal en 180 An Ambaffador from Conflantmople - ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad diffinguishes himfelf - 181 Death of the Vifier - ibid He leaves his Fortune to Prince Dara - 182 Prince of the Ufbecs flies	ur-
the I mpire ibid Perfians defeated - 171 Alt Miran rewarded - 172 Invition from Affam - ibid Reduction of Affam - ibid Reduction of Affam - ibid Peace with Perfia 174 Death of Affail the I mperor of Preceptor - ibid Dara and Suja promoted 175 Suja made Governor of Benyal 176 Excellent Government of the I mperor - 177 The Capital of Bengal defirojed by 1 me - ibid 1639 1049 Alt Murdan promoted 178 Return of the Ambaffildor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid 1640 1050 Calamitous I loods 179 Buff furprifed and retal en 180 An Ambaffador from Confiantinople - ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad diffinguifies himfelf - 181 Death of the Visier - ibid He leaves his Fortune to Prince Dara - 182 Prince of the Ufbees flies	ur-
Perfiam defeated - 171 Alt Mirdan rewarded - 172 Involve from Affam - ibid Reduction of Affam - ibid Reduction of Affam - 173 Deah of the Mish-Rija ibid Peace with Perfia - 174 Death of Affal the Imperoral Supramade Governor of Bengral - 176 Excellent Government of the Imperor - 177 The Capital of Bengral define fireyed by lare - ibid Return of the Ambassidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid 1640 1050 Calamitous Hoods - 179 Bush surprised and retal en 180 An Ambassidor from Constantinople - ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad distinguishes himself - 181 Death of the Visier - ibid He leaves his Fortune to Prince Dara - 182 Promotions A D Hip 1642 1052 Restlections - 1 1643 1053 An Accident - 1 Rashiness and Death of Amar Singh - 1 Rashiness and Death of Amar Singh - 1 Involved by lare - ibid Amar Singh - 1 Involved by lare - ibid Amar Singh - 1 Involved by lare - ibid Involved by lare - ibi	age 188 189
Ali Mirrlan rewarded - 172 Investion from Affirm - ibid Reduction of Affirm - 173 Dea h of the Mish-Rija ibid Peace with Perfia - 174 Death of Afril the I mperorial Preceptor - ibid Dara and Suja promoted 175 Suja made Governor of Benyal - 176 Excellent Government of the I mperor - 177 The Capital of Benyal defits of the I mperorial Project by I are - ibid 1639 1049 Ali Murdan promoted 178 Return of the Ambiffidor to the Ottoman Emperoribid 1640 1050 Calamitous I loods - 179 Buff furprifed and retal en 180 An Ambaffiador from Conflantinople - ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad diffirm guifies himfelf - 181 Death of the Vifier - ibid He leaves his I ortune to Prince Dara - 182 Promotions A D Hip 1642 1052 Reflections - 1 Limperor arrives at Agra Applies to the public Bufines 1643 1053 An Accident - 1 Raffines and Death of Amar Singh - 1 Incursion of the Ufbees 1644 1054 Aurung zebe removed from the Decan - 1645 1055 Reflections of the Limperor or Aurungzebe fent into Guzerat - 2 Sadulla made Visier - Ali Murdan Invades Buduchshan - 181 Death of the Visier - ibid He leaves his Fortune to Prince of the Ufbees flies	age 188 189
Alt Miral rewarded - 172 Invation from Affam - ibid Reduction of Affam - 173 Dea h of the Mish-Rija ibid Peace with Perfia 174 Death of Afail the Imperor of Perceptor - ibid Dara and Suja promoted 175 Suja made Governor of Benjal 176 Excellent Government of the Imperor - 177 The Capital of Bengal defitroyed by Irre - ibid 1639 1049 Ali Murdan promoted 178 Return of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid 1640 1050 Calamitous Hoods 179 Buff furprifed and retal en 180 An Ambaffador from Conftantinople ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad diffinguifies himfelf - 181 Death of the Vifier - ibid He leaves his Fortune to Prince Dara 182 Promotions A D Hijf 1642 1052 Reflections 184 Applies to the public Bushines An Accident - Raffines and Death of Amar Singh 184 Incurfion of the Ufbecs 1643 1053 An Accident - Raffines and Death of Amar Singh - 184 Incurfion of the Ufbecs 1644 1054 Aurung zebe removed from the Decan - 182 Sadulla made Vifier - Ali Murdan Invades Buduchfhan 181 Death of the Vifier - ibid He leaves his Fortune to Prince Dara 182 Prince of the Ufbecs flies	age 188 189
Inv-fion from Affirm - ibid Reduction of Affirm - 173 Dea h of the Mish-Rija ibid Peace with Perfia 174 Death of Aff-il the I mperor ror's Preceptor - ibid Dara and Suja promoted 175 Suja made Governor of Henyal - 176 Excellent Government of the I imperor - 177 The Capital of Bengal defitroyed by 1 ire - ibid 1639 1049 Ali Murdan promoted 178 Return of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid 1640 1050 Calamitous Hoods - 179 Buff furprified and retal en 180 An Ambaffador from Conflantinople - ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad diffiraguifies himfelf - 181 Death of the Vifier - ibid He leaves his Fortune to Prince Dara - 182 Prince of the Ufbecs flies	188 189
Dea h of the Mish-Rija indicated Peace with Perfix — 174 Death of Afril the Imperior's Preceptor — ideal Dara and Suja promoted 175 Suja made Governor of Bengal — 176 Excellent Government of the Imperor — 177 The Capital of Bengal defectory of the Imperor — 177 The Capital of Bengal defectory of the Mish Murdan promoted 178 Return of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid 1640 1050 Calamitous I loods — 179 Buff surprifed and retal en 180 An Ambaffador from Confiantinople — ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad diffinguishes himfelf — 181 Death of the Visier — ibid He leaves his I ortune to Prince Dara — 182 Death of the Usbees flies A D Hisp 1642 1052 Reflections — 1642 1053 An Accident — 1643 1053 An Accident — 1643 1053 An Accident — 1644 1054 Aurung zebe removed from the Decan — 1644 1054 Aurung zebe removed from the Decan — 1645 1055 Reflections of the Limperor — 1645 1055 Reflections of the Limperor — 1644 1054 Aurung zebe fent into Guzerat — 1645 1055 Reflections — 1644 1054 Aurung zebe fent into Guzerat — 1645 1055 Reflections — 1644 1054 Aurung zebe removed from the Decan — 1645 1055 Reflections — 1644 1054 Aurung zebe removed from the Decan — 1645 1055 Reflections — 1644 1054 Aurung zebe fent into Guzerat — 1645 1055 Reflections — 1644 1054 Aurung zebe removed from the Decan — 1645 1055 Reflections — 1644 1054 Aurung zebe removed from the Decan — 1645 1055 Reflections — 1644 1054 Aurung zebe removed from the Decan — 1645 1055 Reflections — 1644 1054 Aurung zebe removed from the Decan — 1645 1055 Reflections — 1644 1054 Aurung zebe fent into Guzerat — 1645 1055 Reflections — 1644 1054 Aurung zebe fent into Guzerat — 1645 1055 Reflections — 1644 1054 Aurung zebe fent into Guzerat — 1645 1055 Reflections — 1644 1054 Aurung zebe fent into Guzerat — 1645 1055 Reflections — 1644 1054 Aurung zebe fent into Guzerat — 1645 1055 Reflections — 1645 1055 Reflections — 1645 1055 Reflections — 1645 1055 Reflections — 1644 1054 Aurung zebe removed from the Decan — 1645 1055 Reflections — 1645 1055 Reflections — 1644	188 189
Perce with Perlia - 174 Death of Afril the I mperor's Preceptor - ibid Dara and Suja promoted 175 Suja made Governor of Bengal - 176 Excellent Government of the I mperor - 177 The Capital of Bengal deficions of the Ufbecs 1639 1049 Return of the Ambassidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Return of the Ottoman Emperor ibid 1640 1050 Calamitous I loods - 179 Bust sortine Morad distinguishes himself - 181 Death of the Visier - ibid He leaves his Fortune to Prince Dara - 182 Prince of the Usbecs files	188 189
Death of Afril the I imperor 'Preceptor' - ibid Death of Afril the I imperor 'Preceptor' - ibid Death of Afril the I imperor 'Ibid Death of Afril the I imperor ibid Excellent Government of the I imperor - 177 The Capital of Bengal defit of the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid Excurr of the Emperor Trives at Agra Applies to the public Business in Agra Applies to the public Business in Excurr of the Ufbecs Excellent Government of the Imperor in Encursion of the Ufbecs Excellent Government of the Imperor arrives at Agra Applies to the public Business in Excurr of the Ufbecs in Excurring in Excurri	188 189
Limperor arrives at Apra Applies to the public Buliness and Suja promoted 175 Suja made Governor of Hengal — 176 Excellent Government of the Imperor — 177 The Capital of Bengal defitoryed by I ire — ibid 1639 1049 Ali Murdan promoted 178 Return of the Ambiffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid 1640 1050 Calamitous Hoods — 179 Buff furprifed and retal en 180 An Ambaffador from Constantinople — ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad distinguishes himfelf — 181 Death of the Visier — ibid He leaves his Fortune to Prince Dara — 182 Prince Dara — 182 Limperor arrives at Apra Applies to the public Bulines in the Sudaplies and Death of Amar Singh — Rassines and Death of Amar Singh — Incursion of the Usbees and the Uscan — 1645 1055 Reslections of the Limperor arrives at Apra Applies to the public Bulines in the Sudaplies in the Sudaplies in the Usbees and Death of Amar Singh — Incursion of the Usbees and the Uscan — 1645 1055 Reslections of the Limperor arrives at Apra Applies to the public Bulines in the Sample in the Sudaplies in the Usbees in the Usbees and Death of Amar Singh — Incursion of the Usbees and the Usbees — 1644 1054 Auruing zebe removed from the Decan — 2055 Reslections of the Limperor — Ali Murdan Invades Bulines in the Usbees — 2056 Morad disgraced — 2056 Morad	189
Applies to the public Bu- finess Supramed Governor of Benyal - 176 Excellent Government of the Impero - 177 The Capital of Bengal de- fitroyed by I are - ibid 1639 1049 Ali Murdan promoted 178 Return of the Ambiffidor to the Ottomia Emperor ibid 1640 1050 Calamitous I loods - 179 Buff surprifed and retal en 180 An Ambaffador from Confiantinople - ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad diffinguifies himfelf - 181 Death of the Visier - ibid He leaves his I ortune to Prince Dara - 182 Prince of the Usbess flies
Suprained Governor of Benyal - 176 Excellent Government of the I impero - 177 The Capital of Benyal deferoyed by line - ibid 1639 1049 Ali Murdan promoted 178 Return of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid 1640 1050 Calamitous I loods - 179 Buff furprifed and retal en 180 An Ambaffador from Conflantinople - ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad diffinguifies himfelf - 181 Death of the Vifier - ibid He leaves his I ortune to Prince Dara - 182 Incursion of the Usbecs Rashines and Death of Amar Singh Incursion of the Usbecs 1644 1054 Aurung reberemoved from the Decan 1645 1055 Reflections of the Emperor Aurungzebe fent into Guzerat Sadulla made Visier - Ali Murdan Invades Budichshan Death and Chiracter of Noor-Jehan War with the Usbecs - War with the Usbecs - 1646 1056 Morad difgraced - 2 Prince of the Usbecs flies	190
Supr made Governor of Bengal - 176 Excellent Government of the I imperor - 177 The Capital of Bengal defitroyed by lare - ibid 1639 1049 Ali Murdan promoted 178 Return of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid 1640 1050 Calamitous I loods - 179 Buff furprifed and retal en 180 An Ambaffador from Conftantinople - ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad diffinguifies himfelf - 181 Death of the Vifier - ibid He leaves his I ortune to Prince Dara - 182 Prince of the Ufbecs flies	.,,-
Excellent Government of the I impero — — 177 The Capital of Bengal deferoyed by lire — — ibid 1639 1049 Ali Murdan promoted 178 Return of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid 1640 1050 Calamitous I loods — — 179 Buff furprifed and retal en 180 An Ambaffador from Confiantinople — — ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad diffinguifies himfelf — 181 Death of the Vifier — ibid He leaves his I ortune to Prince Dara — — 182 Prince of the Ufbecs files	bid
Amar Singh — Incursion of the Usbecs The Capital of Bengal defitroyed by live — ibid 1639 1049 Ali Murdan promoted 178 Return of the Ambassidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid 1640 1050 Calamitous I loods — 179 Bush surprised and retal en 180 An Ambassidor from Constantinople — ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad distinguishes himself — 181 Death of the Visier — ibid He leaves his I ortune to Prince Dara — 182 Prince of the Usbecs flies
The Capital of Bengal defroyed by live — ibid 1639 1049 Ali Murdan promoted 178 Return of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid 1640 1050 Calamitous I loods — 179 Buff furprifed and retal en 180 An Ambaffador from Conftantinople — ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad diffinguifies himfelf — 181 Death of the Vifier — ibid He leaves his I ortune to Prince Dara — 182 Prince Dara — 182 Incursion of the Usbecs 1644 1054 Aurung zebe removed from the Decan — Aurungzebe fent into Guzerat — Sadulla made Visier — Ali Murdan Invades Buduchshan — Ali Murdan Invades Buduchshan — War with the Usbecs — War with the Usbecs — 1646 1056 Morad disgraced — 3 Prince of the Usbecs flies	191
The Capital of Bengal defitroyed by line - ibid 1639 1049 Ah Murdan promoted 178 Return of the Ambaffidor to the Ottoman Emperor ibid 1640 1050 Calamitous I loods 179 Buff furprifed and retal en 180 An Ambaffador from Conftantinople - ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad diffinguishes himfelf - 181 Death of the Vifier - ibid He leaves his I ortune to Prince Dara - 182 Prince of the Ufbecs flies	llnd
ftroyed by lare - abid 1639 1049 Ali Murdan promoted 178 Return of the Ambassidor to the Ottoman Emperor abid 1640 1050 Calamitous I loods 179 Bush surprised and retal on 180 An Ambassidor from Constantinople abid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad distinguishes himself - 181 Death of the Visier - abid He leaves his I ortune to Prince Dara - 182 Prince of the Usbees slies
1639 1049 Ali Murdan promoted Return of the Ambassidar to the Ottoman Emperor ibid 1640 1050 Calamitous I loods 179 Bush surprised and retal en 180 An Ambassador from Constantinople ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad distinguishes himself - 181 Death of the Visier - ibid He leaves his I ortune to Prince Dara - 182 Prince of the Usbecs slies	192
Return of the Ambalisdor to the Ottoman Emperor shid 1640 1050 Calamitous I loods 179 Buff furprifed and retal en 180 An Ambaffador from Conftantinople shid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad diffinguishes himfelf - 181 Death of the Vifier - shid He leaves his I ortune to Prince Dara - 182 Prince of the Ufbecs flies	- , -
to the Ottoman Emperor ibid 1640 1050 Calamitous I loods 179 Buff furprifed and retal en 180 An Ambaffador from Conftantinople ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad diffinguishes himfelf - 181 Death of the Vifier - ibid He leaves his I ortune to Prince Dara - 182 Prince of the Ufbecs flies	192
Buff surprifed and retal en 180 An Ambassador from Constantinople - ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad distinguishes himself - 181 Death of the Visier - ibid He leaves his Fortune to Prince Dara - 182 Prince of the Usbees slies	- 7 #
Buft surprifed and retal en 180 An Ambassador from Constantinople ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad distinguishes himself 181 Death of the Visier - ibid He leaves his Fortune to Prince Dara 182 Prince Of the Usbecs slies	bidi
An Ambassador from Constantinople ibid 164t 1051 The Prince Morad distin- guishes himself 181 Death of the Visier - ibid He leaves his Fortune to Prince Dara 182 Prince of the Usbecs slies	194
Constantinople ibid 1641 1051 The Prince Morad distin- guishes himself 181 Death of the Visier - ibid He leaves his Fortune to Prince Dara 182 Prince of the Usbecs flies	-) 4
1641 1051 The Prince Morad distinguishes himself - 181 Death of the Visier - ibid He leaves his Fortune to Prince Dara - 182 Prince Of the Usbecs slies	pidi
Beath of the Visier - ibid He leaves his Fortune to Prince Dara - 182 Prince Dara - 182 Prince of the Usbecs flies
Death of the Visier - ibid He leaves his Fortune to Prince Dara - 182 Prince of the Usbecs flies	195
Prince Dara 182 Prince Dara 182 Prince of the Ufbecs flies	196
Prince Dara 182 Prince of the Usbecs flies	197
	-) ,
	ıbıdı
His Sons 184 Usbees Invade Balich -	361
Justice of the Emperor - ibid 1647 1057 Aurungzebe fent against	-30
1642 1052 Persian Invasion threatened 185 them	199
Prevented by the Death He comes to Action, de-	- 77 of Shave Seft 186 - feats the Usbees and Affairs at Court - ibid takes their Camp 200,	201
They are driven from Bu-
duchthan	1910
SHAW FEHAN They fubrit	20.
Emperor returns to La-
CHAP. IV. hore
Jealous of his Sons -	202
Reflections-Emperor arrives at Agra 1648 1058 Reflects at Delhi	203 1b1d
Institute at Count Insurface of the Promotions -
770 August Augus	ipiqi
Usbecs-Aus ungzebe semoved from Aurungzehe besieges it in	1010 204
the Decan-Sadulla Chan made V1-	1b16 204 1b16

206 Defcats A D 1646 Hig 1056 and his ministers. His subsistence a drawn, and he was reduced to great Sadulla, in the mean time, settled the same ballet. In the year 1646 he was recourt, and the emperor returned to Morad, in the mean time, wrote letters a trition to his father. He owned his erro expressed his grief. His friends solicited with his favour. He was permitted to concourt, and, by his prudent management foon regained the affections of his father, restored him to his dignities, and to the government.

Ulbect in tade Ba ment of Moultan When the prince of Balich was deferted by own arm), and obliged to take refuge in Peri his fon Abdul Aziz, who commanded a box of troops in another part of the province, thre hunself under the protection of the northern Ui The petry chieftains beyond the Oxun were induced, by promises of advantage to them felves, to join his small squadron; so that he soon found himself at the head of an army He how ever could not cover his intentions of invading the conquered dominions of his father, from the Mogul garrison of Balich, who sent advices of the approaching form to the emperor monarch issued orders to his son Aurungzebe to leave Guzerat, and to hasten to take the com mand of the army in the north The emperor himself marched to Cabul to sustain the opera tions of his fon, whilft Dara commanded another army in the environs of Lahore han, upon this occasion, shewed an instance of his generofity Two of the fons of the prince of together with some of his wives and daughters, had been taken prisoners in the war The fons, he raifed to the rank of nobles, and the

CONTENTS

A. D Hig Page	A.D Hig Pare
1649 1059 Defeats the Perflams 206	A. D. Fing Page 1657 1067 That City taken ibid
1650 1060 Ufbers apply for Aid - 207	Adil Shaw defeated and
1611 1061 Morad removed from the	fubmits 221 222
Decan flid	Plans concerted between
1652 1062 Aurungzebe befieges Can-	the Viller and Aurung
dahar m vain sol sog	zebe ibid
•	Emperor falls fick 222
	Dara afformes the Govern-
SHAW JEHAN	ment ibid
	His Violence 224
CHAP V	Emperor carried to Agra 225
CHAPV	Recovers-Favour f rDara #46
	1658 1068 Who carries all before him
Dara i sealousy of Aurumgrebs-His	at Court 1137 bad Success before Candabar-Rayed
to a Part of the Imperial Power	SHAW FEHAN
n i it for the Para Pro-	SHAW JEHAN Rebellion of the Rana-Rife and
Cherader of Junta-Death of the	CHAP VI
Pifer-War in Golonda-Exploits	CHAI VI of Mahommed the Son of Aurung
zele-lar and Reduction of Bija	Casic of the crul War-Character of
pou -Sichness of the Emperor-Too	Canfe of the cred War—Charatter of the Emperor's Son-Dara—Suja great molence of Dara-Emperer	-Assergashe-Morad-Suja takes reneves to Agra-Recevers-Dara
L. I. France Commerce of Lactor	the Field—Defeated by Softman the
is b b Favour-Carries all before	Son of Dara-Morad rebels in Gu-
bun at Court	xeral-Aurungxebe in the Decau-Marches to Brampour—Bettle of
A.D Hig Page	the Nirbidds— Preparations and 1652 1062 Dara jealousy of Au-	observacy of Dara-Opposes Anrungrebe $10	rungaebe Totally defeated near Agra
Hi unforcefiful Expedi- tion againft Candabar $11	—Refletions
H is folemnly appointed	- 10,121,21
Socieffor to the Empe-	A. D. Hig Page
rof ibid	1658 1068 Camfe of the civil War 228
A Turkuh embally 213	Views of the Emperor s
Maraja Rebela and 11 re	Sons $29
duced ibid	Character of Dara $30
1656 1066 Rife and Character of	Of Saja #31
_ Jumla #13	Of Aurungzebe 131
Fromotion $14	Of Morad Bad
Death and Character of	Supa takes the Field 233
the Viller 215 War in Golronda fluid	Opposed by Soliman Sheko 234
Mahommed the Son of	Saja furprifed in his Camp and defeated ihid
Aurungzebe takes Hy	and deleated field Aurungs be bears of his
drabad and defeats the	Father Elinefa 336
King of Golconda 217	Gains over Jumla 317
Returns to Brampour ibid	Marches from Aurunga-
1657 1067 War with Adil Shaw 118	bad #38
Deah and Character of	His Management of Mo-
Ali Murdan Ibid	rad 239
Expedition into Dijapour $19	Oppoled at the Nithelda 140
6 og of E1 er 120	Joined by Morad Bid
ŀ	[raqA

A D 1647 Hig 1057 turned to his post, he found his son in gagement with the Usbecs. The en vanced with redoubled violence, but Zit. now had resumed the command, stood his with great spirit and firmness, till he nine wounds. He fell, with loss of blook his lorse, and two of his sons covered him the Usbecs, and carried him between their to the rear.

defeats

Abdul Aziz, in the mean time, with ten fand l'artar horse fell in, sword in hand, The contest was f. Alı Murdan on the right and bloody The Tartars, proud of their na valour, despised the opposition of troops wh they deemed inferior to themselves, the Imrialists being chiefly composed of soldiers from t north and better disciplined than the Tartars war, stood their ground with great firmness an checked the confident bravery of the enemy All exhibited all the qualities of an able general, and valuant foldier he fometimes encouraged his froops by words, but oftener by example, and finding that the enemy charged in a deep column, he contracted and strengthened his line. The Usbeca were thrice repulsed, but defeat only ren dered them more desperate. In the fourth charge, the Imperialists were thrown into confusion, but they were rather borne down than defeated They were on the point of flying, but Aurung zêbe came in to their aid

the Uf

zêbe came in to their aid

The prince had been engaged in the center, where the action had not been so hot Finding how assairs went on the right he formed into a column and advanced on full speed on the slaw to receive him The shock was violent and bloody. A mighty shout arose on either side and men seemed to forget they were mortal

CONTENTS.

D Hig	ı	Page
	April 22 defeats the Ma-
_	raja	241
	Masculine Behaviour of	,
	the Maraja's Wafe -	242
	Aurung che remains at	· i t _k cin	243
	Perplexity of the Imperor	244
	Preparations of Dara -	ıbıd
	Who narches again Au-
	ran, zebe and Morad	245
	Charge given him by his Tather	\mathbf{b} idi Aurungrabe turns the rear of the Imperial Ar	_
	m Junci	216
	Daras Order of Batle
	Tunes +	247
		248
	The Principus -	219
	D - (1-, (1)	ibid
	Merada bravery -	250
	Dar by an Accident,
	nedelated	abid
	Resections	252

SHAW JLHAN CHAP. VII.

Reflections-Dira appears before his Tather-I's Flight to Delhi-The Army deferts Salm in Stel u-Shifte Char condemned to Death- Re frued-The confederate Princes appeer before Agra-Aurungzebe Writes to his Father-Conference between him and the Princess Je I anara—His artful Condua—By a Stratagem feizes the Citadel and the Emperor----Deceives Morad----Marches with him in purfuit of Dara -Seifes and imprisons Morad-Purfues Dara -- Mounts the Throne at Delhi-Restellions on his Condull -The news of his Accession brought to Shaw Jehan-Character of that Prince

A. D Hig Page
1658 1068 Reflictions - 254
Dara appears before his Father - 255

A D Hig 1 150 1658 1008 The to Delhi 755, 76 Railes Lottes ahid Auruagreba corrupts Army of Prince 50 1man mid Shrifta Chan condemned te Deith Refere 200 The Princes appear beւն ժւ fore Agra-Aurungzebe fends to las Luher 2Ú I The Conference of the Princels Johanna and Aurungzehe - 202, 253 Imperor Writes to Dira His I etter in ercep d -Aurungzehr Schem's to ferre the 1 mperor ibid Show Jehan taken Prifener 266 He offers the Empire to the Son of Authorace -Avrungache Writes to the 218 I nip-ror Deceives Morad 207 Prepares to purfue Dar t 270 Counter plot of Morad ri fourries ibid Morad deceived and to z ed by Aurungzebe -2~2 Sent Priforer to Agra -Aurungzebe advances to Dellu 274 Dara Thes to Lahore Aurungzebe moun - le Throne at Della 27-Reflections on the Conduct and Rufe of Atrungzebe - - 2-, Intelligence CONCLER DE his Accellion 250 How received by Shaw Ichan pidi Reflections on the Reign and Character of Shaw Tchan - - - 282, 283

AURUNGZEBE,

CHAP I.

Reflections—-Misfortunes of Soliman Sheko—His Flight to Sei magui — Distress, Irresolution and Flight of Dara A D 1647 Hig 1057 their rout with confusion, desolation, and Express upon express was sent to Cabul emperor, and he forthwith detached to thousand horse, under the prince Morad, to pel the enemy. The Usbecs, weakened it late bloody battle with Aurungzebe, were it condition to face Morad. They fled before prince beyond the limits of the province, and an undisturbed conquest to the family Timur.

They lub-

Nidder Mahommed, who left the court of Pc sia upon advice of the invasion under his son, re ceived on the way the news of the unfortunate battle, in which all his hopes were blafted. contend longer in arms against Shaw Jehan was impossible he therefore had recourse to submis He fent a letter to Aurung fion and intreaty zêbe "To the emperor, said he, "I dare But you, descended from the victo rious line of fovereigns, who support, with your fword, their title to command the world, may find an opportunity of presenting the request of Mahommed among those of his meanest subjects, and he who confers happiness on mankind, will relent at the misfortunes of an exiled prince Inform him, that Nidder Mahommed wishes to be numbered among the fervants of the King of kings, and waits melancholy on the fairts of his dominions to receive his answer " Aurungzêbe fent the letter to his father The emperor, moved by prudence as much as by pity for Ma hommed, ordered his fon to reinstate that prince in his fovereignty over his former dominions was difficult to defend fuch a diffant frontier against the incursions of the Usbecs beyond the Oxus, and he made a ment of his policy, by restoring the provinces of Balich and Buduchshan to Mahommed, upon condition of receiving a fmall

CONTENTS

Dara—He quit the Sutulez—the Bas—and Labort—Assungable returns—Preparation and March of Suja—Approach of Assungable—The Battle of King was—Defost and Fight of Suja—Unaccountable Conduct of the Maraya—His Flight—Aurangable arroves at Agra—Il rite to bu Faiber

		,	D
A, D			285
1658	1008	Reflections Soliman deferted by his	203
		Army $86 $87 Takes refuge in Serina-	200
		gur	189
		Irrefolution of Dara	200
		H retreats from the Bes
		Hefitates about giving	-,- Rattle and Flora from Lahore	191
		Several Nobles fubrut to	•
		Aurungzebe	293
		Jumla arrives at Court	294
		Anrungzebe marches to Monhan	195
		Caule of his Return	296
		Preparations of Supa	297
1659	1069	Preparations of Aurung
-,		gebe	198
		Sep on full March	ibid
		Fortifice his Camp	199
		Aurungzebe offere Battle	300 ibid
		The B tile begins Treachery f the Maraja	101
		Refolution of Sura and	201
		f Aurungzebe who obtains the Victory	Ъď
		Soja purfeed by Mahoen-
		med.	104
		Aurungzebe : Speech to	• his Nobles	305
		A false Report carried to
		Agra	Гb:d
		Aurangzebe arrives in that City	106

AURUNGZEBE

CHAP II

Dara's Flight to Bicker—He croffer it Def t—Gains the Governor of Guizerat—Marcles toward Agra—

Fortsfies boufelf at Aguere-	_n
cerved Attacked And totall feated by Aurunguebe-Hu mi
of Malantuna Delay at	AREUTE TO
of Misfertumes—Diffress in the fart—Arrival at Tatta—Th	D
Jars-Arrival at Talla-16	rett.
hunfelf under the Protection of	\mathcal{J}^{t}
bos Death of the Sultans	Dan betrayed-Garried with Ign	(Mary through Delbi-Cor ned at C	bar
rabad—Aff finated—Reflections
AD Hig	Page
1659 1069 Dars flies to Bicker	301
M ditates to retire to
Perfia	309
But changes his Courfe to Tatta	: Бы
Croffee the Defart and	ши
arrives at Guzerat	311
Gains over the Governor	ibid
Raifes an Army	311
Marche toward Agra	313
Turn toward the Domi-
mons of the Maraja Who is gained over by	ibid
Anrungsebe and defert
Dera 314	. 124
Dara fortifies himfelf at	-
Ajmere	316
Aurungzebe offers Battle	ibid
His Strategem to deceive Dara fucceeds against that-Prince, who is totally defeated as a
The Misfortunes of Dara	111
The Misfortunes of Dara	122
THE TO THE DESIGN	3*3
His great Diffrefs	324
Prepares to fly to Persia, but throws himself on
Jihon Chan June 21st	110
• • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • • •	116
The Sultana dies	ibid
He is betrayed by Jihon
and delivered up to the	_ Enemy Carried with Ignominy	312
through Delhi	319
Confined in a pergibbour	3-7
ing Village	330
The Traiter Jihon flain
by the People	331
Disturbances at Delhi hasten the Murder of Dara who is affaffinated	111.
	33-7

Reflections on his Death 334 AURUNG A D if 8 His it is. rad, by an act of disobedience had qui north Aurungzebe, by his address, was ted to leave it, and Suja, by his friends at wrought so much upon the emperor, that removed from Cabul to the government of gal

P fdes st

The emperor, ever fond of feltivals, four opportunity of exhibiting his generofity and pitality, upon finishing the repairs of the city Seven hundred and fifty thousand pou had been laid out on the Imperial palace, in wh the emperor mounted the throne of his ancello on the first of April of the year 1648 bility paid their compliments with magnificent pro fents, and their ladies waited with gifts of value upon the most favoured of the emperor's wives During nine days the whole city, as well as the court, were entertained at the public expence ficent dreffes were distributed among the great offi cers and feveral new Omrahs, among whom were the two fons of prince Dara, were created Hamid, one of the disciples of the great Abul Fazil, pre fented, upon the occasion to the emperor, 2 history of the first ten years of his reign, and received a princely present

Promo tions

3

The emperor remained at Delhi nine months, and retuined to Lahore in the end of December the fame year Soon after his arrival in that latter city, he rassed the wiser to the rank of seven thousand, and gratified him, at the same time, with the government of Behår which he was permitted to hold by deputy The abilities of this lord in his high deportment, and, above all his unintriguing disposition if the expersion may he used, recommended him in the highest degree to his master. He never sought as favour of the emperor, and he conferred none without his permission. His assidiuty to please consisted.

AURUNGZEBE

CHAP III

Was against Suja—He is driven from Mongeer- And Raja-Mahil---The Prince Mahonimed deferts to Suja—A Mutiny in the Army— Quelled by the Visier-Battle of Tanda—Artifice of Aurungzebe-Mahommed leaves Suja-His Im prisonment and Charatter ---- Suja driven from Bengal---His Flight from the Mountains of Tippera-Arrival at Arracan—Perfidy, Avarice, and Cruelty of the Raja-Misfortunes —Resolution — Bravery - — And Murder of Suja—Deplorable Fate of his Family—Reflections.

A.D. Hig		Page
1659 1069	Reflections	336
•	Preparations of Suja -	337
	Jumla turns his Rear -	ıbıd
	Attacks him in his Lines	s 338
	Suja Retreats	339
	The Prince Mahomme
	goes over to Suja -	340
`	Jumla perplexed -	- ıbıd
	Quells a Mutiny in the	he
	Army - 341, 34
	Defeats Suja	343
	Artifice of Aurungze	be to feparate Mahomm	ed
	from Suja	bıdı
	He is dismissed by th
	Prince, seized and in
	prisoned	ıbıd
1660 1070	Suja driven from Benga
		348
	Takes Refuge in Arraca	n ibid
	His uncommon Distre	ſs 349,
		350
•	Ordered to leave Arraca
	His Refolution, Braves Misfortunes and Mu
		1, 352
	Deplorable Fate of his I	amily	353
	Reflections	ıbıd

AURUNGZEBE.

CHAP IV.

Prudent Administration of Aurungzebe—Observations on his Condu3— His Behaviour towards his second Son-Soliman Sheko betrayed by the Raja of Sermagur—He flies—Is taken-Brought to Delhi-And imprisoned—An Embassy from Persia -Shaw Allum declared Heir Apparent—A Famine—Wife and bumane Conduct of the Emperor-War the Decan-Aurungzebe falls sick-Distractions at Delhi-Intrigues of Shaw Allum-Recovery of Emperor-----He demands Daughter of Dava-And the Imperial Jewels from Shaw Jehan-But is refused—His Art to appeale his Father—Promotions.

A. D	Hıg	Page
1660	1070	Reflections 355
	•	Prudent Administration of Aurungzebe ibid Observations on his Conduct 357
		Artful Conduct of his fc-cond Son suspected - 358
T66T	TOTE	Expedient against Soliman 359
1001	10/1
		Brought before the Em-
	-
		peror 361
		Embassies from Persia and Tartary 362
		Shaw Allum declared Heir of the Empire ibid
		A dreadful Famine - 363 Wisdom and Humanity of
		Aurungzebe 364
		A War on the Coast of Malabar - • - 365
1662	1072	The Maraja sent to reinforce the Army - 366
1663	1073	His Plot to Assassinate
		the Captain General - 367, ı		368
		1664

aof AD

1649

Hir

1059

the year, detached fifty thousand of his under the visier to cover Candahar. The y Aurungzebe joined that minister with the i of stationed in his province of Moultan, but he they arrived, the city was surrendered to the fians by capitulation. Shaw Abas left ren th fand musqueteers to garrison the place, and treated with the rest of his army.

Aurung
a be be tieges it in wain.

Aurungzêbe and Sadulla invested the place: the March of 1649 The flege continued mor than three months before a practicable breach was made, and the Imperialiffs, in a general af fault, were repulled with great lofs The prince, however, did not raise the siege he continued his approaches, but he made very little progress toward taking of the place Winter was now approaching, and the weather began to be already very fevere in that high country There was a great scarcity of forage and provisions, and the warlike flores were exhausted The emperor, being apprized of the state of his army, ordered the fiege to be raifed, and Aurungzebe, without laurels, returned toward Lahore.

Defeats the P r Lane.

Nizier Ali, the Persian governor of Candahar and Murtizi who commanded an army of obfervation on the frontiers of that province, having joined their forces, fell on the rear of the Imperialiss in their retreat Aurungzebe be haved upon the occasion, with his usual spirit and conduct He fell upon the affailants in the flank, with a column of cavalry, which he had filed off from his front, when he first observed the enemy the Persians were repulsed with considerable flaughter Though defeated, they were not how ever intimidated Being reinforced from Canda har, they hovered round the Imperial army, and after a few days, formed their line and offered battle Aurungzêbe did not decline to come to achon

D Hig Page	A.D Hig Pag
664 1074 Aurungzebe falls fick field
Confermation of the Peo-	Strange Conduct and ple 369
Shaw Allum intrigues for	Flight of Sewajl 393 39 The Maraja differented libit
the Throne ibed	Sharffa made Governor
Hamanan His Demanda	Takes the Hand Sindiep 39
Herecovers—His Demands	Gams over the Portuguese ihi
on his imprifored Fa	Invades Chittagong 39
ther 378, 373	Capital of Chittagong
Shaw Allum fent to the	taken and the Province
Decan 374	reduced 39
And Mohabet t Guserat 375
	AURUNGZEBE
4  P  11 0 7 E P E
AURUNGZEBE	O LI A D VII
,	CHAP VI
~  A D T
CHAP V	Origin of the Quarrel with Perfer-
	Condust of Show Abas - Aurung
D 6.1 F. B 6	zebe endeavours to appeale bim Recovery of the Emperor—Pregress to Cashmire—Disturbances in Gu-	He prepares for War-Writes of zerat - Conquest of Affam Death	Letter to the Visiar-IV buch is in and Charaster of Meer Jumla-In	tercepted—The Emperor suspetts th
	Perfian Nobles-A Proclamation-
furred on of Fakers-Quelled-An	A Martin Alamana Cont
unreer/al Peace—Death of the Prince	A Mafacre threatened—Conflerna
Mahamed—War with Sewaji—	tion at Delbi-The Princess Jeho
Death of the Emperor Shaw Jehan	nara arrives from Agra to appeal
-Anadotes of his private Life-	the Perfeat The Vifter exculpate.
C (C (hamself-The Perfean Nobility re
Gruf of Assunguebe-Strange Con-	and the second second data and Flight of Seways-The	ceroed mie Faveur-March of the Maraja dijeentented-War agamft	Emperor—Death and Charatter of
Arracan—Chitiagong reduced.	Shaw Alas—Peace with Perfia-Revolt of the Presce Show Allen
	—He returns to bu Duty—IVas
A D Hig Page	with the Afgant-Magnificent Re-
1664 1074 Recovery of the Emperor 377	was the Myani Magnicent Re-
His Progress to Cath-	ception of the King of Bucharia.
mu 378, 379
1665 1075 Difta bances in Guzerat	A.D Hig
quilled3$0	1000 1070 The Origin of the Quarrel
Invition of the Kingdom	_with Perfer 199 420 401
of Affin 381 382	The Emperor endeavours
Retreat Death and Cha	in Vain to appears Shaw
rader f Jumla 383 384	Abas 402, 403
Infarredien of Pakiers	Opter feiled ibld
quelled 385 386	A Letter intercepted
A univerfal Peace bld	which occasions, Sep-
Death of the Prince Man	tember 9 a general
hommed 32 328	Consternation at Delhi 404
Wr with Sewif ibid	404
1666 10 6 De th of Shaw J han 389	Advice of the Morel
Anchotes of his private	lords in Favour of the
Lf. 390 391	Perfun Nobles who

A D. 1652. Hig 1662 them, in his lifetime, to the authority of then clder brother Having ordered all the nobles to attend the prefence, he descended from his throne, took Dara by the hand, and placed him under the Imperial canopy, commanding the lord of the requelts to read aloud an edict, changing the name of Dara into that of Shaw Belind Abbal, or The Emperor of exalted Forfaid Shaw Jehan, " your " Behold. TUNE future prince! Upon him we leave the support of the reputation and honour of the family of Timur" Nor was this merely a ceremony devolved on Dara a part of the Imperial power. and made an allowance of more than two millions a year, for the expences of his household

A Torkith embally

Soon after this folemn appointment of Dara to the fuccession. Shaw Jehan made a progress of pleafure to the city of Aimere During his refidence in that place, Zulfikar Aga the Turkish ambassador, arrived from Buffora at Surat He was received with the usual honours, and escorted by a party of the Imperial cavalry to court. The presents which he brought to the emperor were rather curious and rare, than valuable. He was treat ed with the highest distinction. a table was kept for him at the public expence, and he was gratified with a confiderable present in money for his own private use. He remained for some months in Hindoftan, and Caim Beg, an Omrah of diffinction returned with him to Constantinople on the part of the emperor

The Maraja, who owed his throne to an Im inceed perial decision against his elder brother the unstructed the gratitude which he owed to Shaw Jehan He stopt the payment of the stipulated tribute, and began to fortify the strong city of Chusor The emperor detached thirty thousand horse, under

Sadulla

CONTENTS.

A. D	Hig	l'age
1666	1076	are reconciled with the
	•	Emperor 406, 407, 408
		Infolence of Amin Chan 409 Aurungzehe takes the Tield ibid
		Death and Character of 51 an Abas 410
		Peace with Persia 411
1667	1077	War in Bijapour - ibid
1668	10:3	Deligne of the Prince Al-
	•	lum to Rebel 412
		Pursues Dilere 413
		Emperor alarmed - ibid
		Prince drops his Deligns 414
		Dilere rewarded shid Rebellion of the Afgans
		quaffied - 415, 416, 417
1660	1079	A general Peace - 418
•	.,	Magnificent Reception of the King of Bucharia ibid
		-

AURUNGZEBE.

CHAP. VII.

Observations—Education of Lasiern Princes—Genius of Aururgzele—His Attention to Justice—Contemps of Perp.—Austerity—Clemency.—

Knowledge— Pullic Buildings— Lirouragement to Letters—Charity —Skil in War—Learning—Manly Exercises—Centines ce—Accessibleness —Armiser ents—Ceremonics of Receptur—Creation of Nobles—Busiress of the Morning—Noon—And Lanning—Observations.

				מתריג
Observations	-	-	•	420
Unfavourable F	ducati	lo re	I aftern	. •
Princes -	-	-	•	421
Larly Genius of	Aurun	gzebe	-	428
His Attention to			-	bidi
Contemp, of Por	np arc	l Hatte	ry -	423
Affecte Plainness				abid
His Aufferity an	d Lor	c of Jul	hice -	;2;
His Clemency	-	•	-	bidi
Knowledge of A		-	•	425
Public Buildings	~	-	-	pidi
Incouragement (• •	126
51 ill and Courag	e in V	ar—L	earning	427
Skill in the manl	y I xci	reises	•	ibid
Chaftity -	•	-	-	8
Accessiblencis to				-1d
His mode of reco	iving:	and cre	iting the	:
Nobles -	-	-	422	430
The Bulinels of	the	Mornin	g, Nooi	1
and I vening	-	-		431
Obtervation	-	-	-	pidi

APPENDIX.

	435	A Cutwal's Firman A Commission for a Carkun, or Chief of a District A Commission for a Croric	443 445 446
A Firman granting Lands to a Ze- mindar	440	A Commission for a Potadar, or Trea- furer of a District GLOSSARY to the Appendix -

A D 1656. Hig 10.6. refractory prince to reason by sorce The emperor, jealous of his authority, gave permission for the march of an army into the dominions of Cut tub Mahommed, the eldest son of Aurungzebe, commanded in this expedition, a brave, an obstunate, and a haughty prince, not to be swayed from his purpose either by argument or fear

Mahom med the fon of Au runggebe

Mahommed, at the head of twenty thousand horse, entered suddenly the dominions of Cuttub, and that prince, expeding nothing lefs than hof tilities, was totally unprepared for war He fent messengers to the camp of the Imperialist, and paid down the arrears of the tribute. He, at the fame time, releafed Amin the fon of Jumla, and endeavoured to footh Mahommed with rich pre-This however, was not the fole object of the expedition of the Imperialifts. The fortune of Junia was full in the hands of Cuttub restitution was demanded, and the latter in vain objected that the accounts between him and Jum la were not fettled, and therefore, that till they were adjusted, he could form no judgment of the fum which ought to be paid Mahommed continu ed obstinate and advanced to the gates of Hy drabad. When things appeared ready to come to extremities a few chells of money and fome calkets of jewels were delivered by Cuttub, 28 the whole wealth of Jumla Amin made greater claims in the name of his father, and the prince, offended at the prevarications of Cuttub, ordered him to come out of the city to do him homage, as the grandfon of his emperor and lord

Hy

The pride of Cuttub was still greater than his avarice. His mind revolted against the very idea of homage, and his rage overcame his prudence. Mahommed entered Hydrabâd Death and con fusion filled every street, and the city was submit ted to the ravages of sire and sword. The spoil

A D 1657 11 g 1067

dignified with the honours of fix thouland horse Jumla, who had hitherto remained with Aurung zebe at Brampour, charged himfelf with the let ters of that prince to his father His fon Amin attended him to court, and both were received with diffinguished marks of kindness and esteem His knowledge and abilities recommended Jumla, in a high degree | The place of visier was vacant by the death of Sadulla, and notwithstanding the remonstrances of Dara who was averse to Jumla on account of his attachment to Aurungzêbe, that lord was invested with the highest office in The avarice of the emperor joined the compare iffue, in this promotion, with the merit of Jumla. When he received the feals, the prefents which he made amounted to more than fixty thousand pounds of our money

War with Ad I Shaw

The emperor, foon after the promotion of Jum la. tool a tour of pleasure toward the north Having hunted for fome time in the forests on the banks of the Ganges, he returned to Agra, and, upon his arrival, received intelligence of the death of Adıl king of Buapour The principal officers at the court of Adil without asking per mission of the emperor, raised the son of the de ceased to the throne. This conduct was highly refented by Shaw Jehan, who confidered the dominions of Buapour as an appendage of the em The expedient upon which he fell was, in fome measure, the source of his missortunes The new visier was ordered with twenty thousand horse into Buapour, to depose the son of Adil. till he should make his submissions in the Im perial presence. Amin, who was his father s de puty in his high office, remained at court to carry on the bufiness of that department

In the month of November of the year 1656 ted Alı Murdan, the nominal captain general of

٨

DISSERTATION

CONCIRNING IN

ORIGIN AND NATURE OF DESPOTISM

IN

IT INDOSTAN

TOVIRNMENT derives its form from acci-The chdent, its spirit and genius from the inheient man-mite and ners of the people. The languor occasioned by dia the hot climate of India, inclines the natives to indolence and case; and he thinks the evils of desposism less severe than the labour of being free. Tranquillity is the chief object of his defires. happiness consists in a mere absence of misery; and oppression must degenerate into a folly, which defeats its own ends before he calls it by the name of injustice. These phlegmatic sentiments the Indian carries into his future flate. He thinks it a mode of being, in which passion is lost, and evcry faculty of the foul suspended, except the consciousness of existence.

Other motives of passive obedience join issue favourable with the love of ease. The sun, which enervates to despohis body, produces for him, in a manner spontaneoully, the various fruits of the earth. He Yol. III. finds

A D 1657 11 g 1067 too much attached to the interests of the prince to avail hunfelf of his modesty, and though Jumla bore the name of commander in chief, the orders of Aurungzebe were only issued and obey ed The greatest harmony subsisted between them, for they reckoned this present expedition as a fortunate presude to their future designs

Slege of Rider

The rapid march of the Imperialilis discon certed the measures of Ali He had collected an army, but it was too fmall and the troops too raw to risque the fortune of the field He threw a numerous garrison into Bider, which is one of the strongest places in Hindostan With a body of cavalry he himself haraffed the enemy, leaving the command at Bider to Jan Juli, who had been thurty years governor of Aurungzebe arriving that important fortress before Bider, reconnoitred it with great attention and care He forefaw the difficulty which would attend a fiege, and he endeavoured by bribes and large promises, to corrupt the fidelity of That old officer rejected his proposals with indignation and difdain, and the prince, de sparring of success by intrigue, prepared to ensure it by force he accordingly made his approaches to Bider

elty

On the twenty seventh day of the siege, a mine being sprung a practicable breach was made in the first wall. Aurungzebe, wishing to make a lodgment within the wall, ordered an assault. It happened that one of the principal magazines of the place was under a great bastion in the second wall, opposite to the breach. The besieged having expended all their granadoes and ammunition in repelling the attack, this magazine was thrown open, that they might supply themselves with more. A rocket by accident fell near the door of the magazine, upon some powder that had been

finds fubfiftence without much toil, he requires little covering but the shade The chill blaft of winter is unknown, the feafons are only marked by an arbitrary number of nights and days perty being in some measure unnecessary, he comes of little value; and men fubmit, without refiftance, to violations of right, which may harr but cannot deflior them Their religious infti tutions incline them to peace and fubruffion. vulgar live with the aufterity of philosophers, as well as with the abilinence of devotees themselves to the commission of crimes, they re fent no injuries from others, and their, low diet cools their temper to a degree which baffion can not inflame

Encourage

The fertility of the foil, which in other king doms conflitutes the great prosperity of the na tives, was a fource of misfortune to the Indians Notwithstanding their abstinence and indolence, they were in some degree industrious, and, in want of but few things themselves, their own arts, and the natural productions of their country, rendered them opulent Wealth accumulated, in the progress of time upon their hands, and they became objects of depredation to the fierce nations of the The facility of incurion, among northern Asia a peaceable and harmless race of men, encourag The victors, luftead of carrying ed conquest the spoil into their native country, fat down where it had been found, and added the mini firation of the conquered to the other enjoyments of wealth

Af will the fit f flatery Asia, the seat of the greatest empires, has been always the nurse of the most abject slaves. The mountains of Persia have not been able to stop the progress of the tide of despotsin, neither has it been frozen in its course through the plains of the northern Lutury, by the chill air

THE HISTORY OF HINDOSTAN

A D 1/57 1i g 10/7 and fub mits

Filburga was large and well fortified The garrison was numerous, and made frequent fallies They at length iffued forth with their whole force, came to battle, and were driven back into the city with great flaughter Thefe repeated efforts weak ened those within, but one of the generals of young Adil, who commanded a body of horse, was very active in haraffing from without, the Imperial army He cut off their convoys, and a fearcity prevailed in their camp Aurungzebe, however was not to be driven from his deligns He carried on the fiege with unabating diligence, and having made a practicable breach in the walls, he took kalburga by affault on the eleventh of June, 1657 Adil, led by his minister Ali, threw himfelf at the feet of the conqueror tribute of Bijapour was fixed at one million eight hundred and feventy five thousand pounds, and a great fum toward defraying the expence of the war, was paid down by Adil He, at the fame time, was obliged to give up his strongest forts, and to settle estates upon some of the adherents of Aurungzebe That prince having changed the name of the city of Bider to that of Zifferabad, or the City of Victory, returned in triumph to Bram pour, the feat of his government

Jumla, the visier of the empire, remained in the army during the war against Bijapour After the taking of Bider, the name of Aurung sche appeared first in the commission for commanding the aimy. The attachment and graticle of Jumla to that prince, induced him to quest the emperor to confer upon him the hour as well as the power in the expedition. The assure besides was favourable to their concerted as of ambition. Shaw Jehan was now become d, and his excesses in venery had weakened of the North. But though despotism governs Afia, it appears in different countries under vari-The Arabs of the defectale is polfefs liberty, on account of the fleriby, of Independent of revolution and change, they fee, with unconcern, couples felling and They remain unconquered by rifing around arms, b. luxury, by corruption, they alter not then language, they adhere to their cultoms and mais ners, they retain their dref. Their whole property confills of flocks and herds, of their tents and arms. They annually make a finall and voluntary prefent to the chief of their blood. They revolt against oppression, and they are tree by necessity, which they mill the for choice. When men are obliged to wander for subfillence, despotism knows not where to find its flaves.

The Tartar, though a wanderer like the Arab, Nature of was never equally free. A violent anifocracy always prevailed in the country of the former, except in a few fhort periods, when the fortune of one established a transient despotism over the There man is aimed against man, chief against chief, and tribe against tribe. Wai is no longer a particular protession, but the constant occupation of all. Men are more afraid of men in the folitudes of Tartery, than of beafts of prey The traveller moves with great circumfpection, and hears an chemy in every blaft of When he fees a tract in the fand, he crosses it, and begins to draw his Iword. the barrenness of the country has prevented the growth or introduction of luxury, avarice prevails; and he that has the least to lose is the most independent, where lite is invariably risqued for a tilfling spoil. Robbery acquires the more honourable name of Conquest, and the assassin is dignified with the title of Wairioi.

A D 1547 His 1567 dent which might occasion a suspension of go An edict had some time before been issued, bearing that the fignet of Dara should be confidered as equally valid with that of the em peror, through all the dominions of the house of The prince, however, till Shaw Jehan fell ill, made no use of this extraordinary power When his father became infenfible, Dara mounted the throne. Warm, vehement, and precipitate, he acted the fovereign with too much violence. He issued out a public order, that no person whatever should presume, under pain of death, to hold any correspondence with his brothers, upon the prefent posture of affairs The agents of Aurungzebe and Morad at court, were feized, with their papers, and imprisoned in their hands, on account of the princes, was locked up, and, in thort, the whole conduct of Dara betrayed the most violent suspicions of the defigns of his brothers

The fuspension of the visier was among Dara s first acts of power He suspected his sidelity, as being taifed to his office by the influence of Au rungzebe An Indian prince, by the title of Rai Raian was made temporary visier, for the commissions given by Dara were limited expressly to the time of the emperor s illness The prince, in the mean time, ordered all the nobles into the hall of presence He explained to them, with unfergned tears, the hopeless condition of the emperor He hinted the ambition of his bro thers, and the dangers which would arise to the empire from a civil war " The emperor, faid ie, " more from an idea of justice, than from ny fuperior affection to me, has appointed me s fuccessor in the throne, and I find in my on mind, no inclination to relinquish what eaven and my father have thrown into my hands. and Afgan ariflo cracies

In the mountains which separate Persia from India, the nature and face of the country have formed a different species of society Every val ley contains a community subject to a prince, whole despotsim is tempered, by an idea establish ed among his people, that he is the chief of their blood, as well as their fovereign They obey him without reluctance, as they derive credit to their family from his greatness They attend him in his wars, with the attachment which children have for a parent, and his government, though fevere partakes more of the rigid discipline of a general than of the caprice of a despot as the face of their country, and fierce and wild as the storms which cover their mountains, they love incursion and depredation, and delight in plunder and in battle. United firmly to their friends in war, to their enemies faithless and cruel They place justice in force, and conceal treachery under the name of address Such are the Afgans or Patans, who conquered India, and held it for ages

D spot for of the Pa tan dale

The despotsim which the Patans established in their conquells partook of the violence of their national character at home Their government oppressive through pride, and tyrannical from passion rather than from avarice. Reinforc ed by fuccessive migrations from the mountains of Afganistan, they retained their native spirit in the midst of the luxuries of India monarch became voluptuous and degenerate, they supplied his place with some hardy chieftain from the north, who communicated his own vigour to the great machine of the state. The em pire was supported by a succession of abilities. rather than by a hereditary fuccession of princes . and it was he countrymen, and not the posterity

of

A D 1658, Hig 1068, enable me to pais my days in ease, and in the certife of prayer and constant devotion? More though secretly overjoyed at his resolution, massome sight attempts to dissuade him Aurung zebe was determined. His brother yielded to himportunity and the crafty prince prepared so a journey which he never intended to make.

Prepares to purfue Dara

Whilft this farce was acting at Agra, advices arrived that Dara had collected a confiderable Officers of distinction crowded to force at Delhi the prince every day from the distant provinces Aurungzêbe pretended to be alarmed vised his brother to march in person to finish the That prince, who was fond of action, prepared for the field, but he wanted money old emperor had concealed part of the Imperial treasure. Aurungzebe had secreted the rest army of Morad had not been paid for two months, The prince called and they began to murmur together all the bankers of Agra He offered to mortgage part of the revenue, for an immedi ate loan; but they refused to give him credit He was enraged beyond measure, and he prepared when his brother advised him to use force against an act of injustice, and promised to dif charge the arrears due to the army out of his own private fortune. Morâd acceded to the propolal without observing its fatal tendency rungzêbe, by this expedient, became at once popular in the army and in the city

Counter plot of Morad. The designs of Aurungzebe were now too pal pable not to be perceived. The friends of Morâd had long seen through his deceit, and the prince himself though not suspicious, was now vinced that he covered ambition under the mask of sanctity. The preparations for Mecca had been converted into preparations for the field. He told his brother, that he still stood in need of his advice.

of the first conquerors, who continued the dominion of the Patâns over India

The conquest of India by the family of Timui, for that proceeded from the abilities of one man, and Moguls not from the effort of a nation. Baber himself. was a stranger in the country in which he reigned, before he penetrated beyond the Indus. His troops confisted of foldiers of fortune, from various countries; his officers were men who owed their rank to merit, not to fuccession. religion of Mahommed, which they in common professed, and their obedience to one leader, were the only ties which united the conquerois upon their arrival, and they were foon distipated in the extensive dominions which their arms fubdued. The character of the prince went down on the current of government; and the mild disposition of his successors contributed to confirm the humane despotism which he had intioduced into his conquests.

A continued influx of strangers from the Cause of northern Asia, became necessary for the support that disference of princes who professed a different faith with their subjects, in the vast empire of India. The army was recruited with soldiers from different nations, the court was occupied by nobles from various kingdoms. The latter were followers of the Mahommedan religion. In the regulations and spirit of the Coran, they lost their primary and characteristical ideas upon government; and the whole system was formed and enlivened by the limited principles which Mahommed promulgated in the desarts of Arabia.

The faith of Mahommed is peculiarly calculated on their ed for despotism; and it is one of the greatest religion causes which must fix for ever the duration of that species of government in the East. The legislator furnishes a proof of this position in his

A D TKCR. Hie 1005

him an invitation to come to his tent, to fee i beautiful women, whom he had collected for amusement. Their performances in finging, dancing and in playing upon various instrume of mulic, were, he faid, beyond any thing et feen in Hindostan He enlarged upon their grac their beauty, the elegant symmetry of their limb The mind of Morad, who was naturally a grea lover of pleasure, was inflamed at the description and, contrary to the advice of all his friends, he went to his brother a quarter On the arrival of the emperor, as Aurungzebe affected to call his brother, he was received by the young ladies in an inner tent. They were handsome beyond de feription, and the voluptuous prince was firuck with a pleasing assonishment at their chaims

and ferzed

An elegant entertainment was in the mean time ferved up to the found of vocal and inflrumental Morad was elevated, and called for wine of Shiraz. The ladies fat round him in a circle, and Aurungzêbe, throwing off his usual austerity, began to partake of the wine Morad in a short time became intoxicated, and his brother instead of wine, imposed upon him bumpers of arrack. He at length fell afleep on a fopha, in the arms of one of the ladies Aurungzebe had, in the mean time given orders to some of his officers, to entertain the lords who attended Morad in the Even his body guard fame voluptuous manner were intoxicated with wine, fo that the unfortu nate prince was left without defence

by Aurungrebe

Aurungzêbe gave orders to Ziffer Jung and three other lords, to enter the tent and to bind his brother The lady retired upon their coming, and they advanced to the lopha on which he lay His fword and dagger had been already removed by the care of Aurun, zene and they began fofuly to bind his hands Morad started up at this

the mind. Habit makes the warm bath a luxury of a bewitching Lind The women foend whole days in water, and haften by it the approach of The indolence of the men, which induces them to follow every mode of placed pleasure, re commends to them a practice which Mahommed has made a tenet of religion The prohibition of wine is also favourable to despotism. It prevents that free communication of fentiment which awakens manland from a tornul andifference to their natural rights. They become cold, timid, cautious, referred and intereffed; firangers to those warm passions, and that cheerful elevation of mind, which render men in some measure honest and fincere. In the East, there are no public places of meeting, no communications of fentiments no introduction to private friendfhin followers, and a love of retirement prevail. which difunite mankind, and as all affociations among men are prevented, the hands of govern ment are firengthened by the very virine of tem perance

Ped fil nation. The doctrine of a rigid fate, or absolute pre destination, which forms one of the principal tenets of the Mahominedan religion, has a great in such cases on the character and manners of men. When this opinion is adopted as an article of faith, the necessity of precaution is inculcated in vain. The statist begins an action because human nature is incapable of absolute idlenes, but when a love of repose invites him, when an obstacle arises before him to thwait his designs, he has no motive for perseverance. He waits for another day, perhaps for another month he at last trusts the whole to Providence, and makes God the agent in his very crimes. Miscarriage can be no disgrace where success depends not on abilities.

and

A D 1648 Hier 1068 Aurus rebe ad

he could not have failed, but he met t. prince in his own province of deceit, an foiled This remarkable transaction hapi the camp near Muttra on the fixth of ful

Though Shaifta who was left in the ; vances to ment of Agra, was fufficiently attached cause of Aurungzebe, that cautious princ his fon Mahommed in that capital, to wate unforeseen events that might arise. To the care of Mahommed and Shaista the unforti Morâd was committed, and his brother ha no fears remaining in that quarter, moved camp from Muttra and arrived at Delhi on I hough he had not affu twenty fixth of July ed the Imperial titles he created Omrahs in th city, the first of whom was Ziffer Jung, who he dignified with the name of Chan Jehan der that lord he detached a division of his army That prince, upon the news of the against Dara approach of Ziffer, decamped from Sirhind, and took the route of Lahore. In his march he laid under military execution all the Rajas and governors of districts who refused to join raifed confiderable fums in his way, and having crossed the Suttuluz, ordered all the boats on

Pare fi es so Labore that river to be destroyed Dara having advanced beyond the river Bea, took possession of Lahore. Giving his army time to breathe in that city, he employed himfelf in levying troops, and in collecting the Imperial revenue. Daood, the general of his forces, re mained in the mean time at the village of Til bunds, with half the army, to guard the paffage Aurungzebe, upon advice of of the river Bea the dispositions of Dara reinforced the army of Zuffer with five thousand horse, under the con The war with Dara, from be duct of Chillulla The minds of ing protracted, became ferious and the general who loses a battle through his own pufillanimity, lays the blame upon Providence.

The extensive polygamy permitted by the Polygamy law of Mahommed, has a fatal effect on the minds of his followers; but it has its advantages as well as its defects. The peculial nature of the climate subjects women to dileases, and hurries them forward in a few years to age. One man retains his vigour beyond the common fuccession of three women through their prime, and the law for a multiplicity of wives is necessary for the support of the human race But the custom weakens paternal affection, for as a hufband cannot equally divide his regard among many women, the children of the favourite will be prefeired. Even these vill not be much beloved. The loss of a child is no misfortune; and the care of preferving it is lessened, by the opportunity which the number of his women furnishes to the father for begetting more The child himself is no stranger to this indifference, and he fails in proportion in his duty. Befides, the jealoufy between mothers in the haram grows into hatted among their fons. The affection between brothers is annihilated at home, and when they issue forth into the world, they carry their animofities into all the various transactions of life.

These religious tenets, which are so favourable Conseilto despotism, are accompanied with fingular opi-ment of nions and customs, which are absolute enemies to freedom and independence. The concealment of their women is facred among the Mahomniedans. Brothers cannot visit them in private, strangers must never see them. This excessive jealoufy is derived from various causes ceeds from religion, which inculcates female modesty, it arises partly from the policy of government, it is derived from the nature of the cli-

276

A D 1658 Hig 1068 emperor of the Moguls, I shall have i of doing them. These motives, and vain pomp of greatness, induce me to all empire.

On the fecond of August, in an affemble nobility, he mounted the throne, in the gath Azabad near Delhi. No pompous cere were used upon the occasion, for he affect despise magnificence. His sinances, at the time, were low, and he prudently considere money, in the present situation of affairs, a be better bestowed upon an army than on the pageantry of state. He assumed upon his access to the throne, the poinpous title of Alliers, or the Conqueror of the Worlden the near the close of the fortieth year his age.

P effect one

The means taken by Aurungzêbe to obtain t. empire were scarce more justifiable, than those t which he fecured to himfelf the undiffurbed poi fession of the throne. Religion, the convenien cloke of knavery in all countries, was the chief engine of his ambition, and, in that respect, he relied on the credulity of mankind, to a degree of unpardonable imprudence. His felf denial and moderate professions agreed so little with his actions, that it is even aftonishing, how any person of common reflection could have been for a mo ment deceived. Butthe sulgar give implicit faith to fanchity in its most questionable form and Morid, by whose popularity and valour his brother over threw the hopes of Dara suspected not a duplica ty to which his own foul was a stranger ceive that prince was to fecure the empire Bear ing more the appearance of an hermit himfelf, than that of a competitor for the throne, the army looked up to Morâd who being addicted beyond measure to pleasure, gave up the influence as well divided into diffricts, in each of which a judge. appointed by the emperor, decided in criminal as well as civil affairs. He pronounced judgment on capital offences, but his fentence was never put in execution without the confent and warrant of the governor of the province. In difputes concerning property, there lay an appeal to the supreme court, in which the vicerov prefided in person. Every province was, in minrature, a copy of the empire. Three principal indices, with high titles of dignity, fat, with many affestors in the capital They not only de cided upon appeals, but fuits might originate before them The emperor himself in the presence of his nobles, prefided almost every day in this court, which generally fat for two hours in the hall of public juffice.

fullice.

When the matter appeared clear, the prince, without much hefitation, pronounced judgment, when it was doubtful, witneffes were examined, and the opinion of the judges affed on the point of law. Should the first appear intricate, it was referred to the judgment of the court in their own common hall, but the subject might appeal from their decision to the emperor and his affer fors in the chamber of audience. These courts, both when the monarch was present and when he was absent, were lest open to the people. No judgment was ever pronounced secretly, except when the power of the delinquent rendered a public trial dangerous to the state.

Council of

The great officers of state, by a kind of pre feription, formed a council which answers to our cabinet. The emperor asked their advice upon affairs of moment, he heard their fentiments, but nothing came ever to a vote. They were his advisers, but they had no controll on his power. He frequently called to this council men in inferior.

A D. 1658. Hig 1062.

principle, he was an enemy to vice fr tution, and he never did an act of In his pi till he alpired to the throne racter, he was an example of decency t an affectionate parent, a fincere frien Destuute of that elegance of and that winning behaviour which had I his brothers the idols of the people w they moved, he endeavoured to acquire a of popularity by the aufterity of his ma Like the rest of the family of limur, h bred up with very free notions upon the fo of religion, but various circumflances inc him afterwards to assume it e appearance of : gid devotee His brothers by encouraging of all religions, had offended the followers The posterny of those Mog who under Baber conquered India, and folds of fortune from Tartary and Persia occupied ! greatest number of the places of profit and trust. These could not see, without envy the empire men of different persuations from themselves, ad mitted into the confidence of princes who fish Though filent professed the Mahommedan fauh at court, they murmured in fecret mented the declining state of a religion under the aufpices of which they had extended their go-Aurungzêbe, by his rigid vernment over India adherence to the tenets inculcated in the Coran, gained the effeem of all those, who if the ex pression may be used, were the chains which kept together the nations of Hindostan under But the influence which the house of Timur Aurungzêbe derived from his devotion did not, for many years luggest an ambition to aspire to the empire He only hoped, that under the cloke of fanctity, he might pais in fafety his life under

A D 1658. 111g 1068 misfortunes "Go, Jehanara," he faid, i daughter was the only perfon near him, and learn the cause of this sudden mark of But why should we enquire? The gladner those who surround us, must add to our gistome new missoriume must have fallen on a ra, look not abroad, lest the first object to strayour eves, should be the head of a brother who you tenderly loved Jehanâra, bursting intears arose, and, in the passage which led to the haram, was met by the chief eunuch, who wa hastening to the emperor with the news.

concerning his acref flon

The eyes of Shaw Jehan slashed with rage He rofe-he walked to and fro through the apartment, but he uttered not one word His daughter fat at a distance in tears, he raised his eyes, and looked stedfastly for some time on the figure of a crown which hung suspended from the ceiling over his head. He called at length the chief eunuch, " Take," faidhe, " that bauble away; it mocks me with the memory of my former con dition." The tear flood in his eye " Yet flay thy hand,' refumed the emperor, "this would be owning the right of Aurungzebe. He beckoned to the eunuch to retire he stood involved in " The new emperor, Jehanara, ' faid thought Shaw Jehan, " has prematurely mounted the throne. He should have added the murder of a father to the other crimes which have raifed him But this perhaps is also art, he wants to deprive me, by misrepresentation, of what re mains of my fame, before he deprives me of life.

Howre celv ! Shaw Je Whilst Shaw Jehan was making thesemelancho ly restections on his own lost condition, a message was brought to him from Mahommed, the eldest son of Aurungzebe, who had remained at Agra. He begged leave to have permission to wait upon his court, and the deputy, in a venal court, foundmeans frequently to retain the favour of his prince, when he disobeyed his commands Fvery idea of loyalty was, towards the decline of the empire, destroyed among the people of the distant provinces They heard of an emperor, as the superstituous hear of a guardian angel, whom they never behold An indifference for his sate succeeded to his want of power A peasant, at the end of many months, was informed of a revolution at Delhi He stopinot his oxen, nor converted the plow share into a sword. He whissed unconcerned along his sield, and enquired not, perhaps, concerning the name of power of the new prince Notwithstanding this indifference in the inferior fort, the emperor every day extended fymptoms of his superior power to the very extre mities of his empire. His edicts were transmitted to every district; they were publicly read, and regultered in the courts of justice. They became a fecurity to the people against the impositions of the governor An appeal lay from his decilions, by a petition to the emperor in the hall of audi ence. This doctrine was inculcated by the edicts, and fome of the oppreffed took advantage of the promise of justice which they contained Their petitions, whenever they found access to the throne, were heard with the attention which a realous prince pays to his own power, and there. are many inflances in which the governors of provinces have been feverely punished for an act of injustice to a poor peasant. Never to forgive op pressions against the helpless and low was an established maxim among all the princes of the house of Timur

M.S

On the

The power of disposing of the succession naturally belongs to a despot During his life, his pleasure is the law When he dies, his authority

ceales,

A D. 1 58. 1 g 1058

either fide, and when we confels ourselves shocked at his inhumanity, we lofe half our rage in the necessity which imposed upon him the measure He made forme amends for his crimes, in the first jullice and clemency of his government, and Hin dollan was flourthing and happy, till his own po hey was revived by his fons

ceases; but the strength of custom has made his will, in favour of any of his fons, a superior title to promogeniture. The power is, in some meafure necessary. A prince having an independent right of succession to the throne, might be very troublesome to his father in an empire established on the principles which we have described. weight which he might derive from his hopes, would clog the wheels of government, which, under a fystem of despotsim, can admit of no delays, no obstructions, no divided or limited power. Perfonal abilities, under fuch a system, are more neceffary than under established laws. prince brings more calamities than a civil war. A minority is dreadful; and it can scarce exist, where the voice of the prince is the living law, which moves the whole machine of the state.

Necessity frequently excuses, in the eyes of succession mankind, the worst of crimes. A prince of abi-to the lities, who mounts a throne in the East by the exclusion of an elder brother, escapes the detestation of his subjects from the good which they hope to derive from his superior parts. Even fratricide loses its name in felf-preservation, combined with the public good. The greatness of the crime is eclipsed by the greatness of the object. is a divine decision; and the state gives up the lives of the unhappy fufferers, as a facrifice to its own repose. To be born a prince, is therefore a misfortune of the worst and most embarrassing kind. He must die by clemency, or wade through the blood of his family to fafety and empire.

The Hindoos, or the followers of the Brahmin Mildness faith, are in number far superior to the Mahommedans in Hindostan. The system of religion which they profess, is only perfectly known in the effect which it has upon the manners of the people. Mild, humane, obedient, and industrious,

they

A D. 1658 Hig 1068 rein to ambition, he appeared infentible of his own exaltation. His humility feemed to encrease upon the throne to such a degree, that even those who could not approve of his measures, were at a loss to what they ought to ascribe his conduct. Averse to pleasure, and contemning pomp and magnificence, the obvious inducements to the feizing of the seepire were wanting to Aurungzebe, but his active mind found, in its own though, a kind of right to command mankind

Soliman

the new emperor had fearce mounted the throne near Delhi, when he was alarmed with intelligence of the march of Soliman, by the ikirts of the northern mountains, to join his father Da-We loft fight of that prince in ra at Lahore the midst of his mutinous army, near Allahabad The principal nobles who had attended him in his fuccessful expedition against Suja, deserted his flandard at the first news of his father's defeat The confinement of Shaw Jehan deprived him of more of his followers; but 2 number, fufficient to deserve the name of an army, still remained in Though bold and unconcerned in acti on, Soliman was subject to political fears. The news of repeated misfortunes came daily from every quarter He became perplexed and undecalive various expedients presented themselves to his view, but he could fix on none. His first resolution was to return to Bengal, but, dubious of success against Suja with a reduced and dispi rited army, he dropt that delign, and gave himself up again to wavering schemes He had none to advise him, and his own mind afforded no When intelligence of the resource in distress march of the confederate princes from Agra arrived in his camp, he thought of furpriling the capital, and by releating his grandfather, to add the weight of that monarch s name to his declin mg they are of all nations on earth the most easily conquered and governed. Their govern ment, like that of all the inhabitants of Asia, is despotic; it is, in such a manner, tempered by the virtuous principles inculcated by their religion, that it seems milder than the most limited monarchy in Europe. Some of the reigning princes trace their families, with clearness, above four thousand years, many of them, in a dubious manner, from the dark period which we place beyond the slood. Revolution and change are things unknown, and affassinations and conspiracies never exist.

of the

Penal laws are scarce known among the Hin doos, for their motives to bad actions are few Temperate in their living, and delicate in their conflictutions, their passions are calm, and they have no object but that of living with comfort and eafe. I mid and fubmissive, from the cold ness of a vegetable diet, they have a natural ab horrence to blood Industrious and frugal, they possess wealth which they never use Those coun tries, governed by native princes, which lay be yond the devastations of the Mahommedans, are rich, and cultivated to the highest degree. Their governors encourage industry and commerce. and it is to the ingenuity of the Hindoos, we owe all the fine manufactures in the Last During the empire of the Mogule, the trade of India was carried on by the followers of Brahma. The bankers, feribes, and managers of finance were nauve Hindoos, and the wifelt princes of the family of Timur protected and encouraged such peaceable and ufeful fubjects

Hindoo government. The nation of the Mahrattors, though chiefly composed of Rajaputs, or that tribe of Indiana whole chief business is war, retain the mildness of their countrymen in their domestic govern ment

A D 1058 1068

They, however, marked any fafety in defertion their march with ruin, and covered their rear with the smoke of villages, which they had plun takes

dered and fet on fire. Aurungzebe received certain intelligence of the destructue route of Soliman through the countries of Shinwara and Muchin-pour detached Fidai Chan with a confiderable force Shaista, who had been to interrupt his march left in the government of Agra, was ordered with troops, by a different route, to prevent the escape of the prince by the road through which he had come He was in no condition to cope with either of those lords. He turned his march to the north, and entered the almost impervious country of Sermagur, where the Ganges issues from the mountains into the plains of India. Pirti Singh, the Raja, received the unfortunate fugutive with kindness and respect. He sent his own troops to guard the palles, and permitted the forces of Soliman to encamp in his valleys, to recover from the fatigues of a tedious march Aurungzebe, upon receiving advices of the efcape of the prince, recalled Fid2s to the Impe rial camp, and ordered Shaista to his government

Safe in the hospitality of the prince of Sermagur, Soliman remained shutupin asecluded country The mountains which protected him from the enemy, prevented him from hearing of the fate of his friends He became anxious and thoughtful, and discovered neither pleasure nor amusement in the ural sports pursued by others through the romantic allies which formed the dominions of the Raja le loved to walk alone, to dive into the thickest oods, to mix his complaints with the murmur torrents which, falling from a thouland ks, filled the whole country with an agreeable

ment. When their armies carry destruction and death into the territories of Mahommedans, all is quiet, happy, and regular at home. robbery is to be dreaded, no imposition or obstruction from the officers of government, no protection necessary but the snade. To be a ftranger is a fusficient security. Provisions are 'furnished by hospitality; and when a peasant is asked for water, he runs with great alacrity, and fetches milk. This is no ideal picture of happiness. The Author of the Differtation, who travelled lately into the country of the Mahrattors. avers, from experience, the truth of his observations. But the Mahrattors, who have been represented as barbarians, are a great and rising people, subject to a regular government, the principles of which are founded on virtue.

A D 1659. 11 g 1669 sanuts confirmed the report. The adherents of the new emperor began to shift for themselves, and grief and joy prevailed, as men were va riously affected to this or the other side who commanded in the city was flruck with me lancholy and despair. He knew the active part which he himself had taken for Aurungzêbe, and he could expect no favour from the conque rors. He even made attempts against his own life, and feemed indifferent about flutting the gates of the citadel a ainst Jesswint Singh prince though he fuffered little in the running tight with Aurungz be was still afraid of the Imperial army, which followed close on his beels Had he boldly entered the city, taken advantage of the panic of Shailta, and released Shaw Jehan, Aurungzebe might still be ruined But the fortune of that prince was still greater than his abilities

Aurung sebe s rives in that city

Aurungzebe, apprehensive of some mischief in Agra, hastened his march to that capital The city was now undeceived with regard to the bat tle and the Maraja who had boafted of the de feat of the emperor, began to fly before him He directed his course to his own country, and, though encumbered with spoil, outstripped his Aurungzêbe entered purfuers in the march Agra without any pomp. He did not permit himself to be saluted by the guns of the fort " It would be improper, said he " to triumph in the ears of a father, over the defeat of his He wrote a letter to Shaw leban enquiring concerning his health, and he excused himself from coming into his presence on account of the hur ry of public affairs He flightly mentioned his victo ry, by infinuating that Providence, by his hands, had frustrated the designs of the enemies of the house of Timur His father, who was no stranger to the fituation

Hig Icos

the other If Dara cannot decide, I, who am the daughter of Purvez will decide for myfelf This hand shall prevent me, by death, from disho The descendant of the immortal Timur shall not grace the haram of the race of Sheic: Seli!" The features of the prince were at once lighted up into a kind of mournful joy burft into tears, and, without uttering a word, fourred forward his horfe toward Tatta not remained many days in that city, when he received advices that a confiderable detachment of the enemy was arrived within a few miles of the place. He evacuated Tatta, croffed the In dus, and fled toward the capital of Guzerat The enemy laid a bridge of boats over the river . and were preparing to purfue the fugitive, when unexpected orders arrived for them to repair with all expedition to join the Imperial army, in full march against Suja

Croffer the

ć

The removal of the Impenal troops procured a happy respite for Dara but it was but a transient cleam of Fortune, who had refolved to continue her frowns The road of the prince lay partly through burning fands, deflitute of water, part ly through abrupt mountains, covered with im pervious woods, the haunts of beafts of prey His people were parched with thirst, his very camels died of fatigue. His unfortunate women were just expiring for want of water, when the prince who ranged the folitudes far and wide, lighted on a foring. He encamped near it, and having refreshed his attendants, arrived next day on the borders of the territories of the Raja s lâm and Bahara, which lay contiguous to each other in his route. They received him with hof pitality, but they declined to embrace his cause. They were the natural enemies of the house of Timur, AN

ENQUIRY

INTO THE

STATE OF BENGAL:

WITH A

PLAN FOR RESTORING THAT PROVINCE TO ITS FORMER PROSPERITY AND SPLENDOR.

STATE OF BENGAL UNDER THE MOGULS.

Preliminary Observations.

THE affairs of India, though long of great Reflectiimportance to this kingdom, have only very lately become objects of public attention. Facts coming from afar made little impression: their novelty could not rouse, nor their variety amuse the mind.
With a self-denial uncommon in a spirited nation,
we heard, without emotion, of the great actions of some of our countrymen; and, if we listened to any detail of oppressions committed by others, it was with a phlegmatic indifference, unworthy of our boasted humanity. A general distaste for the subject prevailed; an age, marked with revolution and change, seemed ready to pass away, without

A D Hg Hg shadow of hope for her husband's releasement which was offered by a prince overwhelmed by his own bad fortune. She threw herfelf at the feet of her father, her tears suppressed her voice, but the looked up to him with that forcible clo quence of eyes, which it is impossible to refift from beauty in diffiels She placed the let ter of Dara in his hands. He read it with emoti and turned away in filence. She followed him on her knees holding the fkirt of his robe " Is not my daughter, faid he, " already fuffici enth wretched? Why does the with to involve her father in the irretrievable mifery which has overtaken her lord? But the will have it fo-and prudence must give way to pity! He ordered the gates to be thrown open, and the princels, in an ecflafy of 103, fent accounts of her fuccefs to Dara

Raifes an

The prince could fcarce believe his own eyes, when he received the letter of the wife of Morad A gleam of hope came in upon his misfortunes. He entered Ahmedabåd, and the governor received him with the highest distinction and respect gave to the prince about one hundred and twenty thousand pounds in money, together with jewels to a great amount, to contribute to raife troops This new life to the affairs of Dara rendered him active in his preparations for war. In a few weeks he found himself at the head of a considerable army. He in the mean time received letters from the Maraja who, with his native troops, was on his march with Aurungaebe to attack That prince acquainted him of his defign of deferting the new emperor in the action, and we have already feen that he kept his promife He conjured Dara to haften his march to support him in his it tended defection. The advice was good, but the evil genius of Dara prevailed He out being fentible of events which will render it important in the eyes of posterity

Defign of the Author

The current of public opinion has, at length, taken another direction Men are rouzed into attention, with regard to a subject which concerns the welfare of the state. They begin to decide, in their own minds, upon affairs which stand in need of the interpolition of the nation, and they fhew an inclination to be informed, as well as a willingness to correct mistakes and to redress orievances This confideration has induced the author of the following observations, to submit them, with all due deserence, to the public He has been, for years, a filent spectator of the transactions of the British nation in the East, and it is, from the means of information which he has polleffed, that he hopes to give fomething new to the world With hands guiltless of rapine and depredation, he assumes the pen without prejudice, and he will use it with all decent freedom without fear

A bnef

The empire of the Hindoos over all India. came down from the darkest and most remote antiquity, to the 170th year before the Christian zera, when it was diffolved by civil discord and Bengal, like many other provinces, flarted up into an independent kingdom, and was govern ed by successive dynasties of Rajas, who chiefly refided at the now deferted capital of Ghor der these princes, it continued a powerful and opulent kingdom, to the beginning of the thir teeth century, when it was first invaded by the Mahommedans, under a prince of the race of Chillagi, who possessed the countries near the The name of this Tartar fource of the Oxus invader was Eas ul dien, but he was foon after reduced to subjection by Altumsh, the Patan em peror of Delhi, who formed Bengal into a proA D 1659 Hig 1069through choice He studied to add suel to the stame which raged between them, and to derive advantage from their dissensions. He hoped to find that freedom and independence in their weakness, which he could never expect from their favour and power Under the instruction of these political principles, he studiously avoided to meet Dara He took the route of Marwar, to lodge his booty in his own dominions in safety. He, however, wrote letters to the prince, to advance to his borders, where he would join him with a recruited army. Dara accordingly marched toward Meirta, at which place he encamped with his forces, in daily expectations of the junction of the Maraja, who was collecting his forces at the capital of his

who is gained over by Aurung zebe. dominions Aurungzêbe was, in the mean time, alarmed at the great preparations of the Maraja danger in his defection, and he had recourse to He wrote to him & his usual art and address He acquainted him, That the opposition given to his fortune at the battle of Ugein, had long fince been blotted out of his memory, as it was the result of the Maraja's opinion in favour of Dara, that his submission to his government, while yet his brothers were in the field, was a conduct which entitled him to favour, but that his late defertion in hattle, and his subsequent attack upon the Imperial baggage, could not be for " The love of got, though it might be forgiven public tranquility, however, continues Aurung zêbe, " has expelled from my breast every wish of revenge. It is therefore your interest, to withdraw your foot from the circle of Dara's mil That you should join my standard, I neither expect nor with I cannot trust again and my own force is sufficient to your faith You may therefore look overthrow my enemies from your own country, an unconcerned spects

vince, governed by a lieutenant, who derived his authority from the conqueror.

Bengal, during the dominion of the Patans in of the va-India, was frequently subject to revolution and lutions change. When a prince of abilities fat on the throne of Delhi, it held of the empire; when the emperor was weak, it became an independent fovereignty under its governor. When the valour and conduct of Baber put an end to the government of the Patans at Delhi, some of that race remained untouched in Bengal. The misfortunes of Humaioon, in the beginning of his reign, not only prevented him from extending the conquells of his father, but deprived him even of the throne which Baber had acquired, and death followed too foon, upon his return, to permit him to reduce the wealthy kingdom of Bengal by his aims. The glory of this conquest was reserved for his fon, the illustrious Akbar, who, by the expulsion of Daood, the last king of Bengal of the Patan race, annexed it, in the year 1574, to his empire. Viceroys from Delhi governed the kingdom, from that period, till the debility of Mahommed Shaw gave scope to the usurpation of Aliverdi; and now, by a wonderful revolution of fortune, the fovereigns of that distant province are created by the deputies of the East India Company.

To give an enlarged idea of the subject, it may of Bengal. not be improper to enquire into the mode of government, which the Moguls established in the important province of Bengal. To impose nothing merely speculative upon the public, the Writer of the Differtation has endeavoured to derive his information from undoubted authority. He has, therefore, translated and annexed to his work, the commissions granted by the court of Delhi to its principal officers in the provinces:

From

A D 1639 1318 069by a more fatal stroke of policy than the strata gem of the Raja Debere Chan, and the Indian prince, Joy Singh, had, at the beginning of the war, adhered with warmth to the interests of Dara Under the prince Soliman, they had diftinguished themselves in the descat of Suja, and the reduc tion of Bengal \ \ \telding to \telding to the preffure of the times, and to the intrigues of Aurungzebe, they deferted, as has been already related, the colours of Soliman, and ruined all the hopes which the unfortunate Dara derived from the victorious ar To these chiefs the emperor my under his fon He promised largeapplied with much address ly, and he mixed threats with his proffered He at length prevailed upon them to write an infidious letter to Dara, to the following purpole

Dara

It is not unknown to the emperor," for with that title they affected to diflinguish Dara, " that Debere and Joy Singh once deemed it their greatest glory to be numbered among his With how much fidelity they obeyed his orders they derive a proof from their actions, under the command of the illustrious prince So-So much fatisfied was Dara with lıman Shekô the conduct of his faithful fervants, that, in his letters, which were prefented to us by the prince, he attributed the victory over Suja to our conduct The emperor was partial in our fa your, but we prefume to hope, we deferved a and valour part of his praise When the news of the defeat of our prince, and of the imprisonment of the came to our ears, we thought king of kings ourlelves alone amidst the victorious armies of our Our loyalty remain What could we do? The umes left us no ed but necessity was near choice and we were forced to submit. We have ever fince been dragged along, the unwilling From which it will appear, that the despotism of the house of Timur was circumscribed by established forms and regulations which greatly tempered the rigid severity of that form of government.

Various Tenures under the Moguls

Policy of

THE Mogul Taitars when they conquered India, carried a system of necessary policy through the countries which their arms had subdued. Inflead of feizing the lands of the vanquished, they confirmed them in their possessions. The number of the conquerors bearing no proportion to the conquered, felf preservation obliged the first to adhere together, and to hold the fword in their Had they attempted to fettle in different provinces, they would have foon ceafed to be a people, and their power would have been broken by feparation They retained, therefore, their military character, and, when they reduced a province they made the taxes, paid to former princes, the invariable rule of their imposts The people changed their lords, but if their government suffered any change it was in the subflitution of a milder desposiss, in the place of the fierce tyranny of the Patans

Tributary R ps.

Many of the Rajas, or indigenous Indian princes, had, from the first establishment of the Mahommedans in India been permitted to retain a great part of their ancient possessions, which they continued to govern by their own laws, with out any appeal from their jurisdiction to the courts of justice established by Imperial commissions. The only mark of homage paid by the Rajas, was a certain annual tribute. The house of Timur, no less remarkable for their prudence than for their clemency and justice, never encroached upon the privileges.

Liera

above two hundred, and in that number, a officer of diffinction except Sheich Meer, th

captain general of his forces 1 10

The grief of Darn for his defeat was great. for une of but it was not equal to his altonishment misfortune, though dreadful was unexpected. and by the fudden ill prevented the fear however, succeeded by misery, and unequalled The unfortunate prince fled to the capital of Gurerat But the governor, whom he left in the place, thut the gates against his lord He fat down in filence, and knew not whither to His friends became his greatest enemies I wo thousand Mahrattors still adhered to the unhappy prince. When they heard of the message of the governor they despaired of the affairs of Dara, and added their own cruelty to his misfor tunes. In a pretence of having large arrears of their pay due to them, they fell upon his baggage. and plundered it in his presence. Some caskets of jewels were faved by his women, for even in that feafon of licence and diforder, their per fons were facred from barbarity itself rage was committed in the night. When day light appeared, the robbers, as if ashamed of their conduct, fled with their spoil of the lowest menial servants remained Every thing was removed from the field. The mifera ble tents, which he had collected in his flight, were carried away, and nothing was left but a few old screens of canvals, which covered the Sultana and her female flaves from the public eye The diffrest of the prince may be imagined, but cannot be described. He walked about in seem ing distraction, and the sad complaints of the women from behind their wretched covering, drew tears from the ever of the few fervants who ftill adhered to their unhappy lord. The privileges of the tributary princes. They found, that though the Ray is paid not to the crown above half the lum raifed upon the subject, their policy, industry, and good government, were so much superior to those of the Moguls, that the countries which they possessed, yielded as much in proportion to their extent, as those which they had farmed out to Zemindars of their own nation and In the two provinces which the British nation now possess, and which, for the future, we will diffinguish by the general name of Bengal. many diffricts of greater extent than any county in Britain, are still possessed by the aboriginal Rajas. But we are more rigid than the Moguls: we have encroached on their privileges, and annihilated their power. During the domination of the house of Timur, one-fourth of Bengal was fubject to these hereditary lords.

The division of the province which was more Motionimmediately under the Mahommedan govern- medanZement, was parcelled out into extensive districts, called Chucklas, refembling, in some measure, our counties, and into lesser divisions, like our ancient tithings. These were lett to Zemindars. or farmers of the Imperial rents, who fometimes possessed a whole district, or chuckla; as the Zemindar of Purnea, who assumed the style and state of a Nabob, though only a farmer of the revenue, under the unfortunate Surage-ul-Dowla. The court of Delhi, under the best princes, was venal. A fum of money, fecretly and properly applied, often secured the possession of his office to the Zemindar during life, and he even was fometimes enabled to transmit it to his hens, till, by length of time, they were, in some measure, considered as lords of their respective districts.

The farmers, however, had no leafe from the Their crown of the lands over which they prefided. Power

 Their

A D 1659 H g 1069. There was nothing to shade the desolate travel. from the fcorching fun, excepting when clot of fand, raifed by whirlwinds, covered them wi The beafts of burden died f a fatal darkness want of provender, the very camels perished fe The favourite elephant, which want of water had often carried Dara in all his pomp, was nov the only useful animal that remained, and even To add to the misfortunes of he began to fail the prince, the favourite Sultana, the mother of all his children, and whom he tenderly loved, was at the point of death. She had been feized with hysterics from the fright of the battle had ever fince been subject to violent fits cut off gradually his retinue, at the end of eve ry furlong, he was obliged to pay the last sad offices to some favourite servant or friend

difficts

When he came within fight of Tatta, the elephant which had carried his family across the defert, worn out with fatigue and thirst, lay down The few that remained of his follow and died ers were fo languid and spent, that they could not crawl to the neighbouring villages for fuccour Dara himself was obliged to execute that neces He came to a hind, who kept oxen fary fervice He mentioned his diffress and his ın a field name, and the clown fled from his presence. He fat down, having no strength to return to his defolate family Curiofity, however, brought the whole village around, and every eye was full They brought all their beafts of burden to the place, and the whole country accom panied him, with fhouts of joy, to Tatta. however did not rest long in that city crossed the Indus, and threw himself under the protection of the petty chiefs of the district of Bicker, and they, touched with compassion, pro mifed to support him with their lives and fortunes The

Their authority for collecting the rents from the inferior tenants, was derived from a written agree ment. for a certain annual fum to be paid to the treasury, exclusive of the Imperial taxes prevent impolition on the poorer fort, in every district there was established a register, in which the rents and imposts upon every village and farm were entered, and open to the infrection of The registered rents and imposts were col lected by the Crone of the diffrict, who was effablished in his office by an Imperial commission He was accountable for the whole, even to the last Dâm, as the commission expresses it, to the Fotadar or treasurer of the district, who paid them into the hands of the Dewan, or receiver general of the Imperial revenues in the province

te Pirther

The rights or dues of the Dewanny, or the revenue paid to the crown, did not amount to above half the fum raifed upon the fubicct by the great farmers. These were, from time to time, per mitted to raise the rents upon the inferior tenants. in proportion to the general improvement of the The furplus, which was known to govern ment from the public regulters of the districts. was, in part allowed to the general farmers, for the purpose of building houses for the husband men, for furnishing them with implements of agriculture, for embanking to prevent inundati one for making refervoirs of water for the dry feafon, and, in general, for all expences attend ing the improvement and cultivation of the lands. which otherwife would have rendered the ac counts of government intricate and perplexed by the croun.

The great farmers, however, were not per mitted to oppress the tenants with exorbitant rents, neither was it their interest to extort from the husbandmen fums which would render them incapable of cultivating their lands, and of living comfortably

A D 1659 Hie 1050

Jihon

was pardoned by the emperor, and restored to hi The prince estate which had been confiscated therefore, had reason to expect a return of gra titude, but the obligations were too great for the pride of this unprincipled chief, and they pressed upon him like injuries

but throws

The natural perfidy of Jihon was fo notorious, himself on that all his friends, with one voice, remonstrated to Dara against his delign of throwing himself on the faith of that chief The prince, naturally obstinate, was now blinded by his fate. He could not think of leaving his beloved Nadira in the hour of death; and he refolved to risque all for the melancholy fatisfaction of being prefent when the faithful companion of his diffress expired Some nobles, who had hitherto attended his person, and who had determined to accompany him in his exile to Persia, separated themselves With feventy from a prince devoted to ruin

Jure in domestics only, he went to the residence of Jihon, and that chief, apprized of his coming, came out to meet him, and received him with the He quitted his warmest professions of friendship oun palace to accommodate the prince, and nothing was to be seen around but the greatest marks of hospitality and prosound respect.

The Sil tana dica

The diftemper of the Sultana had increased on She fainted the road to the relidence of Jihon away when the was carried into the apartments assigned for her reception, and the prince fat in tears by her fide, during the whole night the morning she expired in his arms "It is on ly now,' faid Dara, " I have found that I am alone. I was not berest of all my friends whilst Nadira lived But she has closed her eyes on the nusfortunes which are to involve her children and lord, and thus a peculiar happiness has succeeded to accumulated distress " He tore off his mag nificent comfortably upon the fruits of their toil. In the Imperial officers of the revenue, the poor had friends, and the Zemindar spies upon his conduct. They were such checks upon him, that he could conceal nothing from their observation. They transmitted monthly accounts of his transactions to court. If the tenants were able, without oppression, to pay the additional rent, the demands of the crown role at the expiration of the year upon the farmer, in proportion to the new impost, if they were found incapable of bearing the burden, the Zemindar was turned out of his office for his avarice and imprudence.

A double revenue, it appears from what has A double been already observed, rose to the crown from revenue. the lands; the ancient rent, established at the conquest of India by the Moguls, and the sums which proceeded from the annual contracts with the great farmers. The viceroy of the province was vested with the power of letting the lands; and he was obliged to transmit to the receivergeneral a record of the sums payable by each Zemindar. The cause of this mode of raising the revenue is obvious. The detail of accounts, the making of contracts with the inferior tenants, would have rendered the business of government too minute and too expensive, and to have permitted the general farmers to manage their diftricts without either check or controll, would have given birth to scenes of oppression, which Fate had referved for an unfortunate people, to our times. The Mogul empire is now no more; and the servants of the freest nation upon earth have left the body of the people to the mercy of

The general farmers of districts were not the Various only persons known by the name of Zemindars. Zemindars. Men, who possessed estates for life, and sometimes the Zemindars

A D 1659. Hit. 1059

vered up

He stopt—and, with a scornful silence, submitted his hands to be bound

Ithon heard the prince without making any reply, for what could he say to vindicate his conduct? He ordered the prisoner to be mounted on an elephant, and then he fell upon the baggage, to enrich him He then haf felf with the spoil of his benefactor tened toward Chan Jehan, and, during the journey, notwithstanding the natural unseelingness of his mind, he durit not for once come into the presence of the much injured prince being now determined, that anxiety, which had long clouded the countenance of Dara, vanished His fon was carried with him on the fame ele Having a talent for poetry, he composed many affecting verfes on his own misfortunes, with the repetition of which he often drew tears from the eyes of the common foldiers who guard ed his person " My name, ' faid he one day, " imports that I am in PONP LIKE DARIUS, am also like that monarch in my fate. friends whom he trufted, were more fatal than the fwords of his enemy" Notwithstanding these casual complaints, he maintained his usual digni ty, and there was even fomething majestic in his It was not the wailings of a woman, but the manly afflictions of a great mind

to the

When Chan Jehân, who had been apprized of the imprisonment of Dara, faw that prince ad vancing, meanly dressed on a forry elephant, he could not bear the fight, and he hid his tears in his tent. He detached a party from his army to escort him, together with the traitor, to Delhi where Aurungzebe at the time kept his court. The emperor, though he rejoiced at the news that his brother had fallen into his hands was full of perplexity and indection. He called a council of his nobles; and they differed in their opinions, in perpetuity, free from all taxation, by virtue of Imperial grants, were distinguished by the These grants were generally given to fame title learned and religious men, to favourite fervants at court, to foldiers who had deferved well of their prince, and they were respected by succeeding emperors and feldom revoked. One fixth part of the lands in Bengal had been conferred, in perpetuity, by different princes, on their fa vountes and adherents Many of these estates have fallen into the East India Company from a failure of heirs, and others daily fall, as the property is not transferable by fale. A minute en quiry might greatly increase our revenue grants faid to be derived from the emperor, are only from the governors of the province, many are in the possession of men who cannot trace their blood to the original proprietors. A fuccession of revolutions has rolled one part of Bengal upon the other, and it is not hitherto fettled from confusion

n fferent

Lands were held by a tenure less permanent. of the emperors of Hindostan A firman or Im perial mandate, called by the name of Jagueer, was issued frequently to particular men. This species of grant was for no term of years. It was given through favour, and revocable at pleafure When any person was raised to the rank of an Omrah, it was an established rule to confer upon hun an effate, for the support of his dignity This, however, was nothing more than an affign ment on the revenues of the crown, arifing from a specified tract of land in a district, named in the body of the grant. The grantee had no busi nefs with the tenants as he never refided on the efface allotted for his subsistence. He fent his agent every feafon to the public officers of the di irid, and his receipt to them, for his allow

THE HISTORY OF HINDO

A D 1660. Hig 1000

though unfortunate, will never fubmit nour But why does he fearch for a ca pute? His inhumanity and avarice at vious to be covered by any pretence. act an open part, and his boldness will; a portion of his crime"

diffreft

The Raja was highly offended at the I ness of the answer of Suja But the per tied the fugitive, and the prince durft not To affa do an act of flagrant injustice him in private was impossible, from the vig. of his forty friends A public presence mi made to gain the wealth of Suja, and to peafe his enemies by his death The report conspiracy against the Raja was industrio spread abroad It was affirmed that Suia 1 formed a delign to mount the throne of Arraci by affaffinating its monarch The thing was uself improbable How could a foreigner, wit forty adherents, hope to rule a people of a du ferent religion with themselves. An account of the circumstances of the intended revolution was art The people loft their respect fully propagated for Sma, in his character of an affaffin in vain he protested his innocence, men who could give credit to fuch a plot, had too much

Ordered to leave Ar racks

weakness to be moved by argument

The Raja, in a pretended terror, called fud denly together his council. He unfolded to them the circumstances of the configuracy and he asked their advice. They were unanimously of opinion, that Suja and his followers should be immedi ately sent away from the country. The Raja was disappointed in his expectations, he had hoped that death should be the punishment of projected murder. But the natural hospitality of the nobles of Arracan prevailed over his

"""
He, however, under the sanches.

ance, was received by the Dewan, as a part of the Imperial revenue. No conditions of service, none for the maintenance of troops, was annexed to this grant. These are the sables of men who carried the seudal ideas of Europe into their relation of the state of India. The armies of the empire were paid out of the public treasury. Every province had its particular establishment of troops, which the governors were impowered to augment in times of rebellion and commotion.

During the domination of the house of Timur, tenures there was no transferable landed property in Hindostan; excepting gardens, orchards, houses, and fome small portions of ground, in the environs of great cities, for which merchants and wealthy tradefmen had obtained particular grants, distinguished by the name of Pottas This species of property was repeatedly fecured by general edicts, for the encouragement of building, for the accommodation of citizens, and the improvement of towns Grants of this kind did not always proceed from the crown. The governors of provinces were impowered to issue Pottas, under certain limitations and restrictions: the principal one of which was, that the usual rent of the ground should be paid regularly by the proprietor, to the collectors of the Imperial revenue.

Tenures of other various kinds were common under the in Bengal, as well as in the other provinces of empire. the empire. An affignment was frequently granted, upon a specified tract of land, for the discharge of a certain sum, and when the sum was paid, the assignment expired. Particular farms were burdened with pensions, called Altumga, to holy men and their descendants, without their eyer having any concern in the ma-Vol. III.

D

magement

A D 1661 Hig 1011 impervious forells, the haunts of beafts of pr on their top dwells a perpetual florm vers and impassable, torrents occupy the valle except where fome brushwood here and the hides dangerous and venomous fnakes then the rainy feafon; and mist and darkne covered the defert with additional horror unhappy fugitives not daring to trult any guide, lost their way, When they thought themselves on the borders of Tibet, they were again within fight of Sermagur Worn out with faugue, they took shelter under, a rock, where they were dif covered by a shepherd, who gave them refresh ment, but at the same time informed the Raja of what he had feen That chief fent his fon with The prince was affeep a party to feize Soliman when they arrived in fight, but he was rouzed by one of his three friends who kept the watch They took to their arms The young Raja plied them with arrows from a distance, and two of the prince's companions were flain He himfelf was wounded He fell under this unequal mode of attack, and was brought bound into the pre fence of the Raja and fent to Dolhi. That prince began to excuse his breach of hospitality by public necessity. He diminished the independence of his own situation, and magnised the power of Aurungzebe. I o seize an unfortunate sugitive, said Soliman, is a crime, but it is aggravated by the insult of making an apology, for what Heaven and mankind abhor. Take your reward for my life, it alleviates the missortunes of my situation, that now I owe you nothing for the friendship which you exhibited upon my arrival in your dominions. He turned his eyes in silence to the ground, and, without a murmur permitted hunself to be carried prisoner to Delhi. The emperor affected nagement of the lands The despot reserved the people entire to himself, and established his power by preventing oppression Certain imposts were also appropriated for the maintenance of Mullas, or priests, for the support of places of worship, public schools, inns, highways, and bridges. These imposts were laid by the receiver general of the revenue, upon the different husbandmen, in proportion to the rent which they paid, and the tax was distinguished by the name of the impositions of the Dewan

Civil Officers and Courts of Justice

Desponsing Innued

IN states subject to despotism, the legislative, the judicial and executive power are velled in the prince He is the active principle which exists in the center of the machine, and gives life and motion to all its parts His authority and confequence, however, depend in a great meafure, on the degree in which he communicates his power to his officers. If he gives them all his authority, the reverence for his person is lost in the splendor of his deputies If he bestows only a small part of his power on his servants, that t rror, which is the foundation of his govern mert, is removed from the minds of his subjects, and a door is opened for commotion, licenticul ness, and crimes The emperors of India, of the house of Timur had, for two centuries, the good fortune to clothe their officers with that happy medium of authority which was fufficient to govern, without the power of oppressing the body of the people

rnon Mog 1 the desposition of Hindostan it ought to be observed was never a government of mere ca price and whim The Mahommedans carried in A D 1661 Hig 1071

ciated them exceedingly, their strength and derstanding left them by degrees, they bec torpid and infensible, till they were at last lieved by death The emperor defired him to fatisfied that no defign was entertained against He was fent that very night to Agra, 2 foon after ordered to Gualiar, with the princ

Mahommed, the emperor's eldest son

Embiffi 1 f om Per-Tartery

The imprisonment of Soliman put an end to He found himseli the fears of Aurungzêbe firmly feated on the throne, and mankind were unwilling to disturb the tranquillity which they enjoyed under his prudent administration prevailed all over the empire. The most distant and inaccellible provinces became pervious to his authority He extinguished party, by retaining no appearance of revenge against those who had He made friends of his opposed his elevation enemies by conferring upon them favours, and he secured the faith of his friends by reposing in them his confidence. The neighbouring flates, who had remained unconcerned spectators of the civil wars, acknowledged the right which Au rungz be had acquired by his fortune and ad An ambaffador arrived from Shaw Abas the Second of Persia, to felicitate him on his accession to the throne, and he was followed by another from Suja king of the western Tartary The emperor's pride was flattered by the acquief cence of these two powerful monarchs, in his title to the crown. He received their representa tives with unufual pomp, and at the fame time that he gratified the princes with magnificent presents, he enriched the ambassadors with very confiderable fums of money

The folly of the prince Mahommed had to-IM Al ed heir tally estranged from him the affections of his father his obstinacy and daring disposition had rendered to their conquests a code of laws which circumferibed the will of the prince. The principles and precepts of the Coran, with the commentaries upon that book, form an ample body of laws, which the house of Timur always observed; and the practice of ages had rendered some ancient usages and edicts so sacred in the eyes of the people, that no prudent monarch would chuse to violate either by a wanton act of power. It was, besides, the policy of the prince, to protect the people from the oppressiveness of his servants. Rebellion sprung always from the great; and it was necessary for him to secure a party against their ambition, among the low.

The Imperial governor of a province, known Nabob by the corrupted name of Nabob, in the East as well as in Europe, was an officer of high dignity and authority; but his power, though great, was far from being unlimited and beyond controul. He conferred titles below the rank of an Omrah; he was permitted to grant estates till they should be confirmed by the crown. He appointed and difmissed at pleasure all officers both civil and military, excepting a few, whom we shall have occasion to mention, who acted by commission, under the seal of the empire; and fome of these, upon misbehaviour, he could sufpend till the emperor's pleasure was known. let the lands to the general farmers, in conjunction with the Dewan; but he bore no part in the collection of the revenue, but by aiding the Imperial officers with the military power. Omrahs, who served under him in the army, having generally, on account of the convenience, their allowance from the emperor on the rents of the province, he had the power, for disobedience or notorious crimes, to suspend them from their Jagieers, until he should receive an answer D_2 from

A D 1665 11 g 1075 Fallen mies with terror; but even of making them invifible in the hour of battle, when they dealt their deadly blows around

Their numbers being now encreased to twenty thousand, this motley army, with an old woman at their head, directed their march toward the Bistainia, for that was her name, was She covered her a commander full of cruelty route with murder and devallation, and hid her rear in the fmoke of burning villages and towns Having advanced to Narnoul, about five days journey from Acra, the collector of the reve nue in that place opposed her with a force, and The affair was now become was totally defeated ferrous, and commanded the attention of the em He found that the minds of the foldiers were tainted with the prejudices of the people, and he thought it necessary to combat Bislamia Sujait was ordered with weamons like her own against the rebels. The emperor, in the prefence of the army delivered to that general, bil lets written with his own hand, which were faid His reputation to contain magical incantations for fanchity was at least equal to that of Bistamia, and he ordered a billet to be carried on the point of a spear before each squadron, which the foldiers were made to believe would counteract the enchantments of the enemy The credulity which induced them to dread the witchcraft of the old woman, gave them confidence in the pre tended charm of Aurungzebe

The Fakiers, after their victory at Narnoul, thought of nothing but the empire for their aged leader. Having rioted upon the spoils of the country for several days, they solemnly raised Bislamia to the throne, which gave them an excuse for festivity. In the midst of their intemperate joy, Sujait made his appearance. They fought from court, where the dispute was examined in the cabinet. In matters of justice, there rested an appeal to his tribunal, from the Cazi, or chief justice, though he seldom chose to reverse the decrees of that judge. Disputes where property was not concerned, and where the established laws had made no provision, were settled by his authority, but he was instructed at his peril not to turn the subjects of the empire out of the lands, tenements, or houses, which they them selves either possesses or houses, which they them so them from their ancestors.

Dewan

The Dewait was the officer next in dignity to the viceroy, in the province. He derived his commission from the emperor, as receiver general of the revenue. His office was altogether confined to the administration and collection of the Imperial rents and taxes He corresponded with the minufer, he audited the accounts of the governor: and as he had entire to himfelf the charge and disposal of the public money, he might, for good reasons, refuse to discharge any extraordinary and unprecedented expences, or to iffue out pay to new troops raifed without apparent necessity He presided in the office called Dafter Ali, or over all the Mutafiddies, or clerks of the cheque, the Canongoes, or public regif ters. Crories, or collectors of the larger dif tricts, Fusildats, or collectors of the leffer dif tride. Fotadare, or treasurere. Chowdries, or chiefs of districts. Muckuddums, or head men of villages; and in general over all the officers of the Imperial revenue

Crorie

The Crone of every Pergunna or larger diftrict, derived his commission from the emperor His office, though in miniature, was the exact counterpart of the Dewan, being the receiver general of the country, if the hame may be used,

INDEX.

Sujant, quells an infurrection in Bengal, 39 Mohabet, 92. Suria Bann (the prince(s), her mild and anniable etc., 122

T

Tartars, their ideas on government, 119
Tirbits, fent ambassador to Persa, 400 III receives Shaw Abas, 402 His return from Persa, 405
Tucht Taws, the samous peacock throne, 164

U

Vifer Bee slain, 95
Uffect, their irruption, 84. Their decline, 117 Civ.
commotions, 118 Invade India, 124. Repulsed
125 Another irruption, 129 Embassy to them, 164
Incursions, 191 Descated by the prince Morad, 196.
Their prince sies to Persa, 198 Overthrown by Aurungzebe, 201 They submit, 202 Apply for 21d, 207

W

Wall, king of the Usbees, slain, 118
War, with the Usbees, 195 On the coast of Malabar, 365 In Bijapour, 411

z

Wine of Shirez, 272

Ziffer Jung fenzes Morad, shid

Ziman, the fou of Mohabet, joins his father, 123 Commands the army, 152 Death, 169

Zingu, the Ufbec, invades India, 129.

as the former was of the whole province. He was immediately accountable to the Dewan, in whose office he passed his accounts. He produced the receipts of the Fotadar or treasurer of the Pergunna or district, for the sums which he had paid into that officer's hands, from the collections. made by the Fufildars, who, in the fubdivisions of the Pergunna, held offices, each of which was a counterpart of his own.

The Carcûn of the larger districts was an officer Carcun. commissioned by the emperor, to settle all matters and disputes between the tenants and the officers of the revenue, and to preferve the ancient usages of the Pergunna. He was also a kind of spy upon all their private as well as public transactions, he audited their accounts publicly, transmitting copies of them monthly to court, attested by the Sheickdars, Chowdries, and Canongoes of the district. These accounts being entered with great regularity in the visier's office at Delhi, the emperor had an immediate view of the collections in the province, before the general accounts of the Dewanny were adjusted; and this was also a great check upon the office of the Dewan.

The view already presented of the mode of col-and other lecting the Imperial révenue, renders it unneceffary to descend through all the inferior offices in the department of the receiver-general. The revenues, it must be observéd, were never transmitted entire to the Imperial treasury in the capital of the province, much less into that of the empire. The expences incurred in every district were deducted from the receipts of the Fotadar or treasurer of the district; and the disbuisements of the province in general from those of the Dewan. The furplus alone, which was more or less according to accident, found its way to the Imperial exchequer. The estimates of the Imperial revenues are, therefore, not the fums received in the exchequer at Delhi, but the groß collections in every province

Chief juf

The courts of justice in Bengal, distinguished by the general name of Cutcherries, were of various kinds. They generally received their designation from the officer who presided in each or within whose jurisdiction they were comprehended. The Author of the Enquiry is not fully informed concerning the powers of the different judges, or the mode of proceeding in their courts. There arose a chain of appeal from the lowest to the highest. An action might be removed from any of the courts below before the Cazi of the province, commonly called Daroga Adalit, or chief justice, and from him there lay an appeal to the tribunal of the viceroy.

Judges.

Inferior judges were appointed by an Imperial commillion, in every large district, and in every confiderable city, with whom appeals refled, from the courts in the country and from the decisions of Cutwals, or mayors of towns These Cazis. or judges, were vefted with power to fummon before them all persons, to examine records. public registers, grants, and witnesses were, at their peril, to pals judgment imparti ally, according to the laws of the Coran, and the canons and regulations of the empire. were impowered to make and diffolve marriages. to execute contracts of every kind between individuals, to inflict punishments, which did not ex tend to either life or limb They took cogni zance of all riots, disorders, and tumults. and they were denominated the general guardians of the morals of the people. They were provided with an establishment of clerks, registers, and officers of the court They passed judgment in a fummary manner, and their legal fees were one fourth fourth of the matter in dispute, equally levied upon the plaintiff and defendant. This regulation was intended to prevent vexatious law-fuits, as well as to bring them to a speedy issue. During the vigour of the Mogul empire, capital punishments were hardly known in India. When a crime which merited death was committed, the Cazi, after a full proof of the fact, by witnesses, pronounced fentence against the guilty person; but, without the confirmation of the viceroy, it could not be put in execution. Though the empire sometimes abounded with treason, it was never punished but in the field.

In each subdivision of the Pergunna or district, Inferior subject to the jurisdiction of the Cazi or judge, there was an inferior officer called a Chowdri, fimilar to our justice of the peace. Every village had its chief-man, who was the constable of his own department. A Fogedar was, properly speaking, the commander of the troops, in every military station. He sometimes farmed the lands in the neighbourhood; and being the immediate representative of the viceroy, he was considered as the principal officer in his district. But he did not fit in judgment, the civil being always kept distinct from the military department, under the government of the Moguls, as long as it retained its vigour. The Zemindars, or general farmers, were fometimes entrusted with the command of the troops in their own districts, but in their courts they decided only upon trivial difputes between the inferior husbandmen -Such was the government of Bengal, under the empire of the house of Timur.

Reserve and Commerce

Revenue of Beng 1 and Behir

A BRIEF, but it is hoped a comprehensive, idea being given in the preceding section, of the government of Bengal under the Imperial house of Timur, the Author of the Finquiry will proceed to explain the Revenues and Commerce of that once flourishing and opulent kingdom. In the reign of the emperor Jehangire the revenues of the provinces of Bengal and Behâr, both which, for the sake of brevity, we comprehend under the name of the former, amounted to £2,796,719 13 2 Under his grandson Aurungzebe

they encreased to - - 2,911,866 7 6

Mahommed Shuffia, who wrote an abridgment of the History of the Empire, from the death of the illustrious Akbar to the fatal invasion of Nadir Shaw, where he mentions the provinces which revolted during the indolent reign of Mahommed Shaw, estimates the revenues of Bengal at fixty crores of Dams, or one crore and fifty lacks of roupees, which sum is equal to £ 1,875,000 The revenues of Behar, according to the same writer, amounted to forty five crores of Dams, or

1,406,250

£ 3,281,250

Increase under the empire. It appears, from the above calculation, that the revenues of Bengal had been gradually increasing, in the progress of the empire, through time. They continued still to increase, under the revolted Nabobs some of whom brought into their treasury four millions of our money, but not with out distressing the subject, and plundering him of a part of his wealth. It may be necessary to repeat an observation, already made, that not above half half the fum raifed upon the people came into the coffers of government. The exact lum transmitted annually to Delhi, before the diffolution of the empire, is not casy to ascertain; but we can form fome judgment of the amount, from the rumous policy of the Imperial court, when its ancient vigour began to decline. The provinces of Bengal and Behar, during fome years of indolence and debility, were farmed out to the viceroys, who paid into the treasury, one million two hundred and forty-mne thousand nine sundred and ninety-nine pounds, feventeen fluil egs and fixpence of our money to the treasury at Delhi, when the empire retained Deini its force. But this ilipulated revenue, as might have been foreseen, was never regularly paid. The viceroys acquired an independent power, by a regulation which threw the whole management of the province into their hands, without controul; and the vigour of the Imperial government, in proportion, declined. The country profited, however, by the refractionness of its governor; if his avarice prompted him to raife more on the fubject, the latter was more able than before to pay the additional impost, from the revenue being kept and expended in the province Bengal began to flourish, under an additional load of oppression. It yielded more to a fevere Nabob, than to the milder government of the empire; and being relieved from an annual drain of specie to Delhi, it became opulent under a degree of rapine.

This fum, it is supposed, was a medium struck, Sum anupon an average of years, of the money remitted in ted to

Though despotism is not the most favourable Commerce government for commerce, it flourished greatly in of Bengal, under the strict justice of the house of Timur. Senfible of the advantages which they themselves would derive from a free commer-

State of Beneal under the revolted Nabahi

Gradu 1

THOUGH the causes which broke the empire vere obvious, the decline of the power of the house of l'imur was pradual and impercentible. The feeds of decay were long fown before they were brought to an enormous growth, by the in dolence of Mahommed Shaw Had even the Perfian invalion never happened, the fabric which Baher rait al in India was deflined to fall to ruin The abilities of Aurungzêbe, by establishing half a century of domestic tranquillity in his domini ons, broke the forrit of his fubiects whill that of the Imperial family declined. The distant provinces obeyed the mandates of the court, through habit, more than through fear of its refentment and power, and povernors, though deflutute of ambition, found, in their own indolence, an ex cufe for their inattention to commands which could not be inforced with rigour

ofibepon

The intrigues of the two Seids at the court of Delhi, who raifed and removed monarchs at plea fore, weakened that respect for the house of Limur which bound the allegiance of the subject. even after their mildness had degenerated into indolence Every month brought intelligence into the distant provinces of the murder of one prince, whilft another was placed on a throne, full warm with his predecessor's blood The veil which hid despotism from the eyes of the people, was rent in twam, monarchs became puppets, which the minister moved at pleasure, and even men, who loved flavery on its own account, I new not to what quarter to turn their political devotion) The viceroys, under a pretence of an unferfled succession, retained the revenues of the provinces, and, with specious professions of loyalty loyalty for the Imperial family, they became polite rebels against its authority.

Through this debility in the Imperial line, a of the emnew species of government rose in various pro-pire. vinces of India. The viceroys, though they affumed the state of princes, were still the HUMBLE SLAVES of some desolate monarch, who sat without either power or dignity in the midst of the ruins of Delhi They governed the people in his name, but they listened not to his commands. He even became an instrument of oppression in their hands; and they fanchified the most unpopular of their measures by inducing the prince to pass, in their own cabinet, regulations, which originated under the seals of the empire. Instead of a revenue, they remitted to him bribes; and the necessity of his situation reduced him into a tool, to the very rebels who had ruined his power.

This mock form of an empire continued for Enea many years, and some provinces are still governed through the medium of a monaich that only fubfists in his name But though the Nabobs affirmed that they had still an emperor, the people found, in their oppressions, that there was none. The check which the terror of complaints to Delhi had laid formerly on the conduct of the viceroys, was now removed, and the officers of the crown who had been placed between the subject and the governor, were discontinued or deprived of their power. The inferior tenants, instead of being supported by the Imperial collectors of the revenue against the avarice of the general farmers, were submitted, without redress, to the management of the latter, and were confidered by him as a kind of property

The usurpation of Aliveidi introduced, more its dissoluthan thirty years ago, the above-described form of tion

government

government into Bengal The fame policy was continued by his fuccessors. They owned the emperor of Delhi for their sovereign, but they governed the country, and collected its revenues for themselves. The interposition of the crown being removed, the independent Nabobs, who succeeded one another either by force or intrigue, adopted a more simple, but a more imposition mode of collecting the rents and imposs, than that which had been practised by the house of Timur The lands were let from year to year to Zemindars, who were accountable for the rents to the treasury, and the former officers of the revenue, though not annihilated, possessed in the rents in the possessed in the rents in the possessed in the possessed in the rents to the treasury, and the some officers of the revenue, though not annihilated, possessed in the rents in the possessed in

Anore Outj blo

An intimate knowledge of the country, how ever, enabled the Pabobs to prevent their govern ment from degenerating into absolute oppres fron They had fenfe enough to fee, that their own power depended upon the prosperity of their fubjects, and their relidence in the province gave them an opportunity of doing justice with more expedition and precision than it was done in the times of the empire. The complaints of the injur ed from a possession of the means of information. were better understood The Nabobs were less re firsted than formerly in inflicting necessary ou milments, and, as they were accountable to no fu perior for the revenue, they had it in their power to remit unjust debts and taxes, which could not be The miferies of Bengal, in thort, were referved for other times Commerce manufac tures and agriculture, were encouraged, for it was not then the maxim to take the honey, by de flroying the frarm of Bener!

The folly of the prince had no destructive ef fect on the prosperity of the people The Nabobs, carrying down, through their own independent government,

government, the idea of the mild despotsion of the house of Timur, seemed to mark out to the people certain lines, which they themselves did not chuse either to overleap, or destroy. Many now in Britain were eve witnesses of the truth of this affertion. We appeal to the testimony of those who marched through-Bengal after the death of Surage-ul-Dowla, that, at that time, it was one of the richest most populous, and best cultivated kingdoms in the world. The great men and merchants were wellowing in wealth and luxury, the inferior tenants and the manufactufers were bleffed with plenty, content, and cafe But the cloud which has fince obscured this sunshine was near.

When the troubles, which ended by putting Boef reca-Bengal into the hands of the Company, first arose, ptulition Surage-ul-Dowla, a very young and inconfiderate prince, was Nabob of the three provinces. The good fortune which had at first forsaken us, returned to our arms, and, by the assistance or rather opportune treachery of Jassier, one of his generals, he was deposed and murdered. We raised the Traitoi, as a neward for his convenient treason, to a throne still warm with the blood of his lord, and the measure seemed to be justified, by our apparent mability of retaining the conquered province in our own hands.

The fortune of Jaffier, however, did not long of its with hold her frowns Though he had treachery enough to ruin his master, he was destirute of abilities to reign in his place His weakness became an excuse for a revolution, which had been meditated on other grounds, and Cassim Alı, Jassier's fon-in-law, an intriguing politician, was invelled with the dignity and power of his father. fier was weak, Cassim had too good parts to be permitted to govern Bengal. He was deposed, and his predecessor reinstated in his place. This farce in politics was adopted as a precedent. A governor, without a revolution in the state of Bengal, could not answer to himself for idling away his time.

and

la e revo

The civil wars, to which a violent defire of creating Nabobs gave rife, were attended with tragical events. The country was depopulated by every species of public distress. In the space of six years, half the great cities of an opulent kingdom were rendered desolate, the most fertile fields in the world lay waste, and five millions of harmless and industrious people were either expelled or destroyed. Want of foresight became more fatal than innate barbarism, and men found themselves wading through blood and ruin, when their object was only spoil. But this is not the time to rend the veil which covers our polinical transactions in Asia.

STATE OF BENGAL.

UNDER THE

EAST-INDIA COMPANY.

Observations on the Treaty for the Dewanny.

AN ample field lay open before us, but we Reflectihave appropriated revolution and war to history. ons. The present disquisition is of. an inferior kind; an enquiry, which means not to irritate, but to reform. Let it suffice to say, that Bengal suffered from disturbances and violent measures; and that Fortune, though unfavourable, was less fatal, than the rapacity of avaricious men. Peculiarly unhappy, an unwarlike but industrious people, were fubdued by a fociety whose business was commerce. A barbarous enemy may flay a prostrate foe, but a civilized conqueror can only ruin nations without the fword. Monopolies and an exclusive trade joined issue with additional taxations, the unfortunate were deprived of the means, whilst the demands upon them were, with peculiar abfurdity, increased.

But to wander no farther into declamation: Observations though the missortunes of Bengal began with the ons revolutions and changes which succeeded the death of Surage-ul-Dowla, the system which advances Vol. III.

in the possession of the province of Allahabâd; and thus a kind of provision was made for a prince, who retained nothing of what belonged to his illustrious ancestors, except the empty title of Emperor of Hindostan. This treaty, however, though it dazzled with its splendor, was neither folid nor advantageous in itself. The emperor, instead of being placed at Allahabad, ought to possess the province out of which his pretended visier Suja-ul-Dowla, had been recently driven; or should that measure be supposed to invest him with dangerous power, the territories of Bulwant Singh, equal in revenue to Allahabád, might have been conferred upon him. The Company, being then in possession of all these provinces, might, by its fervants, have adopted either of these systems.

To the first measure there are no well- Shaw Alfounded objections, and many advantages might lum be derived from it. The fum of three hundred and twenty-five thousand pounds might have been annually faved, which fum is now fent to a diftant province, from whence it never returns.. This latter circumstance is of more real prejudice to Bengal and the affairs of the Company, than if half the revenues of the province had been given to the emperor, upon condition of his keeping his court in that country Had Shaw Allum been put in possession of the dominions of Suja-ul-Dowla, the natural mactivity of his disposition, and the extraordinary expence and magnificence, which he is, in some measure, obliged to support, would have prevented him from being so dangerous a neighbour as even Sujaul-Dowla. The whole empire was in a state of rebellion; and we were only from. convenience his friends.

E 2

Arguments

manifest disadvantages. His territories border on the Mahrattois, Jates, and Rohillas; and he is under a perpetual apprehension from these nations. Had the measure, the advantages of which we have described, been taken, Suja ul-Dowla would have come in between him and these powers; but, at piesent, our army at Allahabâd becomes a fecurity to that prince; whose apprehensions would otherwise have induced him to adhere more firmly than he now shews an inclination, to his treaty with the Company.

State of Commerce in Bengal, under the Company.

THE prosperity and opulence which Bengal en-Observatijoyed during the government of the house of Ti- ons on the mur, and even under the revolted viceroys, proceeded from her lucrative commerce, as much as from the fertility of her foil. Rich in the industry of her inhabitants, she became independent of the partial rapine of impolitic governors, who plundered only to squander away. The money, which entered by injuffice at one door of the treasury, was carried out at another by luxury The court of the Nabob was the heart, which only received the various currents of wealth, to throw it with vigour, through every vein of the kingdom.

We may date the commencement of decline, prefent from the day on which Bengal fell under the do- of Bengal minion of foreigners; who were more anxious to improve the present moment to their own emolument, than, by providing against waste, to secure a permanent advantage to the British nation. With a peculiar want of forefight, they began to drain the refervoir, without turning into it any stream to prevent it from being exhausted. From observation, we descend to facts.

The

almost depopulated by the cruelties of Nadir Shaw; and, fince his affaffination, by unremitting civil wais. The few inhabitants, who escaped the rage of the fword, fit down in the midst of poverty. Georgia and Armenia, who shared in the troubles of Peifia, share also her untoward fate. Indigence has flut up the doors of commerce; vanity has difappeared with wealth, and men content themfelves with the coarse manufactures of their native countries. The Turkish empire has long declined on its fouthern and eastern fronticis Egypt rcbelled: Babylonia, under its Basha, revolted. The distracted state of the former has almost shut up the trade, by caravans, from Suez to Cairo; from the latter of which, the manufactures of Bengal were conveyed by fea to all the ports of the Ottoman dominions

The rapacity of the Basha of Bagdat, which is Syria, Baencreased by the necessity of keeping a great stand-bilonia, ing force to support his usurpation, has environed with terror the walls of Buffora, which circumstance has almost annihilated its commerce with Syria Scarce a caravan passes from the gulph of Persia to Aleppo once in two years, and when it does, it is but poor and fmall Formerly, every feafon, feveral rich and numerous caravans croffed the defart to Syria, but the few that venture at present, being too weak to protect themfelves against the wandering Arabs, are stopt by every tribe, and are obliged to purchase safety with exorbitant duties. Trade is in a manner unknown, the merchants of Bussora are ruined, and there were, last year, in the waienouses of that city, of the manufactures of Bengal, to the value of two hundred thousand pounds, which could not be fold for half the prime cost.

The number of independent kingdoms, which the reft of have started up from the ruins of the Mogul em- Hindost in pue,

To draw a conclusion from the observations Estimate made. I hough Bengal, by her industry, yields to Europe, of manufactures, to the annual amount of one million five hundred and feventy-feven thoufand five hundred pounds, for which she receives nothing, yet, if the balance of her trade with Asia amounts to one hundred thousand pounds, fhe may still continue to flourish under a proper fystem of internal regulation. The paradox is hitherto supportable by argument and proof, but there still remain heavy articles to be brought into the account against Bengal. Some of the articles, from their complicated nature, must be stated from opinion: Others rest on incontrovertible The estimate of the first shall be made as low as possible: The latter are established beyond the power of cavil itself.

The specie carried from Bengal by the expelled Nabob, Cassim Ali, is supposed to amount to

Specie carried away by men of property, who have deferted the kingdom fince the power of the company prevailed, The expences of the war, for one whole year, in the dominions of Suja-ul-Dowla, at five lacks per month; which, after deducting fifty lacks, paid by treaty by that prince, amounts to

Specie fent from Bengal to pay a brigade, confilting of feven thoufand men, stationed for five years, after the peace, at Allahabâd, at the annual expence of fifteen lacks

of specie to Bengal

 f_{1} , 1,250,000

2,500,000

125,000

937,500

Carry over

4,812,500

STATE OF BENGAL UNDER

STATE OF BENGAL I	INDER
Brought over £ Specie fent from that langdom to China and Madrafs, including the expences of troops on the coal, detached from the esta	4,812,500
blishment of Bengal	1,500,000
Specie brought to England	100,000
Teported of specie Deduct the imports of bullion for	6,412,500
twelve years, at the annual fum of one hundred thouland pounds	1 200,000
Decrease in the specie of Bengal since the accession of the com- pany to the dominion of that
Lingdom	5,212,500
Deduct the annual revenue fent	deprive every ions are, by ely rendered wof the for ingdom with ditional light empire, the eccived bul 1,687,500
in specie to Delhi	1,250,000

with her ancient commerce

Her pre f at compured

The kingdom of Bengal, it appears, has not, in the midft of her misfortunes, fallen off greatly from her former exports of manufactures. She full fends to Europe, within one hundred and ten thousand pounds a year of the quantity, for which the fine received the above balance of bullion, in the days of her prosperity. This, had not her specie been exported, would not have impoverished her. But let us suppose that her whole currency amounted to fifteen millions, the entire loss of a third part of that fum must have mevitably distressed her, and an annual decrease of near half a million mult, if not prevented, in a few years, totally run the little commerce that full remains. The prospect is gloomy. The taxes must be lesfened, and the rum, which we have brought on an unfortunite country, will recoil upon ourfelves.

437,500

Yearly acquifition in money

To illustrate the argument by comparison, Refigi-Were the paper-currency of Great Britain to-ons on the tally suppressed, and her gold and filver currency, which is estimated at seven millions, lest for the purposes of trade and taxation, it is evident, that rumous consequences must ensue, but none will pretend to affirm, that the nation, by such a mersure, would become one farthing poorer than before. Trade, however, from the want of a fufficient quantity of the fighs of wealth and property, would be cramped in all its veins. The interest of money, in spite of laws, would rife to an enormous pitch. The fame want of currency would, at the same time, become such a check upon luxury, that the price of labour, and especially of provisions, would fall, unless the latter were kept up by rigourously inforcing the present taxes without abatement. The price of Bengal, from the decrease of her specie, feels, rumous in fact, the miseries which we have in speculation Bengal just described. Were not her taxes inforced by oppreflion, would be followed by national ruin.

provisions, in that case, would rise every day, and the poor would daily become less able to purchase The people would, in a very few years, be stript of all their property, and national beggary oppression, provisions would fall in proportion to the decrease of wealth, supposing the number of inhabitants and flate of cultivation to continue the same But the reverse happens, from our en dearouring to keep up the revenues to their former pitch The farmer cannot fell his grain without a price, which bears a proportion to the rents which he is obliged to pay, whilft his cul tivation decreases for want of a sufficient stock. The confumer, at the fame time, must have food If he 1 a manufacturer or labourer he must raise his goods or his wages to answer the price of bread The evils of a forced flate of fociety encrease Famine, with all its horrors, enfues, and by In cepting away fome millions of wretched people. cives to the unhappy furvivors, the respite of a few vears

Observations on Monopolies

Pelleti Coa THE Monopolies established by the servants of the Company in Bengal, furnish an ample field for animadversion. But other writers have already occupied that province. The brevity which the Author of the Enquiry has prescribed to his work, induces him to pass lightly over ground that has been trodden before. It is superfluous to insist upon the prejudice which Monopoly has done to the natural rights of the natives, and to the privileges which they posselled, by prescription, from Desponsin itself. This part of the subject has been handled with ability by others we shall slightly touch upon what has escaped their observation.

en the

Salt in almost every country, is one of the ne cessaries of life. In Bengal, which still contains near fifteen millions of people, the consumption of this article must be very great; for, besides what they themselves consume, they mix great quantities with the food of their cattle. Salt is produced by filtrating the earth near the months of he Ganges and by then boiling the water which is impregnated with faline particles. The mocels is simple and cheap, where wood for fuel colls nothing. The low price at which falt could be conveyed through all the branches of the Ganges rendered it an advantageous article of trade with the inland ports of Hindostan quantities were were fent to Benaris and Milzapour, from the markets of which, the provinces Oud and Allahabad, the territories of the Raja of Bundela, and of all the petty princes of the kingdom of Malava, were supplied. This trade by a fociety of Monopolists in Calcutta, was seized in the year 175. Avaiice got the better of prudence, and a rage for present gain cut off all future prospects. The article of falt was raised two hundred per cent.; and the foreign purchasers, finding that they could be supplied at a much cheaper rate with rock-falt from the dominions of the Rohillas near Delhi, this valuable commerce at once was lost.

ъF

Beetle-nut and Tobacco have, by the strength Monepoof habit, become almost necessaries of life in hesinben-Hindostan. The first is produced in many parts of the Decan; and the latter is cultivated over all the empire There was, however, a confiderable exportation from Bengal in these articles; and it, unfortunately for that country, attracted the notice of the Monopolists But, as if Monopolies were not sufficient to destroy the inland commerce of Bengal, with the rest of Hindostan, an edict was issued, in the year 1768, prohibiting all the servants of the Company, the free merchants, Armenians, Portuguele, and all foreigners whatfoever.

knı

whatfoever, from carrying goods beyond the limits of our province, under the pain of con fifcation, and the feverest punishments inflicted on their agents

The Di

The Court of Directors, it is but juffice to declare, have invariably opposed the above recited destructive monopolies. But the commands of fugitive and transient mafters are weak in opposi-The fluctuations in Leadenhall tion to in erest fireet, deprived the mandates which issued from st of all their authority and the presidency abroad frequently received orders, from their constituents at home, with the fame inattention that the Nizâm of Golconda would pay to the Firman of the unfortunate Shaw Allum The Directors, in short are only to blame in an acquiescence to a disobedience to the orders of their predecessors in Carrying frequently the animolity of prior contention into their measures, they forgot the attention due to their own power in the pleafure of feeing a flur thrown on that of their opponents They are also blameable for the suspicious veil of fecreey with which they affect to cover their af The door of information is, in some mea fure, that up; the inferior fervants are precluded, by an ill founded fear, from laying open to them the state of Government abroad and it was perhaps the interest of their superior servants to conceal a part of the truth Substantial darkness has by these means settled on objects, which, it is even the interest of the Company, as well as of the nation, thould be known to the world

Mode of collecting the Revenues.

THE princes, whom we raifed in Bengal, va-Fugitive nished imperceptibly from their thrones. Light and unfubstantial as the shew of power with which, as in derifion, we invested them, they disappeared, like Romulus, but without a storm. benefits derived from former revolutions, created a love of change, and the angel of death, if not our friend, was opportune in his frequent visits to the Mulnud. In the course of five years, three Nabobs expired; and the unfledged fovereign, who acceded to the nominal government of Bengal on the March of 1770, has enjoyed already, confidering the times, a long reign. Nabobs, to own the truth, are useless, and they are dismissed to their fathers, without either ceremony or noise.

In the year 1765, upon the demise of Jaffier, Nabobs whom we had, for the first time, raised in 1757 to the government, for his convenient treachery to his master, Nijim-ul-Dowla, his son by a common proflitute, was, in the eighteenth year of his age, placed upon the throne, in the capital of Murshedabad. Soon after the accession of this prince, a noble governor, on the part of the Company, arrived at Calcutta, and executed the treaty which has furnished materials for a preceding fection Mahommed Riza, a man of less integrity than abilities, was made prime minister, activity being a virtue more necessary to the intention of his creation than honesty. The wretched Nıjım-ul-Dowla was a mere name, a figure of state more despicable, if possible, than the meanness of his family and parts. The whole executive government turned upon Mahommed Riza. A refident was fent from Calcutta to check check the accounts of the nominal government, as if one man, who knew very little of the lan guage, manners, and opinions of the people, could prevent the frauds of an artful miniter, and ten thouland of his dependents, verfed in the management of finance. The confequence might be torcfeen with little penetration. Unable, and perhaps unwilling to oppofe the current, the resident fell down with the stream, and became so far a check upon Mahommed, that he appropriated to hunfulf a part of what the minister might otherwise have thrown into his own treasure.

Mahom net K z i

Mahommed Riza, as a small salary of office, received annually one hundred and twelve thou fand five hundred pounds, with three hundred an I feventy five thousand pounds a year to be dif tributed in pentions among his friends m er, with his other good qualities, had no local attachment to friends They were of vari ous complexions and religions foir faced Furopeans as well as fwarthy Indians, and, though projetting Mahommedanism himself he was so far from being an enemy to the uncircumcifed, that it is find the most of his pensions and gratui ties were bestowed on good Christians born in G ca Britain and Ireland Mahommed, how ever did not take up his whole time with afts of benevolence to our nation He applied himfelf to butinels, and he was more rigid in executing the government which the revolted Nabobs had eitablished in Bengal, than fond of introducing muovations more favourable to the prosperity of the country

Impol ne

The Pabobs of Bengal it has been already observed, began the rumous policy of farming out the lands annually leaving the wretched tonants to the oppression and tyranny of temporary Ze in indars. At the commencement of every year, these there is a general congress of all the great sarmers, at the capital of Bengal; which meeting is, in the language of the country, called Punea. The object of the congress is to settle the accounts of the former year, and to give the lands for another, to the highest bidder. The competition between the sarmers is savourable to the private interest of Mahommed Riza, and his friend the resident; but it is destructive to the poor, and consequently to the Company's assars.

The charge of travelling, from the more distant and cruel divisions of the province, and the expense of living in the capital, are but a very incompderable part of the loss of the farmers in this visit to court. Pretences are never wanting to intimidate them, on account of their pall conduct, and where no competitors offer of themselves, some are created by the minister, to raise anxiety and terror. Prefents are an infallible remedy for qualling all enquiries into former oppressions, and a bribe secures to them the power of exercising, for another year, their tyrannies over the unhappy tenants. It would be endless to trace the latrigues of the farmers upon this occasion. it would be difficult to expose all the artful villany of the minister. The Zemindars, however wealthy they may be, feign fuch poverty, as not to be able to make up the balances of the preceding year. They have even been known to carry the farce fo far, as to fuffer a fevere whipping before they would produce their money

The avarice of Mahommed Riza is the cause of mode of this unmanly behaviour in the wretched sarmers. When they seem rich, the impost is raised; and the bribe must in proportion be greater. Their love of money is often more powerful than the fear of bodily pain. When they have long groaned under the lash, some banker or money-proker Vol. III.

appears, who, for the exorbitant interest of ten per cent per month, discharges the debt. The farmer, by such means as these, often deceives the vigilance of the minister and resident, and obtains his lands for another year, because no one essentially offer a sum which the possession on much dissipation to pay. A friend in the secret, gives security for the rents, and a present, thrown into the hands of the minister, suspends, for the time, the discipline of the whip

the rev

In the year 1767, the Author of the Enquiry, who resided at the time, in Bengal, had the cu riosity to calculate the expence of the Bundubust, or yearly settlement He formed his estimate from the accounts of various Zemindars, and he avers, without exaggeration, that the expences amounted to twenty seven and one half per cent of the rents of their lands which may amount to a million sterling. These trivial perquisties were shared between Mahonimed Riza his friends, and the bankers of Murshedabad. The place of the Company's resident at the Durbar, or the court of the Nabob, was HONESTLY worth one hundred and sitty thousand pounds a year.

The b d

These embezzlements and fraudulent practices were not however so detrimental to the Company's assume that so the actual decrease in the revenues as from the general depravity of manners, and the oppressions which they introduced. When the sources of government are corrupted they possion the whole stream. Every petty officer in the state every clerk of the revenues assumed the tyrant in his own department. Justice was totally suspended and the sear of being plundered by a superior was the only check that remained against the commission of the most arroccous crimes. Every instance of abstaining from the most cruel oppressions, proceeded from indolence every act of tyranny from the love of money. The distemper of avarice, in the extreme, seemed to infect all, whom the wrath of God against a devoted people, had placed in power.

The confequences of this mode of letting the confelands of Bengal, were fuch as might, with little quences forefight, have been expected, had not stronger impressions, than those of reason been necessary to convince men of a profitable error. Nothing in the conquered provinces was premeditated but rapine. Every thing, but plunder, was left to chance and necessity, who impose their own laws. The farmers, having no certainty of holding the lands beyond the year, made no improvements. Their profit must be immediate, to satisfy the hand of Avarice, which was suspended over their heads. Impressed with the uncertainty of their situation, they raised the rents, to the last farthing, on the wretched tenants; who, unwilling to forfake their ancient habitations and household gods, sub-initted to impositions which they could not pay. They looked up to Heaven in their distress; but no redress remained for the wretched.

Year after year brought new tyrants, or con- of that firmed theold, in the practice of their former oppref- mode fions. The tenants, being, at length, ruined, the farmers were unable to make good their contracts with government Their cruelty to their inferiors recoiled, at length, on themselves. Many of them were bound to flakes and whipped, but their poverty ceased to be feigned. Their complaints were heard in every square of Murshedabâd, and not a few of them expired in agonies, under the lash. Many of the inferior tenants, reduced to despair, fled the country, hoping to delive from other despotisms, that lenity, which our indolence, to speak the best of ourselves, denied. Those that remained were deprived of the small flock stock necessary for cultivation, and a great part of the lands lay waste Every governor thought it incumbent upon him to keep up the revenues to their former pitch but, in spite of the per mitted cruelty of Mahommed Riza, they conti nued, every year, to decrease It could not have happened otherwise, unless Heaven had wrought miracles as a reward for our virtues

W retched

In proportion as an unfortunate people became flate of the less able to bear the established taxation, the modes of collecting it became more oppressive entire battalions were added to our military establishment to enforce the collections ried terror and ruin through the country, but poverty was more prevalent than obstinacy every This new force became an enormous expence to the Company, and the unnatural pref fure on the people raifed the price of provisions The manufacturers, to be able to purchase bread. shewed an inclination to raise the price of their goods. It was foon perceived that, should this be permitted, the manufactures of Bengal would not answer in Europe, so as even to indemnify the Company for prime cost, for duties and other ex pences, exclusive of the profit which a commer cial body had a right to expect. The prices must be kept down, but this could not be done with out violence Provisions became daily dearer; and the demand for goods encreased

from the officers

The officers chiefly employed in the manage ment of the revenues, being needy adventurers from Persia and the upper India, carried avarice, as well as the arbitrary ideas of their own distract ed governments, into their departments tous to obtain an immediate advantage to them felves they forgot the interest of their employ ers, and practifed every species of rapine and violence on the timid inhabitants of Bengal wealth.

wealth, which, in the space of a few years, they accumulated, enabled them to return into their native countries, and thus they surnished another cause of the decline of specie in the kingdom. These foreign collectors maintained a numerous train of needy dependents, who, under the protection of their tyrannical masters, assumed the privilege of rapine and peculation. Venality ceased to be a crime; and dexterity in the art of imposition, was deemed a recommendation to the first offices of trust.

Mahommed Riza made it his invariable policy of gove reto keep the fervants of the Company in ignoment rance of the true flate of affairs, and when any deception was practifed, another was formed to conceal it from view. He entered into a collusion with many of the farmers. Occasional accounts were framed; and the usual accounts were studiously involved in inextricable confusion. Men, averse to trouble, throw them aside; and neglect their duty in their indolence. The fervants of Mahommed Riza not only escape censure, but retain their places, and thus iniquity furnishes to itself a new field, for a repetition trict, without imposing upon the village in which he chuses to rest, a tax of rice, fowl, kid, fruits. and every other luxury of the table, for himfelf, and his dependents He also levies fines, at plea fure, for frivolous offences, and under various, and often false pretexts. The crime confists. in the ability of the person to pay the fine, and nothing but the excess of misery and poverty is fafe from the griping hand of Avarice.

of the col 1-900

The Zemindars, or principal farmers, copy the officers of government, in tyranny The Riots. or wretched tenants, are forced to give their la bour gratuitoully, to this transitory lord of a year. whenever he chuses to employ their toil in his fields. when their own farms he walte for want of cultivation. There is not one article of confumption with which the poor tenants are not obliged to supply the general farmer The brought is frequently more than his confumpt demands, and, in these cases, they are forced under the inspection of his servants, to carry their own property to market, and to dispose of it for the use of their lord. They even frequent ly raise or fall the exchange upon the roupees, against the wretched husbandmen, and, without even the firenoth of cuftom, they exact, from the lower fort, fees upon births, marriages, and There is fearce an occurrence upon which they have not invented arbitrary imposts

Neelgence t the Company

The Company, having never examined into the real tenures by which many poffess their lands, left an ample field for fequestration, fraud, and The Talookdars, or the favou encroachment rites and dependents of former Nabobs, hold, by grants from their patrons, extensive tracks of land Some of these grants convey a kind of freehold, others, estates at a very low rent, possessing, be fides, particular exemptions and extraordinary immunities immunities These alienations were never valid, in the days of the empire, without being renewed by every viceroy, and no good reason remains, why they should now exist, as the illegal means of oppression, in the hands of petty tyrants. They have even added encroachment upon the adjacent lands, to the injudice by which they possess their own, and they have prefumed to lay tolls on ferries, and imposts upon markets, even beyond the limits of their imperfect grants. This encroachment on the rights of the Company is, however, a kind of benefit to the people. The possessor of the grant, confiders the lands which it describes, as his own property, and he is, from a natural felfishness, more a friend to his interiors than the fugitive Zemindar of a year

To render clear affairs hitherto little under-meximinflood, we must descend into more particulars. ing in o The frauds and oppressions committed in Bengal, in the collection of the revenue, are as various as they are without number. The interior policy subsisting in that kingdom, will throw new light on the subject Some of the lands in Bengal go under the defignation of Comâr, having no native tenants, being cultivated by vagrant husbandmen, who wander from place to place in quest of labour. A farmer takes frequently large tracts of these lands upon contract He obliges himself to be answerable to government for the produce, but he keeps the accounts himself. The vagrant husbandmen whom he employs, having neither implements of agriculture nor flock, are, from time to time, supplied with fmall fums by the farmer, and, when the harvest is gathered in, he appropriates to himself two thirds of the crop, after paying himself from the remainder, for the interest of the sums advanced to the vagrants. The accounts delivered in to government

lxxn

government contain every thing but the truth, and this mode, from our indolence, becoming most profitable to the Zemindar, he wishes to depopulate the country, in some measure, for his own gain warfour.

The lands, which are under the immediate ma nagement of government, are, in the language of the country, called Cofs They differ from the Comar in various particulars. Stewards are appointed to superintend them, without the power of making new contracts with the tenants, or of raising upon them the rents, being accountable only for the rents of the lands, as they ftand upon the rolls of the diffrict. These rolls, how ever, are in general false and desective lands, to ferve particular friends, are greatly un der rated, and others are entirely concealed by the address of the stewards To grant certain immunities to the flewards themselves, was for merly much in practice. They were permitted to posses, for their subsistence, gardens, pastures, ponds for fish, and fields for rice. These privi leges have been greatly enlarged fince Bengal fell under the Company and the stewards have fixed no decent bourds to their encroachments

ficitions

The lands diffinguished by the name of Riotty, are possessed and cultivated by the native inhabitants under Zeimindars, or farmers, who contract for them with government for an annual sum. The rents are partly levied on a measurement, and partly on the various productions which are sent to market and converted into money by the farmer. The rumous effects of this mode of collecting the revenue have been already explained. There are besides great quantities of waste lands, which are of two kinds, lands struck off the public books, at a former period, which are now cultivated, but not brought to account, and fuch as are really waste, which comprehend at least one fourth part of Bengal. Of the former there are many large fertile tracts, well cultivated, which have been appropriated by Zemindars and their dependents; and they find means, in their accounts with an indolent government, to avoid all ferutiny into their usurpations.

To add to the mismanagement, lands are set and encroachapart for almost every officer under the govern-ments. ment; a mode of salary which makes no appearance upon the annual accounts, but which, notwithstanding, amounts to more than all the apparent charges of collection. Great hurt arises to the revenues from this practice, and the abuse fublists without reformation. The lands of all the officers ought instantly to be refumed, and their falaries to be paid out of the exchequer. Many of the collectors have also imposed partial duties upon the subject; and thus have added oppression and injustice to the people, to their usurpations upon government.

Justice is suffered to be greatly perverted by the Perversion officers above specified, and others, who, from of justice their inherent art or abilities, substitute their own decisions where government have established no legal judges. The custom of imposing mulcts and fines in all cases, is an intolerable grievance to a wretched people. The rich fuffer, by having money to give, the poor, by being deprived of restitution, because they have none. Every Mahommedan, who can mutter over the Coran, raises himself to a judge, without either licence or appointment; and every Brahmin, at the head of a tribe, distributes justice according to his own fancy, without controul. The latter threatens the ignorant with the dreadful punishment of excommunication, and thus his own moderation becomes the measure of the sums which he receives from an unfortunate race of men.

Sltary t go ti onsnada m 1770

Such in the year 1767, was the true flate of Pengal but, it is to be hoped, that the regula tions of 1770 have reformed many abuses. A plan was in that year digested, and begun to be carried into execution by men who could not be strangers to any one of the above particulars: though, from their first adherence to the regul lations of a noble governor, to which they were tied down by express orders from the Court of Directors, the abuses were permitted to exist till the country was beggared and denonulated effect which the plan may have, cannot yet be estimated with precision Were we, however, to judge from the improvements in Burdwan, which has been under the management of a very able fervant for fome years past, and has greatly en creased in revenue and population, the new re gulations will be attended with very confiderable advantages to the Company But even Burdwan owed part of its prosperity to the misery and dis trefs of the furrounding districts adopted will be far from effectuating the reforma tion and encrease of the revenue which are now required, for the balance of the revenue could, in the year 1770, hardly discharge the four hun dred thousand pounds paid annually to govern ment If our information is suft, what mighty advantages have the Company derived from their great acquisitions in Bengal?

Idea of the present Government of Bengal

Total file total suspension of all justice, among the pension of all justice, among the pension of all justice, among the pension of the violence of the times, instead of being protected protected by British laws, found that they had not even the justice of a despot to depend upon when they were wronged. The officers of the Nabob, AS THEY WERE CALLED, committed every species of violence, under the pretence of the orders of the Company. When any person complained to the governor and council, he was referred back to those very men of whom he had complained. The heavy crime of having appealed to British justice was thrown in his face, by oppressors who were at once judges and party, and ruin and corporal punishment were added to his other wrongs. The spirit which afferts the natural rights of mankind, was called infolence, till it was totally broken by oppression; and men were even cautious in venting their complaints in fecret, fearing that the very walls of then most private apartments had ears.

These grievances, however, proceeded not Apology from the inhumanity of the British governors in Compa-Bengal. The Author of the Enquiry can aver, ny's goverfrom personal knowledge, that the successors of nois a certain noble lord were men of probity and honour, enemies to oppression and ciuelty of every But the whole weight of fuch a monstrous and heterogeneous chaos of government, confisting of military, political, commercial and judicial affairs, falling upon the shoulders of men unexperienced in the regulation and management of the great machine of state, it was impossible for them to give the necessary attention to all departments. The multiplicity of affairs overwhelmed them with its weight, and the kingdom suffered more from a total want of system, than from any premeditated defign.

The courts of justice, which the wisdom of the Every house of Timur had established in the cities, and thing left to the sumvarious divisions of the provinces, were either an-mary decinihilated, fions of Michom-med Riza.

nihilated, or they lost their power under the sum mary despotism of the revolted Nabebs. Ma hommed Riza, as the ading minister, had the whole executive power in his hands, and those who retained the name of judges were only the executioners of his partial and violent decisions. The Company's governor could not, in the na ture of things, enter into the cause of every individual, in a very populous kingdom. When he consulted his own ease, he yielded to a kind of necessity, and he had to his own conscience the plausible excuse of baving remanded the complaints to the judgment of a man who was per fectly acquainted with the manners, customs and prejudices of the natives

Impolitic and sun-

But even friendship itself will not permit the Writer of the Enquiry to justify the political con duct of any of those men who possessed the su preme power in Bengal Many regulations, obvious in themselves, might have been formed. many pernicious practices be abolished, which have been continued either through negligence or motives of another kind Among the latter. ought to be numbered the custom of striking roupees every year, and issuing them out at five per centum above the real weight and standard To explain the subject, a dry differtation must be introduced The new-coined roupees are issued from the mint at fixteen per centum more than the current roupee, a coin merely imaginary, for the convenience of reducing all money to a certain denomination The Sicca roupee, as the coin is called, continues to circulate, at the above value, till towards the latter end of the first year The dealers in money, as the roupee loses three per centum of its value at the beginning of the second year, refuse to receive it in payment, without without a deduction of one or two per centum as it advances to that period.

In the beginning of the fecond year, the rou-conduct of pee, by this most preposterous of all regulations, has lost three per centum of its imaginary value. In this manner it continues gradually to fall, till the third year after coinage; and, from that time forward it remains at eleven per centum, the intrinsic value of the silver. The possessor of the roupee may then, upon the payment of three per centum to the mint, have the same re-coined into a new Sicca of the imaginary value of fixteen per centum. This gain of two per centum is intended as an inducement to bring in the filver, that the government may have an opportunity, every year, of robbing the public of three per centum upon the greater part of their current specie. To support this most iniquitous system, the revenues are directed to be paid in the new Sicca loupees, otherwise the money-changer will make such deductions, as must occasion a very considerable loss to the unfortunate people. This evil is attended by another. The course of exchange in the markets varies toward the worst, from this cruel regulation by government, from combinations among the bankers, and the demand for particular roupees to discharge the revenue.

This mode of levying an annual tax on the fil-the mint. ver currency, is not of the invention of the British governors of Bengal. The regulation derived its first existence from the well-known bankers, the Jaggat Seats of Murshedabad, in the short reign of the inconfiderate Surage-ul-Dowla error lies in its being adopted. But we drop this part of the subject, and return to the present state of government. To do justice to the Court of Directors, their repeated orders have checked the violence and rapine of the nominal government of the Nabob. Some of the Company's fervants

fervants superintend, in various divisions of the country, the collection of the revenue. The pension, and emoluments of Mahommed Riza have been lessened with his power. The kingdom, in point of civil regulation, if civil regulation can exist without regular courts of justice, is on a better sooting than before. But much remains to be done! The distresses of an unfor runate people continue to increase, through causes which must be explained.

General Observations

Conclus-

THE idea of the present state and government of Bengal conveyed, in the preceding sections, justifies the following conclusion. That the Company, in the management of that great kingdom, have hitherto mistaken their own interest. To increase the revenues was the point to which their fervants invariably directed their attention, but the means employed deseated their views, and became ruinous to a people whom their arms had subdued. Though they exported the specie, though they checked commerce by monopoly, they heaped oppression upon additional taxes, as if rigour were necessary to power.

de-inced

Much penetration was not necessary to discover, that it was not by the revenues of Bengal alone that either the British nation or the Company were to be enriched. A country destitute of mines, deprived of foreign commerce, must, however opulent from better times in the end be exhaust ed. The transitory acquisition, upon the opinion that all the specie of Bengal had centered in Great Britain, would have no desirable effect. The furgitive wealth would glide through our hands, and we would have only our folly to regret, when the fources would happen to become dry. Bengal, without ruin to itself, could spare none of its specie; and the objects to which our aim should have been directed, are as obvious as they are falutary. We ought to have encouraged agriculture, the trade with the rest of Asia, and internal manufacture.

Agriculture constitutes the wealth of every from the state, not merely commercial. Bengal, a kingdom six hundred miles in length, and three hundred in breadth, is compoled of one valt plain of the most fertile soil in the world. Watered by many navigable rivers, inhabited by fifteen millions of industrious people, capable of producing provisions for double the number, as appears from the defarts which oppression has made; it seems marked out, by the hand of Nature, as the most advantageous region of the earth for agriculture. Where taxes are moderate, where fecurity of property is joined to a rich foil, cultivation will encrease, the necessaries of life will become cheap, as well as the gross materials which manufacturers require. Manufacturers, by these means, would not only fall in their price, but they would be produced in a greater quantity; larger investments might be made by the company, the confumption would encrease, and the profits rise. Bengal can, in short, be only useful in the prosperity and industry of its inhabitants. Deprive it of the last remains of its wealth, and you ruin an unfortunate people, without enriching yourselves.

In the place of those placed regulations, which preceding render mankind useful to their lords, we substituted, with preposterous policy, force, the abrupt expedient of barbarous conquerors. The pressure of taxation has, in the space of a few years, trebled the price of provisions of all kinds. The Company

i have,

have, in the mean time, been endeavouring, by every possible measure, to encrease their investments, without railing the price. Various oppref fions, have, for this purpose, been adopted wretched expedient is of short duration manufacturer may, for one year, perhaps for two, redouble his industry, but whill the work of his hands is forced from him at a flated and arbitrary price, he finks under an uncommon effort, subject to despair The principal servants of the Company, to conceal the evil, have found themselves obliged, either to remit in the quality of the goods, or to raise the price to the manufacturer Both expedients have been in part adopted, but it is a temporary remedy, without the hopes of effectuating a cure.

Obferva

The reasons already mentioned have contributed to destroy the trade of Bengal with the rest of Asia Merchants can only procure the gleanings of the Company The quality is inferior, and the prices high Nations, formerly supplied from Bengal, found themselves under the necessity of establishing manufactures of the same kind at home, or to adapt their cloathing to their poverty Argument on this head is superfluous. The plan must be totally and radically changed. The question is not to oblige the people to become filk winders, formers and weavers, and to take he fruits of their labour, as it is proctifed at p el m ai an arbura ry price. Industry cannot or force up in a people, let them derive advantage from toil indolence shall lose its hold in clinity expires under the foolish despotism which deteats its own ends, and human nature, in its most wretched state, revolts against labout which produces nothing but an increase of toil

${ t P} { t L} { t A} { t N}$

FOR RESTORING BENGAL

TO ITS FORMER PROSPERITY.

Preliminary Observations:

OVERNMENT, among the natives of a Reflecti-Country, rises imperceptibly from that impenetra- ons on the ble obscurity with which time and barbarism have ment of covered the origin of mankind. When states are fubdued by foreign enemies, who are advanced in the arts of civil life, a new constitution generally starts up from their pressure upon the old. laws of the conquerors must necessarily supersede fome of the regulations of the conquered; but the ancient form of government remains all the leffer departments of the state. When the Patans conquered India, when the Moguls extended their empire over that country, many of the indigenous laws of the northern nations of Asia were introduced; but the great system, in most of its parts, descended from the regulations which Brahma transmitted, with his followers, from remote antiquity.

Vol. III. G The

lxxxu

Defien of the Author

The British nation have become the conquerors of Bengal, and they ought to extend some part of their own fundamental jurisprudence to secure their conquests To call the possessions of the Company by any other name, as to leave them un defined The fword is our tenure, and not the I irman of an unfortunate prince, who could not give what was not his own. The thin veil of the commission for the Dewanny is removed, and we fee a great kingdom at last in our power, whose revolutions we directed before. It is an absolute conquest, and it is so considered by the world. This it was necessary to premise. The Author of the Enquiry will now proceed to his plan for restoring our conquests to their former prosperity But he proceeds with diffidence he fees the mag nitude of the subject, he feels his own want of abilities. He hopes not to escape without cen fure, as he confesses himself liable to error, but he shall answer his own purpose, if he can throw some rays of light upon a subject, which, though interesting to the nation, continues still involved in obscurity

Proposal for establishing landed Property

r ngement proposed

POLICY precedes regulation in every fociety, and a nation has public before it has private concerns. The great line of general arrangement is prior to the inferior detail of government, the latter being necessarily a superstructure raised on the foundation of the former. In Bengal we are to suppose, that a new treaty is to settle its great affairs, otherwise we build on the sand, and the rain comes and washes all away. We shall only mention a subject on which we may hereafter en large.

large. Give the province of Allahabâd to Sujaul-Dowla, the territories of Bulwant Singh to the emperor, recal your troops into your own dominions, make Patna or Mongeei the residence of the representative of Timur, degrade the wretched Mubârick from his nominal Nabobship, and let Mahommed Riza RESIGN. These arrangements require no address, the persons mentioned were the creatures, and they still continue the flaves of your Besides, the measures will not displease the parties. The province of Allahabâd will fatisfy Suja-ul-Dowla for the territories of Bulwant Singh; Shaw Allum will prefer Patna to his residence at Allahabâd, a small pension is more eligible for Mubârick, than the dangerous name of power which he does not hold, and Mahommed Riza has derived from his services the means of fecuring an affluent retreat for his age. If it shall appear necessary to retain Bengal by an Imperial Firmân, let it be changed into that of perpetual Nabob.

This fundamental regulation being settled, ano- Reflectither of equal boldness, but no less practicable, landed ought to succeed. An established idea of proper-property ty is the fource of all industry among individuals, and, of course, the foundation of public prosperity. When mankind are restrained from possesfing any thing which they can call their own, they are but passengers in their native country, and make only those flight accommodations which fuit fugitive wayfarers through the land. A carelessness for industry is the natural consequence of the transitoriness of the fruits of toil; and men sit fluggishly down, with their hands in their bosoms, when they are not for a moment certain of possesfing property, much less of transmitting it to their posterity or friends.

The

lxxxiv

Propolal for fla billing

The decline of agriculture, of commerce, and of trade, in the kingdom of Bengal, have been already represented, and the ruinous confequences of farming out the lands from year to year, have been amply explained Though long leafes might greatly contribute to remove these evils there is no pollibility of doubt, but the establishment of real property would more immediately and effectu ally promote a certainty of prosperity to the king dom Let, therefore, the Company be impower ed, by act of Parliament, to dispose of all the lands in Bengal and Behar, in perpetuity, at an annual fum, not less than the present rents fingle operation would have a chain of beneficial effects. The first fale of the lands would raise a fum which cannot be estimated with any degree of precision. but we may venture to affirm, that. should the scheme be properly advertised before it was to take place, and a fourth part of the lands only to be disposed of every year, until the whole should be fold, no less than ten millions, besides a certain and perpetual revenue, might be drawn from the hidden treasures of Bengal, and especi ally from the other opvient kingdoms of Hindof tan

i di poperty Mankind it is easy to perceive, would, in an empire where no real property exists, crowd to a country in which they could enjoy the fruits of their labour, and transmit them to their possenty Cultivation viould be the consequence of security. The farmer would improve, to the height, lands that were his own. The revenue would be regularly paid without the heavy expence of a band of oppressors, under the name of Collectors, who suck the very vitals of the country, and nothing would be required but a few comptours for the purpose of receiving the rents. The whole face of the country would be changed in a few years.

in the place of straggling towns, composed of miferable huts, half of which are washed away every season by the rain, great and opulent cities would arise. Inhabitants would crowd into Bengal from every corner of India, with their wealth, the deficiency in the currency would be restored, commerce would distuse itself through every vein, and manufactures would flourish to a degree before unknown.

Men of speculation may suppose, that the secu-in Bengil rity of property to the natives might infuse a spirit of freedom, dangerous to our power, into our Indian subjects. Nature herself seems to have denied liberty to the inhabitants of the torrid zone. To make the natives of the fertile foil of Bengal free, is beyond the power of political arrangement. The indolence which attends the climate, prevents men from that constant activity and exertion, which is necessary to keep the nice balance of free-Their religion, their inflitutions, their manners, the very dispositions of their minds, form them for pallive obedience. To give them property would only bind them with stronger ties to our interest; and make them more our subjects; or if the British nation prefers the namemore our flaves.

Men who have nothing to lose, are only en-Its great flaved by disunion; and the terror of the impending sword. Drive them to the last verge of poverty, and despair will stand in the place of spirit, and make them free. Men possessed of property are enslaved by their interest, by their convenience, their luxury and their inherent sears. We owe out freedom to the poverty of our ancestors, as much as to the rude independence of their servicious barbarism. But it is even difficult, in the cool air of our climate, to retain, in the midst of luxury and wealth, the vigour of mind necesfary to leep us free. To confer property on the inhabitants of Bengal, will never raife in their minds a fpirit of independence. Their fole hopes of retaining that property, will be derived from our policy and valour. When we fall, their lands will deviate to other heirs.

XXXVi

and imme

The revenues of Bengal, when properly paid. amount to four millions Should this fum an pear too fmall for perpetuity, many ways and means of encreasing the taxes, without raising the rents, will prefent themselves The British nation, famous for their political freedom, are full more famous for their judgment and wildom in im nofing taxations Let them transfer to the Banks of the Ganges, a part of that science of sinance. which has so much distinguished their councils at home. The wealth of the people of Bengal is a treafury which will never fail, if drawn upon with judgment Faxes may rife, in a just proportion, to the wealth which this regulation will inevitably throw into our dominions in the East

advan tages

Very extensive possessions in the hands of an individual, are productive of pernicious confe quences in all countries, they ought, therefore to be prevented in the present regulation the purchasers be confined to a certain quantity of land, not exceeding, upon any account, fifty thousand roupees a year To prevent the accu mulation of landed property, let the spirit of the lans of a commonwealth be adopted, and the lands be divided equally among all the male iffue of the proprietor Let the moveable property be divided among the Mahommedan part of our lub jects according to the laws of the Coran the Hindoos, in the fame manner, retain their own laws of inheritance, which are clear, fimple, and defined

Paper Currency

TIIE absolute establishment of landed property, would create a perfect considence in our faith, A proposal among our subjects in the East, and this circum- for estastance leads to another regulation, which, if adopt-blishing ed, would have a great and immediate effect on the prosperity of Bengal. The want of a sufficient quantity of specie for the purposes of trade, and the common intercourses among mankind, is one of the greatest evils under which Bengal at present labours. Let, therefore, a paper currency be introduced, a measure at once salutary, easy, and practicable Let a bank be immediately established at Calcutta, for the convenience of Europeans. This would, by becoming familiar to the natives, prepare them for a more general paper currency The mode of carrying this into execution, is left in the hands of those better acquainted with the nature of banking, than the Author of the Enquiry.

To destroy, at once, the fraudulent science of exchange, which proves fo detrimental to trade in currency. Bengal, a current coin ought to be established, to pass without variation, for its fixed and intrinsic value. This was, in some degree, attempted by a noble governor, but he failed in his first principles, by imposing an arbitrary value upon his coin, not less than twenty per cent. above its intrinsic worth. No other reason is necessary for the bad fuccess of this coinage. Though a decimal division of money is the most rational and commodious; yet entirely to change the forms of a country, in that respect, might be attended with great inconvenience. Let the 10upee, therefore, confist, as at present, of sixteen of the imaginary Anas, which are now used in accounts in Bengal. The Pice, which is the twelfth part of an Ana, may be continued as the imaginary coin, but a copper coin of one half of an Ana, would

PLAN FOR RESTORIN lerryin

would answer the subdivisions c greatly beneficial to the poor Its great

The unmediate fall of the of money, which prevails in I one of the first effects of thus per centum is the present intere owing to infecurity, as to the v Men of undoubted and establish dy to give this great premium they can turn the money to a gr ate advantage Were every m paper currency, to bring his w the market, monopoly, in sp. would be at an end, and trade ex a thousand channels not knows The confequence would cial, Bengal would draw great (ney from all the regions of Asia. ing herfelf, be rendered capable taxes upon different articles, as the augmentation of the revent

and lm

proper to impole Napal, Thibet, Ava, Arraca

mediate Cochin-china, China, and almo in the Eastern ocean, produce g that metal feems only to be four Diarbekir Japan and China contains Afia has enriched it in all ages, exc lance of its commerce against E thor of the Enquiry means not he drawn from the East Bengal, and make it one of the in the world, whilft we migh manufactures, the furplus of 1 out damaging either its foreign (nal prosperity

blished on impartial justice, Bengal to its former prosperity and splendor. Let the lands be disposed of in property: let a paper currency be established. Every individual would, in such a case, become industrious in improving his own estate; provisions would fall to a third part of the prefent price; the country would assume a new face, and the people wear the aspest of joy. Immense tracts of rich land, which now, with their woods, conceal the ruins of great cities, would again be cultivated; and new provinces arise out of those marshy islands, near the mouth of the Ganges, which are, at prefent, the wild haunts of the rhinoceros and tiger.

Monopolics.

THERE is no maxim in commerce better ef-Monopotablished, than the destructive tendency of mono-lies polies. In Bengal, its recent evils are well-known and abhorred. A law must provide against it; otherwise every other regulation will be made in vain. The inhabitants must be permitted to enjoy a free trade; subject, however, to such imposts upon various articles, excepting those of either the growth or manufacture of Great Britain, as may be thought reasonable from time to time. Gross articles, necessary for carrying on the finer manufactures, ought, however, to be exempted from duty, and every encouragement possible given to the export trade.

Free merchants ought to be encouraged; nei-abolified ther must they be excluded from the inland trade, as that circumstance would place the subjects of Great Britain on a worse footing than foreigners, whom we cannot, without violence, prevent from trading trading wherever they please Let, however, the residence of the free merchants be confined to Calcutta, as the influence which all the natives of British have acquired over the inhabitants of Bengal, is so great, that the selsish can convert it into the means of oppression. The Indian agents of British traders will not carry, among a wretched people, the same terror which clothes their masters, whom it is a kind of facrilege not to obey, in their most unjust commands.

Superior fervants debarred from trade

The fervants of the Company will have many of objections to this proposal But the management the revenues, and of the general trade, which must remain in their hands, will full give them superior advantages, sufficient to gratify all their reasona ble defires. The influence of a member of the council will, without doubt, enable any man, in that high station, to engrols a share of the trade. almost equal to a partial monopoly Should even a man of that rank be so self-denied, as not to take advantage of the influence annexed to his place, his attention to commerce would encroach on the time allotted for public affairs Let him, therefore, when he rifes to the board, be debar red from trading, either directly or indirectly, by fevere penalties of law, and let there an ample allowance be made for his fervices, from the funds of the Company

Religion

An ab o-

MEN who fubmit to bodily fervitude, have been known to revolt against the slavery imposed on their minds. We may use the Indians for our benefit in this world, but let them serve them selves as they can in the next. All religions must be tolerated in Bengal, except in the practice of some fome inhuman customs, which the Mahommedans have already, in a great measure, destroyed. We must not permit young widows, in their virtuous enthusiasm, to throw themselves on the funeral pile, with their dead husbands, nor the fick and aged to be drowned, when then friends despair of their lives.

The Hindoo religion, in other respects, inspires toleration the purest morals. Productive, from its principles, of the greatest degree of subordination to authority, it prepaies mankind for the government of foreign lords. It supplies, by its wellfollowed precepts, the place of penal laws, and it renders crimes almost unknown in the land. The peaceable fentiments which it breaths, will check the more warlike doctrines promulgated by the Coran. The prudent successors of Timus faw that the Hindoo religion was favourable to their power; and they sheathed the sword, which the other princes of the Mahommedan persuasion employed in establishing their own faith, in all their conquests. Freedom of conscience was always enjoy- of all relied in India in the absence of political freedom.

Attention must be paid to the usages and very prejudices of the people, as well as a regard for their religion. Though many things of that kind may appear abfurd and trivial among Europeans, they are of the utmost importance among the In-The least breach of them may be productive of an expulsion from the fociety, a more dreadful punishment Draco himself could not devise But the caution about religion is superfluous: these are no converting days. Among the list of crimes committed in Bengal, persecution for religion is not to be found, and he that will confent to part with his property, may carry his opinions away with freedom.

The Execution Promer

Padadion on the

MIC great path of general regulation is with less difficulty traced, than the minute lines which carry the current of government from the center to the extremities of the flate. Practice refife theory more on this fubiedt than in any other: and the wifest legislators can neither foresee nor prevent obflacles, which may rife in the progress In a country where the body of the people meet annually, in their representatives, to new inconveniencies new remedies may be instant ly applied, and even the mandate of the defnot lofes half its tyranny, in the expedition with which it oppoles evil

mode of

The distance of Bengal from the eye of the legillation; British legislature, render it extremely difficult for them to frame laws against every emergency that may arife, and it is equally difficult, with propriety, to create a legislative authority in a kingdom, which cannot, in the nature of things, have a representative of its own The executive power being vested in the governor and council, it is dangerous to trust them with the legislative, and it is impossible to permit the court of justice. which we mean to propose, to make those laws upon which they are to decide The least of two evils is preferred by the prudent. Let the gover nor and council fuggest annually, in their gene ral letter, the necessary regulations, and these, after being duly weighed by the Company, in their collective body at home, be laid before parliament, to be by them, if found just, necessary and equitable, framed into a law 1he general laws for the government of Bengal being, by the British legislature once established, the inconvent ences which may artie in India, will neither be fo great nor detrimental as to occasion much mischief for one, or even two years; in which time, the proposed regulations, fent home by the governor and council, will return to them with the force of

The executive power, in its full extent, as at the counpresent, must be vested in a president and council, cil; of which the chief justice and commander in chief of the troops ought to be, ex officio, members. The number should be encreased to sixteen, of which any five, with the prefident, may form a board; and ten always to refide at Calcutta, exclusive of the chief justice and the commander in chief, should even the peaceableness of the times permit him to be absent from the army. The four remaining counsellors should be directed to reside in the capitals of the larger districts, into which, for the benefit of justice, we shall hereafter divide the provinces of Bengal and Behâr. The business for forming regulations to make a foundation of a law, being of the last importance, ought never to come before less than ten members in council, of whom the chief justice ought invariably to be one.

Let a general board of revenue be established boards of at Calcutta, at which a member of the council revenues is to preside. Let this board, in its inferior departments, be conducted by the Company's fervants, and let it receive the correspondence and check the accounts of four other boards of the same kind, but of inferior jurisdiction, to be fixed at Dacca, Murshedabad, Mongeer, and Patna. Let the provinces of Bengal and Behâr be divided into five equal divisions, each subject, in the first instance, to one of the four boards, which are all under the controll of the superior board of 1 evenue established at Calcutta. In the lesser districls, let a Company's fervant superintend the collection collection of the revenue, and be accountable for his transactions, to the board, under whose juris diction he acts

Necellity reformati-

The wild chaos of government, if the ab fence of all rule deserves the name, which sub filts in Bengal, must be utterly removed fome faint traces of the British constitution is mixed with the positive orders of a Court of Di rectors, the convenient and temporary expedients of a trading governor and council, the fecret orders of the select committee, the influence of the president, with the Nabob, and the boisterous despotum of Mahommed Riza To separate, or even to restrain them within proper bounds, is beyond human capacity, some branches must be lopt off to give more vigour and room to others Mubanck must retire from the Must and Mahammed Riza and the fecret committee vanish away, and even the council itself must be restrained from BREVI MANU despotism, such as, the fending home, by force, British subjects, and difmilling officers without the fentence of a court marnal

Judicial Power

P effection

TO preferve the health of the political body, the pure stream of impartial justice must rush, with viaour, through every vein. When it meets with obstructions, a disease is produced, and, when the whole mass becomes corrupted, a languor succeeds, which frequently terminates in death. To drop the metaphor, the distributors of justice ought to be independent of every thing but the law. The executive part of government must not interfere with the decisions of the judge, otherwise that officer, who was created for the defence defence of the subject from injury, becomes a tool of oppression in the hands of despotism.

The first principle of wise legislation is to open Various an easy passage to the temple of Justice. Where Jurisdictithe seat of redress is either distant of difficult of gal. access, an injury is forgot to avoid the trouble of complaint; and thus injustice is encouraged by the almost certain prospect of impunity. To avoid this evil, the Author of the Enquiry thinks it necessary, that the act of the legislature, which shall constitute the mode of distributing justice, should also divide Bengal and Behâr into five great provinces, the capitals of which ought to be Calcutta, Murshedabâd, and Dacca, in Bengal; and Patna and Mongeer, in Behâr. Let each of these five great divisions be subdivided into ten Chucklas, or extensive districts, almost the number of which the kingdom confifts at prefent; and let each of these be still subdivided into an indefinite number of Pergunnas.

To bring justice, to use a certain author's Constables words, home to the door of every man, let there, and jusin each village, be established, as in the days of peace. the empire, a Muckuddum, to act as a constable for the preservation of the peace. A Sheichdar, with a commission similar to that of a justice of the peace, should be fixed in the most centrical part of the Pergunna or lesser district, to whom disputes, which cannot be quashed by the authority of the Muckuddum or constable, may be referred. Let the court of this officer, however, communicate with another of a more extensive and ample jurisdiction, established in the capital of the division or district, of which the Pergunna is a part.

Similar to the office of a Sheikdar, or justice of Cutwal, or the peace, ought to be that of the Cutwal or Mayor, mayor of great towns and confiderable cities.

The wisdom of the house of simur established this officer, to animadvert upon thieves, gam blers, and other miscreants, to remove nuisances, to suppose to suppose suppose and jugglers, to prevent fore stalling of grain and other provisions, to be the regulator of the market, and to decide in all trivial and vexations disputes, that tended toward a breach of the peace. His ministerial office coincided almost with that of the mayors of our lesser towns, and his court was the counterpart of the now obsolete Curia pedis pulyerizati, mentioned by our lawyers.

Courts of

In every Chuckla, or greater division, let there be established a court similar in its nature, but different in its mode, to the courts of Cutcherri. inflituted in the days of the empire Let this court be composed of the Company's servant, refiding for the collection of the revenue in the Chuckla, and of two Mahommed Cazis, and two Brahmins The fervant of the Company ought to be the nominal prefident of the court. but only to fit when the voices are equal, to throw his casting vote on the side of equity In such a case the process to begin anew. The sees of the court must be regulated, and a table of the ex nence of every article to be bung up to public view, in the common hall The punishment for corruption, upon conviction in the fupreme court of Bengal, ought to rife to a degree of severity, furtable to the danger of the crime

Jr• 14 1ſ di4 This court, benides the power of hearing appeals from the decisions of the Sheichdar in the leffer districts, ought to retain its ancient authority, subject, however, to an appeal from decisions beyond a sum to be specified, to the provincial courts which shall be hereafter described. Its jurisdiction ought to extend to the contracting and dissolving of marriages, to the settlement of dowres.

dowries for women, and the fuccession to money and moveables among children, according to the respective institutes of the Mahommedan and Hindoo systems of religion. It ought also to be a court of record; and to be obliged to keep an exact register of all public and private contracts, births, marriages, and deaths; and, to execute that department of the business, a Canongoe and a Mutaseddy, as clerks, ought to be annexed to each court. These, with other matters to be described in the succeeding section, ought to comprehend the whole power of the court of Cutcherri.

In each of the capitals of the five provinces, a Provincial member of the council of state at Calcutta ought courts to refide. He, together with possessing the management of the Company's commercial affairs in his province, ought to be empowered, by a special commission, with three assemblers of the elder refident servants, to form, and prekde in a court of justice, which we shall, for distinction, call The Provincial Court of Appeal. To direct their judgment upon points of law, an officer, under the name of Attorney-general for the province, ought to be appointed to give his advice, together with a Mahommedan Cazi, and an Indian Brahmin, to explain the principles of their respective institutions and usages, and to tender oaths to the Suits may originate in this court; and it ought to have the power of removing before itself the proceedings of the court of Cutcherri.

To establish thoroughly the independence of the Supre ne judicial on the executive power, a supreme court, court, its from which an appeal ought only to lie to Great Britain, should be erested at Calcutta, by the authority of the legislature. Let it consist of a chief justice and three puissic justices, who derive their commissions from the king, and let them be in

Vol. III. Bengal

Bengal the counterpart of the court of king's bench in England The jurification of this court, which, from its transcendent power, may be called the fupreme court of Bengal, ought to extend, without limitation, over the whole kingdom, and to keep the inferior courts within the bounds of their authority, as well as to decide ultimately upon all appeals. It ought to protect the just rights of the subject, by its sudden and even sum mary interposition, and to take cognizance of criminal as well as of civil causes.

and criminal juni diction.

To carry justice, in criminal matters, with all the expedition possible, through our conquests, it is proposed, that two of the purfue justices shall, twice a year, go on circuits, to the respective capitals of the five provinces, one into the three provinces in Bengal, and one into the two, into which Behar is to be divided The purface justice fhall fit, upon these occasions, with the members of the provincial court, but the member of the council, who is the prefident of the court, shall still be considered as the principal judge. In cri minal matters, the culprit shall be tried by a jury of British subjects only, there being always a fuf ficient number of good and lawful men to form a jury, in the capital of the province. In the fu preme court at Calcutta, disputes between the na tives may be decided in civil cases, according to equity without a jury by the judges, but in fuits between British subjects, the matter ought to be tried by a jury, upon the principles of the law of Fngland

Court of Cohe quer The fole management of the revenue of Bengal, being in the Company many capital alterations are necessary to be made in that important branch. The great channel of public justice has been, by the above regulations, separated from the execu tive power; but some part of the judicial authority must still remain in the Company's hands. To manage the receipts of the revenue, it has been already mentioned, that sive boards must be formed, the superior one of which to remain in Calcutta. The boards ought to consist of two divisions, or rather of two sides; the receipt of the Exchequer, and the judicial part, which must enable them to inforce the payment of the revenues.

The mode of proceeding in this branch ought its jurifto rife in the same gradations with the course of diction appeals in the civil line of disputes between man and man. Let the Cutcherries inforce the payment of the revenues of the Chucklas, under an appeal to the provincial board, whose decisions, beyond certain fums, ought to be subject to the revision of the general board at Calcutta. as the state must not suffer through delay, let the fum in dispute, upon a decision against the subject, by any of the courts of revenue before whom the fuit shall -originate, be forthwith paid into the Exchequer, and let the person aggrieved seek for redrefs, by petition, to the court which is placed immediately above that court, of whose decision he complains.

The board of revenue, in each of the capital confined is cities of the five provinces, except in Calcutta, fuch. where no court of law except the supreme court exists, is to be made up of the same persons whom we have already placed as judges in the provincial court of appeal. The court of exchequer, in England, examines, by a siction, into all sorts of civil causes. It is necessary to preclude the boards of revenue from such powers, as a court of exchequer. As provincial courts of common law, their decisions are liable to an appeal to the supreme court at Calcutta, and therefore

fore any prejudices which they may be supposed to imbibe, as members of the executive part of government, cannot be of great detriment to the people, subject as their proceedings are to a court not amenable to the jurisdiction of the Company

Observations on the Judicial Power

Reflecti

THE despotsim which naturally sprung from the double government which arose on the foun dation of the fuccels of our arms in Benoal, repressed one evil, whilst it gave birth to a thou Those frequent disputes which grow be tween individuals, where the access to inflice is eafy, were quashed by a terror which prevented an unfortunate people from appearing before rulers who wanted but an excuse to oppress hand of power fell heavy upon both the plaintiff and defendant, and, therefore, men put up with injuries from one another, in hopes of concealing themselves from the rigid eyes of government This alludes to the boilterous tyranny of the minifter of a nominal Nabob, indolence was more our crime, than cruelty

on what of

The doors opened to justice in the preceding fection, will without doubt, introduce an ample liarvest for men of the law, but it is better that they should live by lingiousness, than that the people should perish by tyranny. The objection rising from this circumstance must therefore vanish in the utility of the thing, and another objection, just as obvious, may be as easily removed. It may be thought impolite by some, that any part of the judicial authority should remain in the hands of the natives. But this is objected in vain. The officers of justice, as well as being being subject to a revision of their decrees to the British, derive from them their own power, and the people, by being left in possession of some of their laws and usages, will be slattered into an inviolable submission to our government.

)

Though the inhabitants of Bengal are, from ought to be their natural disposition, prepared to submit to lest entire any system of government, founded upon justice, there are some laws of their own, which absolute power itself must not violate. The regulations, with regard to their women and religion, must never be touched; and upon mature confideration, the Author of the Enquiry is of opinion, that many other ancient institutions might be left entire. There are, however, particular usages established by time into a law, which our humanity must destroy. No pecuniary compensation must be permitted for murder, no theft be punished by cutting off the hand. Let the Mahommedan laws still in force against the Hindoos be abrogated; let no women burn themselves with their husbands. no dying person be exposed by his friends.

To leave the natives entirely to their own laws, to the would be to confign them to anarchy and confusi-natives. The inhabitants of Bengal are divided into two religious fects, the Mahommedan and Hindoo, almost equal in point of numbers. Averse, beyond measure, to one another, both on account of religion and the memory of mutual injuries, the one party will not now submit to the laws of the other; and the diffension which subsists between individuals, would, without a pressure from another power, spread in a flame over the whole kingdom. It is, therefore, absolutely necessary for the peace and prosperity of the country, that the laws of England, in fo far as they do not oppose prejudices and usages which cannot be relinquished by the natives, should prevail.

The

poffels prefent profit, than to look forward to future advantage. The plan which we have laid down in the preceding fections, will begin to yield an apparent benefit from its commencement, at the fame time that the tide will become the more rapid the longer it flows.

Immedi

The immediate pecuniary advantages which will rife to Bengal, are to be derived from various fources The removal of the emperor, either to Patna or Mongeer, will fave to the kingdom his nenfion of three hundred and twenty five thou fand pounds, the revenues of the territory of Bulwant Singh, three hundred and twelve thou fand five hundred pounds, to be frent in Bengal . and fifty thousand pounds, which is now sent abroad, without hopes of return, to pay three battalions of our troops stationed at Allahabad. This fum of fix hundred and eighty feven thou fand nounds, thrown at once into the circulation. would animate the languid pulse of commerce, and at once prepare the kingdom for the com mercial improvements, which the plan, in its other regulations. feems absolutely to ensure

and f ture advants ecs

The future advantages arife also from various The influx of specie and inhabitants. which the fale of the wafte as well as of the cultivated lands, would draw from all the other provinces of Hindoltan, would be productive of im mediate national wealth. The advancement of agriculture would promote the advancement of manufactures The peace of the country would be fecured from abroad, and justice, by prevail ing at home, would attach the natives to a government on the stability of which the possessi on of their landed property depended tablishment of a paper currency, on national faith and the Company's fecurity, would enable mankind to bring all their property into action, lower the exorbitant interest of money, and ren der Bengal, in the space of a few years, the most commercial, the most flourishing, and the most wealthy kingdom, of its extent, in Asia.

The Company, in the midst of the prosperity to be deof the Subject, would amazingly thrive in their rived from the plan. affairs. A fum not less than ten millions, independent of their sevenue, would, in the space of four years, flow from the first sales of the land into their coffers. The improvement of their present revenue would join issue, with its suture certainty and permanency. A large annual sum would arise, from a thorough examination of tenures, and from imposts already laid upon fairs, markets, entrance into great towns, shops, magazines of grain, fees upon marriages, tolls collected at ferries, licences for exercising trades, ground-rent of houses, which though at present paid by the public, have never been brought to account by Mahommed Riza and the general farmers. These articles, at the lowest average, might amount to the annual fum of four hundred thoufand pounds. Five hundred thousand pounds would yearly be faved in pensions, and on the charge of collection, besides, the immense encrease in the revenues, which would most certainly be derived from the growing prosperity of the kingdom.

The absolute establishment of property, with- Concludout which written law feems superfluous to society, ins is, as has been observed, the foundation upon which national prosperity is laid Regulations which stop short of this primary object, are only temporary expedients, which may, for a time, alleviate the pain of the distemper, but it can never cure. A tacit acquiescence in the right of possession of the natives, the prevention of some part of the present national waste, a mild despotism, which we may dignify with the name of Justice.

Justice, will have an immediate good effect, but the advantage is limited, partial, and transient, and the Author of the Enquiry will venture to affirm, that unless something similar to what has been, in the preceding sections, proposed, is adopted, Bengal will, in the course of a few years, decline into a shadow, and vanish from our hands

reflection

Miracles are not to be expected in this age. and, without them, in the absence of a bold and determined evertion, the boaffed fruits of our victories in the East, will wither with our laurels A kingdom, lying under all the disadvantages of a foreign conquest, which, without return, deprives it of one million and an half of its annual industry, must fink under the weight, unless it is placed on a better footing than the furrounding countries which pay no tribute. Let our justice to our own subjects, let the advan tages of our regulations, entice foreigners, with their wealth, to fettle among us, let us, without the fword, appropriate the wealth of India by our policy, otherwise the stream which flows into Great Britain, will foon become dry The lake, which feeds it, has already disappeared from the Temporary regulations may dazzle with their immediate effect, but a permanent plan, which in its wide circle comprehends futurity. will preserve the vigour and health of Bengal, to the verge of that political death, to which all empires feem to be subjected by Fate.

Concluding Reflections

Pr-fent

ARGUMENTS deduced from general principles, however obvious they may appear, firke not the bulk of mankind fo forcibly as facts. The revenues revenues of Bengal, without including the Jagieers, amounted, in the year 1766, to near three millions and fix hundred thousand pounds of our money. The charges of collection, the Nabob's government, pensions, civil, military, and marine expences, being deducted, there remained a balance of one million three hundred thousand pounds, for the Company. The expences have fince been encreasing yearly, and the revenues decreasing Both were hastening to that middle point, which would balance the accounts of the British nation, with the fortune of their arms in the East.

To conceal this decrease as much as possible, rumous men fell on a very shallow and poor expedient. state The fervants of the Company protracted the time of closing the accounts to make up the usual fum, and by these means, an encroachment of five months was, by degrees, made upon the fucceeding year To understand this circumstance, it is necessary to observe, that the collections are not fixed to a particular term. They are continued without intermission, and the produce of the five months, which may amount to one million five hundred thousand pounds, must be deducted from the accounts made up, fince the Dewanny was submitted to our management.

Notwithstanding this deception, it was not the of the reonly deficiency in the state of money affairs. The venue. revenues of the year 1760 had, besides, fallen short five hundred thousand pounds, and what further reduction the famine which enfued may have made, time can only demonstrate. best accounts from Bengal, there was not a balance of five hundred thousand pounds remaining, after all expences were paid, and this was not above half the fum necessary to purchase the annual investments of the Company. No fair conclusion.

conclusion, however, can be drawn from the produce of one year, and the vigilance of the Court of Directors has fince established some beneficial regulations. To flatter the languine, we will suppose, that the net balance will amount, on the present footing, to one million. The sum is just sufficient for the investments of the Company, without leaving a single farthing in the treasury to answer any extraordinary emergency.

Obrions

The advantages of the proposed plan are obvi ous, and, therefore, eafily explained Let it be supposed, that the rent roll of the year 1766 shall be taken as the rule of the quit rent to be paid. after the fale of the lands Let none think this fum too much Under the management of the proprietors, the lands would in a few years produce thrice the fum of three millions fix hundred thousand pounds, but the Subject must receive a bribe for his industry. The Company. at present, complain, that the Talookdars, or those who possess lands in property, run away with all the tenants Their estates are flourishing, whilst our limited policy of letting the lands by the year, has created folitudes around After a thorough examination of fictitious tenures, private encroachments and public embezzlements, we may with great propriety, venture to add, at leaft one million to the above fum. But to foeak with a moderation which precludes reply, we shall only take it for granted, that four hundred thou fand pounds are by these means, only gamed. Even this fum will fix the annual revenue at four inillions, and there let it rest till the prosperity of the country shall authorise an encrease, by slight imposts on trade and the articles of confump-

The abolition of the tyrannical and impolitic government of the Nabob, will be a faving of five hundred hundred thousand pounds on the annual expences. Advanta-The fact is notorious, that the real expence of ges this fecondary and intermediate government, in pensions and in the mode of collection, exceeds fix hundred thousand pounds, but the judicial and fiscal systems established in the preceding plan will not exceed one hundred thousand pounds, with all the advantages of a falutary and equitable administration of justice and law To this fum we may add the five hundred thousand pounds which have fallen off from the revenue, as the first-fruits of the plan; all which, supposing the expences of the civil, military, and marine departments to remain as at prefent, would make an annual difference of one million four hundred thousand pounds, in favour of the Company. The investments of the Company might in that case be encreased, yet leave a sum for the treasury in Calcutta for emergencies.

The treasury, however, ought not to be too of the prerich, lest circulation should deaden in the king-ceding Two millions in specie would be sufficient. To employ the furplus to advantage, together with the ten millions, which are supposed to ailse from the sale of the lands, a bank ought to be established for the purpose of lending out sums of money, not exceeding three years purchase on landed fecurity to the Proprietors, at the interest of feven per centum. The land-holders would be, by these means, enabled to raise the necessary fums, at less than half the interest which they now pay, and the Company would have good fecurity for their advances. Let us suppose, that, in the course of a few years, ten millions were lent upon these terms, that sum would produce an annual interest of leven hundred thousand pounds; which, upon the whole plan, makes a yearly balance, in favour of the Company, of Two MIL-

LIONS

A D

1014

1605 Hig

it comprehended a vast tract of country, divided into twenty two provinces; each equal to fome kingdoms in wealth, fertility and extent . A finall part only of the Decan or fouthern peninfula of India had been conquered. yet the dominions of the family of Timur, in their northein and fouthern frontiers, fell under the thirty-fixth and ninetenth parallels of latitude, and they extended themselves, from east to west, about twenty-five degrees The revenues, according to the Imperial register, were thirty-two millions sterling, received in the exchequer, exclusive of the customary presents, and the estates of the officers of the crown, which at their death reverted to the emperor, and amounted, at a medium, to twenty millions more of our money. These immense sums were expended in maintaining an army of three hundred thousand horse, as many of foot, in support of the splendor of the court, and in the falaries of civil officers.

When the indisposition of the emperor Akbar Intrigues rendered him incapable of attending to public business, the whole weight of government fell on Selim. Chan Azim, the Visier. Selim, Akbar's only surviving son, notwithstanding the disputes which he had formerly with his father, was still looked upon as the heir of the empire. But the Visier's daughter being married to Chusero, the eldest son of Selim, that minister was desirous of placing the reins of government in the hands of his son-in-law. He was supported in this scheme by many of the nobles, the most enterprizing and powerful of whom was Raja Man Singh, whose

fister

^{*} Kandahar, Ghizni, Cabal, Cashmire, Lahore, Moultân, Outch, Sindi, Ajmere, Sirhind, Delhi, Duâb, Agra, Allahabad, Oud, Behâr, Bengal, Orissa, Malava, Berâr, Chandeish, Guzerat

4

A D 1605 Hig 1014. fister was the mother of Chusero The Raja, from the antiquity of his family, and his own ad dress commanded all the Hindoo interest in the empire, and he had, at that very time, twenty thousand of his native subjects of the Rajaput tribe in and near the environs of the capital, prepared to execute his orders. Selim being apprized of the powerful confederacy against him, waited upon his father Akbar, two days before his death, and laid before him all their schemes. The emperor called them to his presence, reprimanded thein severely and having publicly acknowledged. Selim his lawful successor in the empire, obliged the consederate lords to pay him homage, and to promise to support his title.

He accel'

On the fixteenth of the fecond Jemmad, in the year of the Higera one thousand and fourteen. the illustrious Akbar expired at Agra, amid the tears of his subjects, who loved him as their fa ther, admired him as their leader, and feared him as their prince. The promise extorted by the emperor from the Visier and Man Singh in favour of Selim, had no effect on their conduct. He was no fooner dead than they affembled their party in the house of the former and renewed their deliberations in favour of Chusero, in preundice of his father. Selim in the mean time was not idle. He convened all his friends in his own palace Things remained in suspense for some hours Ferid Bochari who commanded the city quards took at length a foirited refolution. ordered the gates to be shut, to prevent any troops from entering the city, and, taking the keys in his hand haftened to the palace of Selim He presented them on his knees, and saluted him emperor All present followed his example The news foon reached the house of the Visier The party of Chufero was struck with a sudden panic panic. They broke up from council, and made all possible haste to pay their respects to the new fovereign. The Visier took care not to be the last. The hopes of Chusero were dashed in a moment 'He was seized with fear, and fled down w the river in a small canoe, with Raja Man Singh, and concealed himself in that prince's house till he obtained a pardon from his father. Ferid, for this fignal fervice, was advanced to the rank of paymalter general of the forces, by the title of Murtaza Chan, and many other distinguishing honours were at the same time conferred upon hım.

A D. 1605

1014

Selim was born at Sikri, near Agra, on Wed-Histitles nelday the seventeenth of the second Ribbi, in and age. the nine hundredth and feventy-feventh year of the Higeia. The most remarkable event of Selim's life, before his accession, was, his disobedience to his father's orders, rather than his rebellion against him, about two years prior to that monarch's death Infolent at first, he refused to return to his duty, and was once actually at the head of feventy thousand men. Upon the death of the prince Danial, he, however, submitted, having then a nearer prospect of the throne, Akbar having upbraided him for his disobedience at first, and his pusillanimity afterwards, for throwing himself upon an enraged sovereign's mercy, when he was at the head of a great aimy, 1eceived him into favour. When Selim took the reins of government in his hands, he assumed the titles of Noor ul-dien Mahommed JEHANGIRE, or Mahommed the Light of the Faith and con-QUEROR OF THE WORLD. He dated the commencement of his reign from the twentieth of the fecond Jemmâd 1014, which answers to the 21st of October, 1605, being then in the thirty-seventh year of his age. Akbar was interred with I 2

great

intimidated him with pretended discoveries of the designs of his father against his life. The secrecy necessary to be observed in all arduous undertakings against despotic governments, rendered it difficult for Chuseio to know the true state of things. The fpies, whom the emperor had placed around him, in the mean time, increased, and confirmed his fears. Ambition, aided by timidity, at length prevailed over filial duty. plunged therefore into danger, to take immediate possession of a throne, which he was born one day to mount, without the doubtful fortune of the fword.

1605 Hig 1014

A D

Chan Azim, and the Raja Man Singh, had whorejects the address not to appear openly in the conspi- of assassiracy. They were, however, known to be the nation, life and support of the whole. They were still under the cloud of the emperor's displeasure, which, at a convenient feafon, might burst on their heads. The prince being fo far involved in the plot, it would be dangerous for him to recede: and they, justly confidering the improbability of fuccess by open force against the Imperial power, proposed the more speedy expedient of affaffinating Jehangire. The proposal came to the ears of the prince. Though he was bent & upon rebellion, he startled at parricide. was rouzed in his breast. "My father," faid " may enjoy life without a throne; but I can never enjoy a throne stained with a father's blood. Let him try the fortune of the field. Let us throw away the daggers of affaffins, and owe our advancement to our fwords"

The conspirators pretended to applaud the no- The plot ble fentiments of the prince. but they, from that d fcoverinstant, were irresolute and embarrassed in their councils. Many, violent at the beginning, now awed by the greatness of the undertaking, shrunk content of Hussein; and esteeming him a great acquisition to his party, from his known bravery and popularity among the Tartars, who formed a great part of the imperial aimy, he called him aside, and having sounded him, laid open his whole plan. Huflein being conscious of no crime against the state, thought himself highly injured by Jehangire. Possessed of no property but the fword, from the generofity of his disposition, which had lavished his fortune upon his friends, he required not much intreaty to espouse the cause of the prince.

A D

1606 Hg

10 5

The retinue of Hussein was but small It con-Chusero fisted of two hundred Tartar horse, and three marches to hundred Afgan foot. But his military fame was great; and he gave life to the conspiracy. The prince endeavoured to bring over the governor of Muttra to his party. That officer, perceiving his intentions, thut himself up in the citadel, and would liften to no terms. Chusero had neither time nor force to reduce him. He contented himself with enlisting as many as he could of the inhabitants and garrifon into his fervice, and, leaving Muttra, continued his route to Delhi

The road between the two great cities of Delhi Ravages and Agra being crowded with travellers, and de-try tachments of horse and foot going on disserent fervices, the prince forced them to join his standard. Those who refused were, without mercy, put to the fwoid, after being plundered of all their effects. Small parties of horse were at the same time dispersed through the country on every fide; and fuch as did not immediately take up arms in favour of Chusero were submitted to military execution, and all the feverities of Many were compelled to join him, through fear. Others, from the same cause, sled into the woods, and faw from their retreats the smoke of their country, and to strengthen himself. In the moining, as foon as day-light appeared, the emperor mounted his horse, and having affembled all the forces in and near Agra, leaving a fufficient garrison in the place, marched with a great army toward Delhi. He was, upon the occasion, heard to repeat a verse, which implied, "That fortune depended upon expedition more than on counfel; and that his life should be darkened who put off till to-morrow what ought to be done to day." The undutiful behavious of a fon, whom he loved, was a fevere stroke to his mind fused to eat or drink, or to take rest for some time, and even opium, to which he was much addicted, he declined.

A D.

1605 Hig

1015

The governor and inhabitants of Delhi, having who takes recovered from the first impressions which the the route of Lahore. fudden arrival and ravages committed by Chufero had made upon their minds, prepared for a refolute defence. Some troops, who were stationed in different parts of the country, had thrown themselves into the town. As there was a considerable quantity of the Imperial treasure lodged in the city, as well as the great wealth of private perfons, the intentions of the prince were to have furprized Delhi, and to furnish himself with money sussicient to raise an army in the province of Punjab. But the general terror which his rapacity had excited carried the news of his march before him, and disappointed his designs. Despairing of being able to force Delhi to furrender before the arrival of the Imperial army, having remained only two days in the fuburbs, Chusero took the route of Lahore. Having been, on his march, joined by a great number of men, he attempted, immediately upon his arrival, to take that city by escalade. He was repulsed with some loss by the garrison; and being at the same time destitute their outcries, alarmed the country. The prince understood from those that were taken, that orders from the Imperial camp had two days before been received by the zemindar of the district, to stop the passage of the river, and that, in obedience to these orders, he had secreted the boats. Huffein in the mean time having dispatched some of his followers in quest of the boats, they found two, filled with wood, in a neighbouring creek. These were unloaded, and brought to the proper place. The zemindâr, being rouzed from fleep by the noise, had come by this time to the banks of the Attoc, attended by a concourse of people. He called to those who dragged the boats, that he had an Imperial mandate to prohibit all persons, under pain of death, to cross the river. They, intimidated by his threats, turned the head of the two boats across the stream. The prince's party fired upon them: fome were killed, others plunged into the river; and a few expert fwimmers, in the retinue of Chusero, brought one boat with difficulty to the shore.

The banks of the Attoc were in the mean time he is in crowded with the country people. An officer ar-great difrived with a hundred horse to guard the passage. Other detachments came gradually in from every quarter. Chusero and Hussen resolved to save themselves in the boat. They placed their horses in the center, and they themselves took their seats in the stern. Their attendants, afraid of being left to the mercy of their enemies, threw themselves headlong into the veffel, and almost funk her. They, however, pushed her from shore; threw fome overboard, and cut off the hands of others who clung to her fides. Many were drowned. few flain by the Imperialists. This was but the beginning of misfortunes. Most of the oars had been lost in the confusion, and the rudder, to complete

1605. Hig 1015

Rahim, another of the principal rebels, on his left. Johangire floral asked his fon, "What could induce thee. Eil in Chulcio, to rebel against thy sovereign and fath a?" Chusero was filent: the emperor began to relent. He then, in a fofter tone, questioned him about his adviters and abettors to rebellion. Chulcro built into tears. His father was lurprized for till then he had remained firm. "Father." faid the prince, with a broken voice. " my crime is great; but let me fuffer for it alone. When you accused me. I was fenfible of my faults, and, as I was reconciled with the loss of life, I behaved with dignity. But when you raife the remembrance of my friends, I am troubled at their fate. Let them escape as they can, I will never become their accuser "

A D. 1625 Hip 1015

Jehangire flood filent; and by his pressing him recention no farther, seemed to applaud his sentiments. of trail-Any information from the prince would be unnecessary. The confinators had impeached one another, and three hundred of the chiefs were already ferzed. The prince was delivered over, in close confinement, into the hands of the paymafter-general Huffein was fentenced to be fewed up in the raw hide of an ox, and to be thrown in that condition into the flreet. The hide was foon contracted by the heat of the fun, and he expired in a few hours. Abdul Rahim did not so easily escape. Finding that Hussian was dead fooner than they expected, those appointed to superintend the executions, kept the ass's hide in which Rahim was inclosed, constantly moist with water. He lived for feveral days in that miserable condition. Three hundred pales in the mean time were fet up in two rows along the public road. The rebels, to that number, were drawn alive on the pales. Chusero was brought every day,

A D 1676, III_k 101 day as long as any of the unhappy wretches breath ed under their tortures, to view the horid fight. He was led in chains through the midft of them, whilft he watered the ground with his tears. Some of them had been his dearest companions, others his faithful fervants, who had followed his fortunes, merely to shew their fidelity to a master whom they loved.

Curlibar veited by the I erfi

Thefe barbarous executions were fearce over at Lahore, when news was brought to the Imperial camp, that the Persians had invested Candahar with a numerous army, that Shaw Beg, the go vernor of that city and province, had, by his rashness suffered a very considerable loss in a fally, yet that he continued, without any ne ceflity, to expose the garrison. His conduct could only be accounted for by an abfurdity bor dering on madness. He was as careless of his own life as he was of his duty Diffolute beyond example, he ordered an awning to be spread over the gate way most exposed to the enemy s fire He fat under it all day, converfing with common profitutes whom, much against their inclination. he forced to attend him The emperor, fearing moré from his negligence and debauchery, than he hoped from his fidelity and courage fent Sirdir Chan, an old Omrah, to superfede him in his government, with orders to defend Candahar to the last extremity Ghazi Chan an officer of great reputation, was, at the fame time, dispatched with twenty five thousand horse, to harass the enemy Jehangire bimfelf, with the remaining part of the Imperial army, marched to Cabul

The Gego

Ghazi had fearce advanced within fix days march of Candahar, when the Perfians raifed the fiege, and retreated towards Choraffan. No rea fon could be affigued for these hostilities on the side of Persia, except the favourable opportunity offered, by the rebellion of Chusero, for seizing the city of Candahar, which was, in some mea-' fure, the key to the Persian empire. Shaw Abas of Persia pretended, that his lieutenants in the . provinces of Seistan and Chorassan had taken this step without his orders; and that it was his positive commands which raifed the fiege.

A D 1605 1015.

Iehangire placed little faith in the professions A peace of Abas, being satisfied, that the death of Akbar, with Perand the rebellion of Chusero, were the true motives of the invasion. He, however, admitted the excuses of the Persian, which were brought by his ambassador Hussein. Several sma'l forts near Candahar, which had been taken by the Persians, were evacuated, and peace between the two formidable powers was re established. Shaw Beg, deprived of the government of Candahar, was made Suba of Cabul: for, notwithstanding his abfurd behaviour, he had displayed both ability and spirit in the defence of the city. The emperor, after these transactions, returned toward Lahore.

Sultan Chusero was still in close consinement, A conspiwhich his active and vehement disposition could racy very ill endure. The usage he met with deprived him of every hope of a reconciliation with his father. The marks of affection shewn by the emperor to his younger fons, Purvez and Churrum, confirmed the suspicions of Chusero. It was also currently reported, that Jehangire was to appoint one of the two favoured princes, his fuccessor. Nothing but disappointment, and even death, presented to Chusero's mind. His friends were still numerous in the army. He sounded them, by his emissaries: some moved by his missortunes, many in love with novelty, began to form tieafonable defigns against the emperor's life. It was concerted to fall upon Jehangire at the chace, Vol. III. and.

A D 1606. Hig 1015 and, having dispatched him, to raise Chusero, from his prison to the throne

Some writers doubt, whether Chusero was at all privy to this conspiracy others deny the whole. The first argue from the humanity of Chusero; the latter say, that it was a siction of Sultan Churrum, third son of Jehangire. This much is certain, that the first intelligence of the conspiracy came, through prince Churrum, to the emperor's ears. He informed his father, that sive hundred of the nobility were engaged in a plot against his life. Jehangire was startled, and knew not how to act he considered, that, should he seize some, the rest would be alarmed, and that danger might arise from their power. As it ricult, therefore, to fecure them all at the state of the state of the prudent to fend all on fervices. Four of the principals he re whom he ordered to be feized. They it for treason, sufficient proofs could not

They were kept in confinement Chu more narrowly watched, and became re and more obnoxious to his father

I E H A N G I R E.

CHAP. II.

Disturbances in Bengal—Story of Chaja Asass-His flight from Tartaiy—Distress in the desart -Birth of the Sultana Noor-Mahil-Marriage with Shere Afkun—Persecution—and murder of that Omrah—Her marriage with the emperor— -Promotion of her family.

JEHANGIRE, having resettled the affairs of Disturthe provinces to the north-west of the Indus, bances in Bengal marched toward the capital. When he was croffing the Attoc, letters were received from Islam Chan, governor of Behâr, with intelligence, that Shere Afkun, a native of Turkomania, who commanded in the district of Burdwan, had, with his own hand, killed Kuttub-ul-dien Koka, Suba of Bengal, together with feveral other officers, who had fet upon Shere Afkun, with an intention to affaffinate him. Jehangire was much afflicted at the death of his favourite Kuttub; but he derived some comfort from the Suba's success against the life of Shere Afkun. The circumstances of the unhappy fate of this chief are in themselves extraordinary; and the knowledge of them is necessary for elucidating the sequel of the history of Jehangire. To trace things to their fource, we must, for some time, lose fight of the unfortunate Shere.

About twenty years before this period, Chaja Story of Aiass, a native of the western Tartary, left that Chaja Aiass. country to push his fortune in Hindostan. He was descended of an ancient and noble family, fallen

K 2

fallen into decay by various revolutions of fortune He. however, had received a good education. which was all his parents could befrow Falling in love with a young woman, as poor as himfelf. he married her, but he found it difficult to pro vide for her the very necessaries of life Reduced to the last extremity, he turned his thoughts upon India, the usual resource of the needy Partars of the north He left privately friends, who either would not or could not affift him, and turned his face to a foreign country His all confifted of one forry horse, and a very small sum of money. which had proceeded from the fale of his other effects Placing his wife upon the horse, he walked by her fide. She happened to be with child, and could ill endure the fatigue of fo great a journey Their scanty pittance of money was foon expended they had even subsisted, for some days, upon charity, when they arrived on the flirts of the Great Solitudes, which feparate Tar tary from the dominions of the family of Timur. in India. No house was there to cover them from the inclemency of the weather, no hand to relieve To return, was certain mifery, to proceed, apparent destruction.

Hisdiffiers Proceed, apparent definitions.

They had fasted three days to complete their misfortunes, the wife of Aias was taken in la bour. She began to reproach her husband for leaving his native country at an unfortunate hour, for exchanging a quiet, though poor life, for the ideal prospect of wealth in a distant country. In this distressed fituation she brought forth a daughter. They remained in the place for some hours, with a vain hope that travellers might pass that way. They were disappointed. Human seet seldom tread these desarts the sun declined a pace. They seared the approach of night, the place was the haunt of wild beasts, and should they they escape their hunger, they must fall by their own. Chaja Ajass, in this extremity, having placed his wife on the horse, found himself so much exhausted that he could scarcely move. To carry the child was impossible: the mother could not even hold herself fast on the horse. A long contest began between Humanity, and Necessity: the latter prevailed, and they agreed to expose the child on the high-way. The infant, covered with leaves, was placed under a tree, and the disconsolate parents proceeded in tears.

When they had advanced about a mile from in the dethe place, and the eyes of the mother could no fart longer distinguish the solitary tree under which she had left her daughter, she gave way to grief; . and throwing herself from the horse on the ground, exclaimed, "My child! my child!" She endeavoured to raise heiself; but she had no strength-Aiass was pierced to the heart. He promised to bring her the infant. He arrived at the place. No fooner had his eyes reached the child, than he was almost struck dead with horror. A black fnake, fay our authors, was coiled around it; and Aiass believed he beheld him extending his fatal jaws to devour the infant. The father rushed forward. The serpent, alarmed at his vociferation, retired into the hollow tree. He took up his daughter unhurt, and returned to the mother. He gave her child into her arms; and, as he was informing her of the wonderful escape of the infant, some travellers appeared, and soon relieved them of all then wants. They proceeded gradually and came to Lahore.

The emperor Akbar, at the arrival of Aiass, His arrival kept his court at Lahore. Afiph Chan, one of and good fortune at that monarch's principal Omrahs, attended then Lahore. the presence. He was a distant relation to Aiass, and he received him with attention and friendindignity and public shame.-His family, his mer reputation was high -Born of noble par in Turkomania, he had spent his youth in Per and had ferved, with uncommon renown, S Ifmacl the third of the Sufvi line His origi name was Asta Jillô, but having killed a h he was dignified with the title of Shere Afk or the Overthrower of the Lion Under latter name he became famous in India. wars of Akbar, he had ferved with great re tation He had distinguished himself, in a pa. cular manner, under Chan Chanan, at the t ing of Sind, by exhibiting produgies of per nal strength and valour Preferments had be heaped upon him, and he was highly testeem at court, during the life of Akbar, who loved others that daring intrepidity for which he hi felf was renowned

He is call

Ichangure kept his court at Delhi, when ed to court called Shere Afkun to the presence. He receiv him graciously and conferred new honours upo Shere Afkun, naturally open and generou fuspected not the emperor's intentions Timhe thought, had enneed the memory of Mher u Niffa from Jehangire's mind He was deceived The monarch was resolved to remove his rival but the means he used were, at once, foolish an difgraceful He appointed a day for hunting and ordered the haunt of an enormous tiger t, be explored News was foon brought, that tiger of an extraordinary fize was discovered 1 the forest of Nidarbari This savage, it was faid had carried off many of the largest oxen fro the neighbouring villages The emperor directe thither his march, attended by Shere Afkun, and feveral thousands of his principal officers, with all their trains Having, according to the custom of the Mogul Tartars, furrounded the ground for many miles, they began to move toward the cen ter, on all fides. The tiger was rouzed His loaring was heard in all quarters: and the emperor hastened to the place.

The nobility being affembled, Jehangire called Heataloud, " Who among you will advance fingly " and attack this tiger?" They looked on one another in filence. then all turned their eyes on Shere Afkun. He feemed not to understand their meaning: at length three Omiahs flaited forth from the circle, and facrificing fear to shame, fell at the emperor's feet, and begged permiffion to try fingly their strength against the formidable animal. The pride of Shere Askun arose. He had imagined, that none durst attempt a deed fo dangerous. He hoped, that after the refusal of the nobles, the honour of the enterprize would devolve in course on his hands. But three had offered themselves for the combat: and they were bound in honour to insist on their prior right. Afraid of losing his former renown, Shere Af kun began thus in the presence, "To attack " an animal with weapons is both unimanly and "unfair. God has given to man limbs and " finews'as well as to tigers he has added reason "to the former to conduct his strength." The other Omrahs objected in vain, " That all " men were inferior to the tiger in strength, and "that he could be overcome only with steel" "I will convince you of your mistake," Shere Afkun replied: and, throwing down his fwoid and shield, prepared to advance unarmed.

Though the emperor was, in fecret, pleased and kills with a proposal full of danger to Shere, he made mous tia shew of dissuading him shom the enterprize ser Shere was determined. The monarch, with feigned reluctance, yielded. Men knew not whether they ought most to admine the courage of the man, or exclaim against the folly of the deed. Astonishment was painted in every face.

tongue

conveyed themselves, without discovery, into the house.

futy stat

The principal door being bolted at the usual hour, Shere and his family went to bed Some of the affaffins, when they thought he was fallen affeen, stole filently into his apartment prepared to plunge their daggers into his body. when one of them, who was an old man, heing touched with remorfe, cried out with a loud voice " Hold! have we not the emperor sorders? Let " us behave like men Shall forty fall upon one, " and that one afleep " " Boldly spoken," faid Shere, flarting that inflant from his bed Seizing his fword, he placed himself in a corner of the room There he was attacked by the affaffing. In a few minutes, many of the villains lay, wel tering in their blood, at his feet. Scarce one half escaped without a wound The old man, who had given warning, did not attempt to fly Shere took him by the hand, praifed and thanked him for his behaviour, and having enquired about those who had hired the affaffing, dismissed him. with handfome prefents, to relate the particulars abroad

H kmur dered

abroad

The fame of this gallant exploit refounded through the whole empire. Shere could not fit abroad for the mob, who preffed around him. He, however, thought proper to retire from the capital of Bengal, to his old refidence at Burd wan. He hoped to live there in obscurity and fafety, with his beloved. Mher ul Nissa. He was deceived. The Suba of Bengal had received his government, for the purpose of removing the un fortunate. Shere; and he was not ungrateful After deliberating with himself about the means, he, at last, fell upon an effectual expedient. Set thing the affairs of his government at Tanda, which was, at that time, the capital of Bengal, he resolved, with a great tetinue, to make the tour of the dependent provinces. In his 10ut he came to Buidwan. He made no fecret to his principal officers, that he had the emperor's orders for dispatching Shere: That devoted Omrah. hearing that the Suba was entering the town in which he refided, mounted his horse, and, with two fervants only, went to pay his respects. The Suba received Shere with affected politeness. They rode, for some time, side by side, and their conversation turned upon indifferent affairs. Suba suddenly stopt. He ordered his elephant of state to be brought, which he mounted, under a pretence of appearing with becoming pomp in the city of Burdwan. Shere stood still, when the Suba was afcending; and one of the pikemen, pretending that Shere was in the way, struck his horse, and began to drive him before him. was enraged at the affront. He knew that the pikeman durst not have used that freedom without his master's orders: he saw plainly, that there was a laid design against his life. He turned round upon the pikeman, and threatened him with instant death. He fell on the ground and Swords were drawn. begged for mercy. had no time to lose. He spurred his horse up to the elephant, on which the Suba was mounted; and having broke down the amari or castle, cut him in two, and thus the unfortunate Kuttub became the victim of his own zeal to please the em-Shere did not rest here. he turned his fword on the other officers The first that fell by his hands was Aba Chan, a native of Cashmire, who was an Omrah of five thousand horse. Four other nobles shared the same fate. A death attended every blow from the hand of Shere. The remaining chiefs were at once astonished and frightened. They fled to a distance, and formed a circle

To raise her own reputation in the seraglio, and to support herself and slaves with more decency, than the feanty pittance allowed her would admit, fhe called forth her invention and talte in working fome admirable pieces of tapeftry and embroide ry, in painting filks with exquisite delicacy, and in inventing female ornaments of every kind Thefe articles were carned, by her flaves, to the different squares of the royal feraglio, and to the harams of the great officers of the empire inventions of Mher ul Nissa excelled so much in their kind, that they were bought with the greatest avidity Nothing was fashionable among the ladies of Delhi and Agra, but the work of her hands She accumulated, by these means, a considerable fum of money, with which the repaired and beau tified her apartments, and clothed her flaves in the richest tiffues and brocades, while she herself affected a very plain and simple dress

tTitheend. of fou yours

In this fituation the widow of Shere continued four years, without once having feen the emperor Her fame reached his ears from every apartment in the feraglio Curiofity at length vanguished his resolution. He determined to be an eye witness of the things which he had fo often heard, con cerning Mher ul Nissa He resolved to surprize her and communicating his refolution to none, he fuddenly entered her apartments, where he found every thing fo elegant and magnificent that he was struck with amazement greatest ornament of the whole was Mher ul Nissa herfelf She lay half reclined, on an embroider ed fopha, in a plain mullin drefs Her flaves fat in a circle round her, at work, attired in rich brocades She flowly arole, in manifest confu fion, and received the emperor with the usual ceremony of touching first the ground, then her forehead with her right hand She did not utter utter one word; but stood with her eyes fixed on the ground Jehangire remained for some time filent. He admired her shape, her stature, her beauty, her grace, and that mexpressible voluptuoniness of mem, which it is impossible to resist.

Jehangire did not, for some time, recover Hernupti-from his consusson. He at length sat down on Jehangire. the fopha, and requested Mher-ul-Nissa to sit by his fide. The first question he asked, was, "Why " this difference between the appearance of Mher-" ul-Nissa and her slaves?" She very shrewdly replied, "Those born to servitude must dress " as it shall please those whom they serve. These " are my fervants, and I alleviate the burden of " bondage by every indulgence in my power. " But I that am your flave, O Emperor of the "Moguls, must dress according to your pleasure and not my own." Though this answer was a kind of farcasm on his behaviour, it was so pertinent and well turned, that it greatly pleafed Jehangire He took her at once in his arms. former affection returned, with all its violence; and the very next day, public orders were issued to prepare a magnificent festival, for the celebration of his nuptials with Mher-ul-Nissa. name was also changed by an edict into Noor-Mâhil, or the Light of the Seraglio. The emperor's former favourites vanished before her, and during the rest of the reign of Jehangire, she bore the chief fway in all the affairs of the empire.

The great power of Noor-Mahil appeared, for Piomotion the first time, in the immediate advancement of of her faher family. Her father, who, in the latter end of the reign of Akbar, had been chief treasurer of the empire, was raised to the office of absolute vifier and first minister. Ferid Bochari, who, under the title of Mortaza Chan, managed the affairs of the empire, had been, by a stroke of the Vol. III. palfy, naliv. rendered unfit for bufinels, which opened the way for the promotion of the Afternad ul The two brothers of Noor Mahil were raised to the first rank of nobility, by the titles of Acticad Chan and Afiph Jah Her numerous relations poured in from Tartary, upon hearing of the fortune of the house of Alass. Some of them were gratified with high employments, all with lucrative ones. Her father was not dazzled with the folendor of his high flation a man of probity in private life, of ability in office. He became a great and good minister His name is revered to this day in Hindoffan The ralents of her brothers were rather popular than great. They behaved with honour and moderation upon every occasion, strangers to infolence, and enemies to oppression. The invidiouinels of their fituation did not raise envy Men allowed, that merit intitled them more to their high flations, than their relation to the fa vourite Sultana. The writers of the affairs of Hindollan remark, That no family ever role fo fuddenly, or fo defervedly, to rank and emmence. than the family of Chaja Aiais, and this is our apology for the minute relation of their progress to greatness

I D H A N G I R E.

CHAP. III.

Pradent al. anastration—Insurrections quelled—Bad fuce Is in the Decan-Liperor's progress to Ajwere -Peace with the Rana-Prince Churrin in far our-Character of Sultan Purvez-An English Ambassador-His reception at Asmere-Transactions at court—Power of the Sultana— Progress to Mando—To Guzerat—The emperor's return to Agra-Death and character of the Vifier.

HE charms of the Sultana chranged the mind Prudent of Jehangire from all public affairs. Easy in his adminitemper, and naturally voluptuous, the powers of his foul were locked up in a pleafing enthufiafin of love, by the engaging conversation and extraordinary beauty of Noor-Mahil. The state, however, did not fuffer from the negligent indolence of the emperor. An ample field was left for the virtues and abilities of the new visier; who turned his attention more to domestic improvement than to foreign conquest. Agriculture, which had been much neglected, was encouraged. Many provinces, defolated by former disturbances and wars, were, by degrees, repeopled and cultivated. Security of property was given to the farmer; the industry of the mechanic was protected. The country assumed a new face: the useful $_{\rm L}$ 2

A D 1611 Hig 1020useful arts were revived and flourished in the cf. ties. The vifier even extended his improvementto defarts. Forests, formerly the haunts of wild beafts, were cut down, and villages and towns becan to rife in folitudes Infurrection and rebel lion were not heard of, because there was no onidleness being discouraged, robberies were things unknown The revenues of the em pire gradually increased to prevent extortion in the collection, every Suba was obliged to tranf mit monthly to court, a state of the improve ments and regulations made, in confequence of public instructions from Agra. When the im provements were not adequate to the taxes, the Subas were either feverely reprimanded, or de graded No diffinctions were made in the admini firation of julice, between the Mahoinmedan and Both were worshippers of God, each in his way, both members of the same community and fubiects of the fame lord

Afgana rebel =1.

When the father of the Sultana was thus em played, in internal regulations for the good of the empire, new commotions arole near its northern frontier The Afgans, a fierce and un tractable people, natives of the mountains beyond the Indus, always thirling after flaughter and plunder, could not long endure peace. These barbarians were encouraged to infurrection, by the absence of Shaw Bec Chan, Suba of Cabul, from the capital of the province of that name. The Suba had been obliged to make a journey northward, to lettle fome affairs on the frontiers, and Majin ul Muluc, the deputy governor of Ca bul fuffered hunfelf to be furprized in the city by the infurgents They entered Cabul, with a con fiderable army, and began to exercise all the cruelties of war. The inhabitants, rendered de sperate by missortune, took arms against the plum derers derers. The city became a scene of flaughter and distress. Nadili Meidani, a gallant man, and an officer of rank in the province, haltened to the relief of Cabul. Some of the banditti fled: many were put to the fword. The fugitives were purfued to their mountains, and the rebellion qualhed. These transactions happened in the month of Siffer, of the fixth year of Jehangire. An infurrection happened in Bengal toward An infurrection in the close of the same year. Asman, an Afgan, Bengal descended of the race of the Patan princes, who reigned in India before the empire fell under the dominion of the house of Timm, stured up a rebellion. He had formerly made many attempts to recover the throne of his fathers, but this was his most formidable and resolute effort. jait, an officer of rank, was dispatched against the rebel by Islam Chan, Suba of Bengal. armies foon came to an action. Sujait was on the point of being defeated. He drove his elephant, as the last refort of despair, through the thickest of the enemy, in search of Asman, who was mounted on a horse The elephant having feized the horse, dashed him and his rider against the ground; but when the animal was about to tread the unfortunate Asman under his feet, one of his attendants came and wounded the elephant in the trunk The elephant, with the pain of the wound, plunged in fuch a manner, that Sujait was thrown off, and fell headlong on the ground. His life was faved by his men, who feeing him exposing his person, became less careful about their own In their effort to extricate their chief, they repulsed the enemy. Asman, bruised with his fall, was carried back to his tent, where he foon after expired His death gave the victory to Sujait, and quashed the rebellion in Bengal. Sujait, for this fignal service, was raised by the emperor

A D 1701 Fig 1020

1611 Hig 1020. Another in Behar emperor to the title of Rustum Ziman, which signifies the Hercules of the Age

The infurrection in Bengal was fearce quelled, when another of a more extraordinary nature hap pened in the neighbouring province of Behar A man of low degree, whose name was Cuttub. descended of the Rohilla tribe of Afgans, and a native of Atcha, found his way to Behar That province was polleffed by a number of his nation. who had fettled there under the Patan empire. He affirmed that he was the prince Chufero, the reigning emperor s fon , and he accompanied his imposture with a probable story of his escape The misfortunes of Chusero had from prilon rendered him popular Many believed the tale Many, in love with innovation and spoil, joined the standard of Cuttub He numbered, in less than a week, feven thousand followers He assumed immediately the Imperial titles, and advanced with his motely army of ban ditti, toward Patna, the capital of the province of Behar Affil Chan, the Suba of the province, was absent at Gazipoor, about one hundred and twenty miles from Patna, and his deputy com manded in the city, when Cuttub appeared be fore it.

Quathed

The city of Patna was too large and ill garri foned with troops to make any defence. Cuttub entered it, with little opposition. He took position of the palace, women, and wealth of the Suba, and giving up Patna to plunder, divided the spoil among his adherents. Some, who were no strangers to the person of Sultan Chusero, endeavoured to expose the impossure. They suffered for their rashness, and were put to death Some, conscious of the impossure, were afraid to own their folly, and, having gone fo far were unwilling and alhamed to recede. Assil himself, at first, gave some credit to a report brought from all quarters. He knew not how to behave. He affected the party of Chusero; and he feared the emperor. Ten days after Patna was surprised by Cuttub, Affil was convinced, by various letters, that the leader of the infurrection was not the prince. He hastened from Gazipooi, with all the forces he could collect. On the third day he presented himself before Patna. marched out and gave him battle. The infurgents were defeated and fled. In the hurry of their flight they neglected to shut the gates; and the enemy entered at their heels. The pretended prince, driven to the last extremity, shut himself up, with a few friends, in the Suba's house. defended himself for some time. Assil, having lost twenty men in endeayouing to scale the walls, was fo fortunate as to kill the impostor with a brick-bat; and thus a ridiculous kind of death put an end to the ambitious views of Cuttub.

Intelligence of this infurrection arrived at the Prince court of Agia, at the same time with the news of Purvez its being quelled. Fresh disturbances broke out against t in a different corner of the empire. Amar Sinka, prince of Odipour, in the Decan, fetting fuddenly upon the Imperial troops on the frontier, defeated them. The action happened near the city of Brampour, among the mountains of Balagat. 'I he emperor was alarmed. He placed his fecond fon, Purvez, at the head of thirty thousand horse; and gave him, at the same time, a commission to take the command of all the troops on the confines of the Imperial dominions and the Decan. The force, had it even been well conducted, was no more than adequate to the fervice. Amar Sinka, who went under the title of Rana, or THE PRINCE, by way of eminence, deduced his descent from the Imperial family, who reigned in the great

1611 Hig 1020

42

A D 1611 He 1020 city of Kinôge over all India for many centuries before that empire was invaded by the followers of Mahommed He added power to his noble birth He possessed the greater part of the territories which compose the extensive dominions of the present Mahrattors, and the lawful heir of his family bears, to this day, the name of Prince among that powerful ariflocracy

Peuds in

Many nobles of the first rank and renown the Impe attended Sultan Purvez in this expedition The most considerable were Chan Jehan, descend ed of the Imperial family of Lodi, who reigned before the house of Timur, in Hindostan, Mirea Abdul Rahim, who derived his pedigree from Timur, and Chan Chanan, the fon of the famous Byram, who had been regent during the minority of the emperor Akbar Thefe com posed the prince a council But they carried their former feuds into their deliberations. They were unanimous in nothing Jealoufy, in its most forbidding form, appeared in all their debates, and they could not even abstain from indecent reflec tions upon one another. The fpirit of Hif cord foread from the council of war to the army Each of the great Omrahs had his partizans and abettors Faction and reigned in every corner of the camp prince was naturally mild, he wanted experience, and he was destitute of that intrepid sirmness and feverity, which is necessary to awe mankind into obedience He descended to intreaty where he ought to command, and when he endeavoured to reconcile them, their passion became more in flamed, as every check was removed by his known foftness of disposition trefsand retreat.

The army in the mean time advanced a few days march of Brampour, the Imperialifts came in fight of the enemy. Men generally be come united at the approach of danger

pened

ΑD

1611. Hig.

1020

pened otherwise here. The spirit of Discord and Envy had been been let loose, and the Omiahs feared the enemy less, than the success that might attend the advice of any one of themselves. Chan -Tehan was for battle. Chan Chanan differed from him in opinion, as the enemy was too advantageously posted in the hills. Abdul Rahim, was for entering the Rana's country by another road. The prance was ready to adopt any resolution, upon which they all should agree. This was impossible The army lay mactive The air in the camp became putrid. Fevers raged. The enemy hovered round on the mountains. Provisions and forage became scarce the fields around were red with the fresh graves of the dead. But though the council of war disagreed about an attack, they concurred in a retreat. They fled with precipitation to Amere. The enemy hung on their rear. The Omrahs wrote separately letters to court, with accusations against each other's conduct. Chan Chanan was recalled to Agra, divefted of all his employments; and he even thought himfelf happy in being able to fave his life. The difgrace of this nobleman redounded not to the honour of Chan Jehan. That lord, through whose accusations Chan Chanan chiefly fell, rendered himfelf odrous by ingratitude . He had been educated in the family of Chan Chanan: he had rifen, through his influence, to all his honours and offices." -

Purvez ro-

Jehangire, alarmed at the bad success of his called. arms against the Rana, dispatched Mohabet Chan to take the command of the army. He could not have made a better choice. Mohabet was brave in action, intrepid in deliberation, full of dignity and spirit, under the absolute dominion of judgment and good conduct. Purvez was recalled to the presence. The unfortunate issue of the campaign was a severe blow to that prince. It affected it was the duty of every prince to evert the power placed in his hands, in defence of his subjects and dominions, but as war had been kindled, and the fortune of the Mahommedans had prevailed, he thought it his duty to use his success with moderation, and that he was willing to put an im mediate end to all differences, by a folid and lasting peace. The Rana consented to pay a tri bute to the family of Timur Some difficulties arole about the fum the decision was left to le hangire. To finish the treaty, as well as to be an hostage for the Rana's faith, Kinwar Kirren, that prince s fon, was dispatched to the Imperial presence. Jehangire, at the time, kept his court at Aimere He received Kinwar with great dif tinction He presented him with arms, jewels, a rich drefs for himfelf, and one for each of his principal attendants. He also gave to the prince an Imperial elephant, fumptuously caparifoned. and one hundred fine Perfian horfes He created him by patent an Omrali of five thousand but all these were splended badges of Bavery, and the means of degradation from his former indepen dence and tank Peace was finally fettled, upon the terms proposed by Churrum.

Ilig 1013

Prince Ch i n i great favo r

The fuccels of the expedition into the Decan, raifed to a high pitch the reputation of Churrum His father's affection for him grew with his fame. Men began to turn their eyes upon him, as the heir apparent of the throne Jehangire treated him, in his converfation, with the highest of stillnession, and he feemed anxious to express to the would his affection and regard. A court was appointed for him. Estates were settled upon him, for the maintenance of a body guard of a shousand horse, and sisten thousand foot, subject only to his commands. Sultan Purvez, in the mean time, declined in his father's esteem in proportion.

tion as Churrum 10se. The prince Chuse10 was full in close confinement, and a fair field was left for the ambition of Churrum

During the transactions in the Decan, a ridiculous whim rose in the emperor's mind He A whim of the empeordered his ears to be bored, and then he hung ior them with large pearls. An edict was issued to forbid the court to all nobles who should not do the same. He, in the mean time, distributed a vast quantity of pearls and jewels among the nobility, to induce them to pay obedience to the edict. Many, however, were refractory. rings are the badge of flavery among the Indians; and the Mahommedans, though subject to despotism, wished to avoid the appearance of being flaves. Jehangire himfelt gives a ridiculous reafon for this innovation in drefs. In his memoirs of the first twelve years of his reign, he excuses the introduction of ear-rings, from a motive of religion, to the superstitions of which, he was by no means often subject. His father Akbar, it was pretended, by the merit of a pilgrimage to Aimere, to the learned and religious Chaja Moinul-dien, had been bleffed with children gire was the first fruits of this piece of devotion: and he faid, in the preamble to his edict, that he, who was brought into being by the prayers of Chaja, could do no less than become his flave, and wear the marks of fervitude. His reasons appeared fo abfurd and fuperstitious, that some of the nobles taxed him with favouring idolatry. The effeminate custom was, however, introduced by the weight of the Imperial authority, and it still remains a blot on Jehangire's memory, and a lasting mark of the weakness of his mind.

On the twentieth of Mohiriim of the 1024, Difgrace Sultan Churrum returned to court, covered with of Chan Azim, and laurels. He was received by Jehangire with death of marks Man Singli.

1615 Hill 1014. marks of the highest esteem and affection, which the artful prince converted to means favourable to his schemes of ambition, and to gratify his naffion for revenge. Chan Azim, already men tioned as the principal abettor of Chufero s rebel lion, was accused by Churrum of intended treason He had long been excluded from the councils of state, and though his government of Malaya had been continued to him, it was more from a fear of his influence, than from a respect to his character and person Habituated to the high office of visierin the reign of Akbar, he could not brook his want of power. He spoke incautiously of go vernment; and it is faid, that he actually medi rated to render himfelf independent of the empire, in his own province of Malava feized before his schemes were ripe for execution. carried to Gualiar, and imprisoned in that im pregnable fortres Raja Man Singh, the next great adherent of prince Chusero, died in the course of the same year, in his government of Bengal He was chief of the Rajaput princes His honour was great, his reputation high the wars of Albar he fignalized himself upon many occasions. He was very instrumental in the conquest of Bengal, the government of which. as a reward for his fervices, he retained to his death His fon Bao Singh succeeded him in his fubathip, being raifed by the emperor to the rank of an Omrah of five thousand horse, by the title of Mirza Rhagi

CI eta 15 an husez

When Sultan Churrum carried all things before him in the Imperial presence, his elder brother Purvez resided with all the pomp of royalty at Brampour as governor of the dominion and province of Candeish Chan Chanan, in some mea sure restored to savour, remained with Purvez and managed, under him, the affairs of the province. In the end of the autumn of the 1024

οſ

ΛD

1615 Hig

102.1

of the Higera, Sir Thomas Roc, the English Ambassador to the court of Agra, arrived at Brampour. Politeness and affability were natural to Purvez. Full of honour and good-nature, his virtues were of the milder cast too indolent for the fatigues of business, dissident of his own abilities. He possessed the personal courage of a good foldier, but he was destitute of the conduct necessary to a great general. He followed implicitly the advice of others, when there was no difagreement in their opinions, when there was, he was embarrassed, and could not decide. His genius fuited times of tranquillity; and had he lived to possess the throne, he might have rendered his people happy, from his invariable clemency and love of domestic quiet.

When the arrival of Sir Thomas at Brampour His courwas announced, by the proper officer, to the teous reprince, he fent him a polite message to come into Sir Thohis presence. The ambassador obeyed, and Pui- mas Roe vez prepared to receive him in state. In the outward court of the palace, a hundred gentlemen on horseback formed a lane, through which the ambiffador, conducted by the Cutwal, paffed In the inner court, the prince fat mounted in a gallery, under a royal canopy. The nobles, according to their rank, formed a line on either side. The chief secretary stood on the steps of the throne, and conveyed, in the concilest terms, to the prince, whatever was addressed to him from below. The behaviour of Puivez was, upon the whole, courteous and obliging he passed from the usual ceremonies required from ambassadors, and affected to treat Sir Thomas after the manner of his own country. A firman was immediately issued, for a permission to an English factory to settle at Brampour. The prince invited the ambassador to a private conference,

A Di 1613 Hig 1924

to than him for his presents; infinuating that he was anytous to throw off that state and distance, with which he was obliged to receive him, before so creat an appearance of nobles

Jehangire, in the mean time, kept his court at Aimere. He feemed infane upon the article of paying lionours to Chaia. He ordered a mag inficent palace to be built, in the neighbourhood of Aimere for Hafiza Jerimal, the faint's daugh ter the holy man himself from the austerity of his principles, not chafing by an acceptance of present, to depart from the simplicity of life and philotophical character which had raifed his The palace built for Jemmal was remark able for beauty and fituation. Tine baths were erected over natural fountains, and extensive pardens were laid out around it, with great ele gance and tafte Tranquility prevailed over all the empire. The motions of the army in the Decan were rather parade than war Luxury prevailed in every form. The magnificence of the favourne Sultana was beyond all bounds Expensive pageants, sumptuous entertainments, were the whole bufinels of the court of music never ceased by day in the street, the fky was enlightened at night with fire works and illuminations

Th Ing Iff bildor at court

In the midft of this festivity and joy, the Eng his ambassalor arrived at Ajmere. He was received by Jehangure with the utmost affability and politerics. He even prevented the ambassalor with expressions of respect for his master, and selectations to himself upon his safe arrival at court. The presents given by the ambassalor were agreeable to the emperor, but a fine coach sent by hing James pleased him most of all. He even had the impatience to go into it that very night, and to desire the ambassalor's servants to draw him around the court of the palace. Sultan Churium, at the time, was all-powerful in the allairs of the flate. To him the ambaffador applied, as lord of Surat, to redrefs the grievances of the English at that port. The prince was courteous, and promifed fan, but he was an enemy to all Christians, whom he called Idolaters, and most of all an enemy to the English. The empefor's favour for the ambassador prevailed, in some measure, over the prince's prejudices and obstinacy. In the month of January 1615, a firmân was obtained for the establishment of a factory at Surat. But it was worded with caution, delecave and cucumferibed.

1615

Hig

1024

In the end of the year 1024, two insurrections Disturbhappened in the kingdom of Guzerat. The first Guzerat, was a rebellion excited by a youth, descended of the ancient kings of that country: the fecond was an extraordinary incursion of the Coolies, a race of robbers, who, from then delaits, infelted the highways and cultivated country. The young rebel assumed the title of Bahadar Shaw he could execute any thing material he died, and Guzerat was relieved from the threatened missortune of a civil war. Abdalla Chan was ordered, from the Decan, against the Coolies. He had commanded the Imperial army against the Rana, in the intermediate space of time between the recall of Mohabet and the arrival of prince Churrum. He was successful, but his glory was obscured by the superior reputation of the prince, who fucceeded him. Jehangire was not infenfible of the valour and abilities of Abdalla. leave a fair field to his favourite fon, he removed the general to Guzerat. The emperor departed from his usual humanity, in his instructions to Abdalla. The Coolies were a barbarous and cruel race of men: and Jehangire gave directions Vol. III. M to

THE HISTORY OF HINDOSTAN

to extirpate the whole tribe, as enemies to the rest of mankind

Abdalla arrived with great expedition at Ahmedabad, the capital of Guzerat Some chiefs who, from the hopes of booty, and through fear, had joined the Coolies, submitted to him in his march With five hundred felect men, the general left Ahmedabld, and he made so much ex pedition, that he entered the mountainous and almost impervious country of the Coolies, before they had any intelligence of his march. The two principal chiefs of the banditti were Eder and Laci Abdalla fat down fuddenly before the castle of Eder That chief not intimidated. marched out and gave him battle After an obfinate conflict of fome hours, the Coolies were obliged to fly Eder took the way of the defart, and left his caftle and treasure to the victor Lael, in the mean time, was on an excursion of depredation in another corner of Guzerat had robbed a great caravan of all its merchan dize, and it was the news of this misfortune that directed Abdalla to the enemy Lael had under him three thousand horse and twelve thousand foot but Abdalla had been reinforced Cools did not decline battle. The action was bloody Victory declared for Abdalla and the head of Laël, who was slam in the fight, was placed over one of the gates of Ahmedabad

The infurrection at Guzerat was fearce quelled, when the Afgans, the natives of the mountains between India and Perija, revolted, and issuing from their hills, laid waste the neighbouring country, in the province of Cabul Shaw Bec. governor of Cabul, marched against the insur-They had the folly to come to a regular battle with that Suba, and they were defeated Shaw Bec made the best use of his victory He purfued ce in hal .bed.

fhirb-

A D

1615

Hig

nihed

Ab Цa

pursued the fugitives beyond Candahai; and ieflored his province to its former tranquillity.

During the residence of Sultan Purvez in Brampour, the capital of Chandeish, Chan Jehân, Badsucalready mentioned, as an Omiah of great dif-cess in the tinction, descended from the royal family of Lodi, Decan commanded the Imperial army, in fubordination to the prince; and pushed his expeditions into the unconquered kingdoms of the Decan Maleck-Amber was at the head of the confederacy against the Imperial invasion. Nothing of confequence was done by Chan Jehan, on account of disputes between the officers of the army. The prince Purvez was ordered to take the command in person. Upon his appearance at the head of the Imperial troops, feveral chiefs submitted, and paid the accustomed tribute leck Amber stood out alone. The Rana broke his treaty, and appeared in arms. The danger alarmed Jehangire He had a better opinion of the military abilities of Sultan Churrum, than of those of Purvez. The former was ordered to superfede the latter, which was at once reckoned unjust and impolitic, as Churrum was as much detested by the foldiers, as Purvez was beloved

In the month of June, one thousand fix hun-Sultan dred and fixteen, according to our computation of Churrum's time, the prince Churrum marched from Aimere to changed the Decan. His father, before his departure, con- to Shaw Jehan. ferred upon him the title of Shaw Jehan, or King This name he retained even OF THE WORLD after his accession to the empire, and he was distinguished by it, during the remainder of his father's reign, that of Churrum being, from his going upon the present expedition, laid for ever aside. The friends of the family of Timur, represented to the emperor the danger of fending the younger to supersede the elder brother; considering the animolities animolities which sublisted between them matter," faid Jehangire, " let them fight it out " The victor shall manage the war in the Decan " the vanquished may return to me '

M 2

Hig 1015

forech of a lunatic, more than that of a pru dent prince Purvez, however, was of a milder disposition, than to push his resentment so far He quietly refigned the command and was fuc ceeded by Shaw Jehan, much against the inclina tion of the army

Porces the princes of to a peace

Shan Jehan having carried from Ajmere a the Decan great reinforcement, upon his arrival, fet the army in motion toward the enemy The princes of the Decan were intimidated, and they were divided among themselves They retreated at Shaw Jehan's approach, and fent ambassadors to sue for peace Shaw Jehan, glad of an opportu nity of eclipfing Sultan Purvez, received their submission upon easy terms. Maleck Amber. again deferted, had the resolution not to accede to the pacification Shaw Jehan, anxious to return with his laurels to court, left the war ful pended by a partial truce, rather than finished by a folid peace. On the eleventh of Shawal, of the one thousand and twenty fixth of the Higera, he arrived in the presence, accompanied by the princes who had submitted to his arms. Their respective tributes were soon settled, and they were

Ca fe of the former badfc cels permitted to return The fuccels of this expedition was by no means the effect of Shaw Jehan's prudent and resolute The way to a pacification had been conduct paved before he left Aymere The emperor, justly altonished at the small progress of his arms in the Decan, enquired minutely into the cause. Chan Chanan, who managed every thing under Sultan Purvez, was fecretly in the pay of the enemy He clogged every measure, and rendered every expedition expedition of no effect. He long endeavoured, by his friends at court, to prevent the removal of Purvez. The emperor had taken his resolution. Shaw Jehan was destined for the command of the aimy; and Chan Chanan, to deprive him of the honour of a victory over an enemy, who had apparently refisted all his own and his pupil's efforts, perfuaded the confederates to fue for peace, in the Imperial presence, without alleging their fear of Shaw Jehan as anyways conducive to their offers of pacification. The emperor, however, would not receive their fubmission, but through the hands of the prince; anxious to raise the confequence of his favourite fon in the eyes of his subjects.

A D

1025

In the month of December of the year one The emthousand six hundred and sixteen, according to the peror removes Christian æra, the emperor, with all the accus- from tomed magnificence of his march, lest Almeie. Almere His professed design was to approach nearer to his army on the frontiers, to give them spirit with his presence. After a tedious journey, he arrived at Mando, in the province of Malava, and took up his refidence in that city. He did one very popular action on his march. Passing by the place where his fon Chusero was confined, he ordered his coach * to stop at the gate The prince, by his commands, was brought before him chains were struck off; and he was placed upon one of the Imperial elephants The people were overloyed at the release of Chusero His affability, and the beauty of his person, recommended him to the vulgar, and they loved him on account of his misfortunes. Many causes concurred to make the emperor adopt this measure. He was formed, that some friends of Shaw Jehan were

^{*} The same that was sent him as a present by our James I.

A D 1016 Hig 1025 plotting against the life of Chusero. The minister, Asaph Jah, the savourite Sultana s brother, had also behaved rudely to the unfortunate prince, and betrayed symptoms of dishike and revenge Shaw Jehan was probably at the bottom of all. His triends, without his permission, would scarce have attempted the life of his brother and he had been lately married to the daughter of Asaph Jah. The emperor was enraged at their wicked ness and presumption, and, by an act of power, frustrated, for the time, their designs

Great pow r of the emp ols.

The power of Noor Mahil over the emperor's affections, had not in the least abated. She, for the most part, ruled over him with absolute sway some times his spirit broke forth beyond her controll Her brother a alliance with Shaw Jehan, kept her in the interest of that prince and her aversion to Chuseroand Purvez was equal to her regard for him An edict was iffued to change her name from Noor Mahil into that of Noor Ichan, or the LIGHT OF THE WORLD To diffinguish her from the other wives of the emperor, the was always addressed by the title of Shahe, or Empress Her name was joined with that of the emperor, on the cur-She was the fpring which moved the great machine of the flate Her family took rank immediately after the princes of the blood They were admitted at all hours, into the prefence, nor were they excluded from the most fecret apartments of the feraglio By her influence, Chan Azim, the late viller, was released from his confinement in Gualiar, and admitted into court

Traviac tions at cout dur gits re fidence at Mando It was after Jehangire's arrival at Mando, that the affairs of the Decan were fettled. The Eng lish ambassador remained still at court. The affability and good nature of Jehangire did not, for some time, overbalance Shaw Jehân's aver-

A D

Hig

1027

fion to the English nation. An incident at Surat was magnified into an infult upon the Imperial power, by the prince and his party. The ambassador, however, removed the emperor's jealoufy and he had the address to gain, at last, the favour of the prince, the minister, and the empress: and obtained the privileges of trade, which were the object of his embass. An ambassador from Persia was not so successful he was received with little ceremony, and difmifed with a coolness little short of contempt. He came to negociate a loan at the court of Agra, and Jehangire was in no humour to give any of his money away. The emperor even descended into meanness, on the occasion. The Persian had been ferved in all necessaries from court. A bill was ordered to be fent him, when he announced his defign of departing. He was obliged to pay the last farthing, but the presents which he had brought for the emperor were valued, and deducted from the fum demanded.

The emperor, having fettled the affairs of the Emperor's Decan, and spent at Mando seventeen months, progress to Guzerat, in hunting and other rural amusements, marched, and return with his Lescâr, or great camp, into the kingdom to Agra of Guzerat. In the latter end of the Autumn of the one thousand and twenty-seventh of the Higera, he arrived at Ahmedabad, the capital of Guzerat. He took, from that city, the route of Cambait: where he had ordered ships and magnificent barges to be ready for him, to take his amusement on the ocean, with all his court. He was foon tired of the agitation of the vessels on the waves, and returned to Ahmedabâd, on the fecond of Ramzan, of the year one thouland and twenty-feven. He did not long remain at Ahmedabâd. He took the route of Agra, and arrived in that capital after an absence of near five years.

Soon

A D.

16 18

11 c

10 27

Death and char ft r

of the vi

Soon after the court returned to Agra, the good old rifier. Afternad ul Dowla, the emperor s father in law, gave up a life, which, on account of his many virtues, had become dear to the peo ple Bred up in the school of Adversity, Acte mad ul Dowla had learned to subdue his passions, to liften to the diffrates of Reason, to feel fo the misfortunes of mankind Having raifed himself from servitude to authority, from indi gence to honour and wealth, he knew the duties of every flation. He was not left converfant with the world in practice, than he was from his ex tenfive reading and the well weighed reflections of his own mind An economist in every thing. but in charity, he was only covetous of wealth to relieve the needy and the poor. He chose rather to maintain the dignity of his rank by the num ber of his friends, than by that of domestics, fol lowers, and flaves. The people loved him as a father, but feared him as a father too, for he tempered feverity with moderation, and lenity with the rigour of the laws. The empire flou rished under his wife administration. No evil but luxury prevailed That weed takes root in prof perity, and, perhaps, can never be eradicated from fo rich a foil -The empress was inconsola ble for the death of her father She proposed, at once, as a proof of her affection and magnificence, to perpetuate his memory in a monument of folid filver The imperial architect foon convinced her, that a metal fo precious would not be the most lasting means of transmitting the visier : fame to pollerity " All ages,' faid he, " are full of avarice, and even the empire of the " house of Timur, like all sublunary things, 18 She dropt " fubject to revolution and change. her purpole, and a magnificent fabric of stone still retains, in Agra, the name of Actemad ul Dowla IEHAN

JEHANGIRE.

C II A P. IV.

D., of the of the cont-Typedition to Sewalic-The emperor in Ciffmire—Diffurbances in the Decan -Prince Chafero murdered-Rebillion of Share Johan-He is repulfed at Agra-Defeated at Delli-Parfied by his brother Pur coz-Defeated at the Nirbidda—II: reduces Orixa, Bengal and Bohn - He marches toward the capital-Totally defeated by Purvez-Befuges Brampour-In great diftiefs-His fubriffion-Gandahar loft to the cripire.

LIIE death of the old visier produced no alteration in the affairs of the court of Agra. Habituated, under his father, to public bufinels, Afiph Jah was active in his high department, and Jehangire himfelf had acquired a confiderable degree of expetion of the rience and knowledge, in the past years of his reign. court The favourite Sultana was not in the mean time She even attended to transactions in which her own passions were not immediately concerned; and often gave featonable advice to her confort. She had fuch an ascendancy over the emperor's mind, that he feldom durst attempt any material measure without her concurrence. She disposed of the highest offices at pleasure, and the greatest honours were conferred at her nod. was attentive to his fifter's humours. the pride and haughtiness of her disposition, and wandered after a variety of rural pleasures, over the face of that charming and flourishing country. He did not return to Lahore, till the month of Mohirium of the year that succeeded his arrival at Cashmire.

Hig 1027

1640 fr g 1039.

Il flurbthe Decan

The emperor had scarce arrived at Lahore, when he received advices that the princes of the Decan, who had engaged to pay a certain tribute, had driven away, by force, the deputes who had been sent to receive it. The refractory tributaries backed this violent measure with an army of fixty thousand horse. They encamped at Balla pour. The chiefs of the confederates were Nizam ul Mulue, Adul Chan, and Cuttub. They were descended of the Mahommedan princes, who, at the fall of the Patan empire, had affured the state and independence of princes in the Decan lebangire, upon receiving this intelligence.

Shawle Infitte quell he indurgent immediately dispatched Shaw Jehan to Agra He mave him a commission to command the Im perial army flationed in and near that city prince did not continue long at Agra. He marched, on the twentieth of Siffer, toward His force confilted of forty thousand Brampour horse Abdul Hussein, an experienced officer. was his fecond in command. Letters came to the prince on his march, from the Imperial go vernor of Mando, that a confiderable detachment of the enemy had croffed the Nithidda, and were laving walle the country. Abdul Huffem was immediately detached against them with five t jouland horfe I hat general came up with the defeated them flew many on the ipot, and purfued the fugures to the hills prince himfelf continued his route to Brampour

There's (han Chanan, who commanded at Brampour, was in a manner belieged in that city by the etient). They had traveried the provinces of

Berar

1620 Hig.

1 129

Berar and Chandeish, and spread their devastations to the gates of Brampour. The Impenalists recovered their spirit, upon the prince's airival with an army, and the hopes of the infurgents began to vanish. Some petty Rajas, who had joined the confederates, took the first opportunity of throwing themselves at the feet of Shaw Jehan. They were pardoned, but obliged to pay the arrear of their tribute, which amounted to fifty lacks. The Mahommedan princes, being deferted by the Hindoo Rajas, their troops mutinied, and dissentions rose in their councils. They separated in disgust and despair, each to his own territory. Shaw Jehân divided his army into five parts, and followed the rebels. In the space of a few months, without any confiderable action, he reduced the infurgents to their former obedience, forcing them to pay the airears of their tribute, which was now fettled at the annual fum of fifty-five lacks of roupees.

When Shaw Jehân had received orders from his Chufero father to quell the disturbances in the Decan, he delivered into the requested that his brother, the unfortunate prince hands of Chusero, might be put into his hands. He had often Shaw Jemade the same request before, but to no effect. Jehangire justly doubted his fincerity, when he profeffed, that it was a regard for a brother that induced him to wish to have Chusero in his possession. He knew the ambition of Shaw Jehan he still had an affection for Chusero. Asiph Jah, even the favourite Sultana had gone into the views of Shaw Jehân; but the emperor remained long inflexi-Shaw Jehân, for some time, seemed to drop his defigns. He, in the mean time, grew daily in his father's esteem; and Chusero declined in proportion as his brother rofe. When the alarming news from the Decan arrived at Lahore, the emperor's hopes rested all on Shaw Jehân. The artful

A D 1621 111g 1030 artful prince, in the critical moment, renewed his request, with regard to Chusero, and he was delivered into his hands

The Sui tana ful pects his delicas

Though Noor Milul had been formerly in the interest of Shaw Jeban she had lately many reafons to alter her opinion concerning that prince Her penetrating eye had pierced the veil which he had drawn over his designs. She saw the great lines of ambition, and an unrelenting perfeverance in purfust of power, in all his conduct. She com municated her fuspicions to Jehangire she told him, that Shaw Jehân must be curbed: that he manifestly aspired to the throne, that all his actions tended to gain popularity, that his apparent virtues were hypocrify, and not the offspring of a generous and honest mind, and that he waited but for a convenient opportunity to throw off the mail of decentful duty and ferened allegrance The emperor was convinced, but it was too late Chufero was already in the hands of Shaw Jehan, and the latter was at the head of an army Silence now was prudence, and a melancholy anxiety fucceeded to condefcending weakness

Charafter of Chu fero

Chusero, though popular on account of the beauty of his person, and his misfortunes, was a prince of a haughty disposition. He was governed by furious passions. His mind was in a perpetual agitation, without pointing to any end He was now volatile and cheerful, now dark and fullen. He often laughed at musfortunes . he was often enraged at trifles, and his whole conduct betrayed every mark of an infanity of mind His judgment was little his memory He always preferred the last advice, having no power of mind to distinguish propriety, no retention to make just comparisons. His de figns were therefore often ill founded , his actions presolute and undecifive, and they always terminated nated in difgrace and rum. Yet he had fomething about him that commanded respect in the midst of his infirmities. Nobody could look at his conduct without difgust, none observed his manner or faw his person without regard and a kind of esteem. Had he not been somed by misfortunes, he was naturally of a generous and tender disposition, but adversity stopping up the current of his mind, threw it out of its channel. and he, at last, became indisserent concerning his own fate.

A D. 1621-Hig. 1030.

Shaw Jehan, for some time, affected to treat Heisaffalthe unfortunate Chusero with attention and re-finatedfpect. But this was a delufive gleam before a fform. His defigns were not yet ripe for execution. To remove Chuseio would be to no purpose, till other obstacles to his own ambition were removed. Fortune favoured his designs. His fuccess in the Decan raised his reputation; the plunder of the enemy furnished the means of gaining for him the army They expressed their inviolable attachment to his person and views. He threw off the mask at once. He disregarded the mandates of the court of Agra, and to complete his crimes, he ordered the unfortunate Chufero to be affassinated by russians, under the walls of Azere He affumed, foon after, the Imperial titles; laying the foundation of his throne in a brother's blood.

Manner of

Though all mankind were convinced, that his death Shaw Jehân was accessary to the murder of Chusero, he had taken previous measures to conceal the intended crime When he had quelled the infurrection in the Decan, he became apparently melancholy, and pretended to fall into a disease. His friends were full of anxiety. One only was in the fecret, and he began to infinuate, that the prince had received intelligence, that Jehangire had determined to raise Chusero to the throne.

favourite Sultana. That woman, fays the writer, finding that the health of the emperor declined, was apprehensive that the crown would devolve on Shaw Jehân; who had, for some time, been the determined enemy of her influence and power. She, therefore, resolved to ruin the affairs of that prince; and to fix the succession in the person of Shariar, the fourth son of Jehangire, who was married to her own daughter, by her former husband Shere Afkun. Her absolute dominion over the emperor obtained credit to her aspersions. She actually procured a promise for an alteration of the succession: and it was the certain intelligence of this circumstance, continues his apologist, that drove Shaw Jehân to extremes.

titles till the twenty-seventh of the second Jem-titles màd of the one thousand and thirty-first of the He immediately, with a numerous army, took the route of Delhi, where, at that time, his father refided. The news of his march flew before him, and reached the ears of Jehangire. That monarch became anxious, irrefolute, and perplexed; and to complete the confusion in his councils, advices were, at the fame time, received, that Shaw Abas, king of Persia, at the head of a great force, had surprised Candahar. The emperor was thunderstruck at this double intelligence of approaching misfortune. The rebellious prince had the flower of the Imperial army under his command. Jehangire, as the last resort, had recourse to policy. Instead of arming for his own defence, he dissembled his knowledge of his son's intentions. He wrote him affectionate letters from day to day. He praised his former actions. He commended his present alacrity, in coming so expeditionsly against the

Vol. III.

A D. 1621 Hig 1030

Though Shaw Jehân's designs upon the throne He aswere no secret, he did not assume the Imperial sumes the titles till the twenty-seventh of the second Jem-tutles Persian.

ΛD 1612 Hig 1031

Shaw Jehân was not to be flattered out of Perfian his designs He saw thro' his father s policy, and he gradually advanced, but being overtaken by the rains he was obliged to halt fome months at Mando, the capital of the province of Malava.

at Ag a

Shaw Jehan in his march made the first hostile Is repulfed attempt upon the castle of Agra In that fortress was lodged a great part of the Imperial treasure. Upon the news of the prince's departure from Mando, the emperor fent Afiph Jah, the visier, to transport the treasure from Agra to Lahore bir Chan, who commanded the fortress, was unwilling to risk the treasure on the road, as the news of Shaw Jehân s near approach was arrived The importunities of Aliph prevailed Etabar with a party escorted the treasure the enemy appeared in view Etabar immediate ly retired, with his convoy, to the castle of Agra, and Aliph made the best of his way to Delhi Shaw Jehan, immediately upon his arrival, order ed the castle to be assaulted, but Bickermajit, who commanded the attack, was fo warmly re cerved, that he was glad to retire, with the lofs The prince, enraged at of five hundred men this disappointment, delivered up to plunder some of the nobility s houses at Agra, and then took the rout of Delhi

His demanda on his father

The prince having advanced, formed his camp The city of Delhi was alarmed at Feridabad the emperor perplexed A letter, in the mean time, was brought to him from his rebellious fon Shaw Jehan demanded, That the command of all the Imperial troops should be given to him with out referve that orders should be fent to the go vernors of the provinces to receive all their future instructions from his hands that permission should be given him to receive, into his possession, all the warlike stores, that he should have access to the royal magazines and treasures to supply him with every necessary, for carrying on the war against Persia. and that the impregnable cassle of Rentimpour should be placed in his hands, as a place of fecurity for his family, against the machinations of the Sultana, during his absence in the north.

AD. 1622. Hig. 1032.

Jehangire was enraged beyond measure at pro- refused. posals which, if granted, would actually dethrone him. His resentment and pride got the better of his temporizing timidity. He issued out an edict declaring his fon a rebel, should he not disband his army, and return to his duty, by a certain day. Another edict confiscated all his estates, by recalling the grants which had been given him, for a magnificent subsistence. The estates were conferred upon Sultan Shariar; who was, at the fame time, invested with a commission to carry on, with the utmost vigour, the Persian war. Rustum Suffavi, an experienced and able officer, was placed next in command to the prince in the expedition. Rustum was himself a Persian, a near relation to Shaw Abas, and deduced his paternal descent from the Imperial family of Suffvi.

The Imperial edicts made no impression on Preparati-Shaw Jehân. The emperor flew from the pen to ons against the fword. The troops stationed near the capital flocked to his standard: others joined him from the provinces. Afiph Jah and the Sultana had foreseen the storm, and the adherents of the emperor were on their march to Delhi, when the rebel prince was on his route from the Decan. Jehangire, in a few days, saw forty thousand horse under his command. Scarce ten thousand of these were of the standing force of the empire, fo that Shaw Jehan had still a manifest superiority.

The river Jumna, being in the dry season of He endezthe year fordable, the emperor croffed it; and vours to both armies arrived at Belochpoor, and remained conduct. some days in hourly expectations of a battle. The prince,

1623 ling 1012

the left wing. The action was begun by the advanced guards on both fides Those of Shaw Je han were defeated, at the first onset, by a strange accident Abdalla, who commanded the ad vanced guard of the Imperialist, spurring on his horse among the enemy, with a few officers in the fecret, joined the rebels. His troops, mil taking their commander's perfidy for valour, rushed forward to support him; and having en gaged the enemy hand to hand, drove them back upon their own line

Sham Je han dofeated.

Afiph Jah took immediate advantage of the confusion occasioned by the flight of Shaw Jehân's advanced guard He pressed forward with the center of the Imperialifts, and came to action with Raja Bickermajit The shock was violent. and the battle continued obstinate for some time. Both the commanders exerted themselves to the utmost. At length the fortune of Asiph prevailed Raya Bickermajit fell, pierced through the head with an arrow The center of the rebels imme diately fled, and, at that instant, Mohâbet drove the left wing from the field Raja Bimé, in the mean time, pressed hard upon Nawasis Chan, who commanded the right wing of the Impe rialists The dust was so great, that the contend ing armies were involved in darkness. They felt for each other with their fwords. Nawalis was driven from the field Many of his officers were killed, and fome taken prisoners Raja Bimé, imagining he was returning after a complete vic tory, fell in with the troops of Afiph Jah. They mixed undistinguished with each other Slaugh ter and confusion reigned. Wounds were in flicted at random Chance governed all Every individual confidered himfelf as in the midst of ten thousand foes The armies retreated to their camps The field was left to the dead

Both

Both parties, at first, claimed the honour of the victory, but the consequences declared it to belong to Jehangire. Though both the emperor and Shaw Jehân had been kept out of the line at Circumthe beginning of the action, by the affiduity of flances their friends, when the battle became hot, they mixed with their respective armies. Bickermasit, observing the emperor, pressed forward to seize him; but in the attempt was flain. The spirit of the rebels fell with their leader. Shaw Jehan presented himself to the runaways in vain. Neither threats nor promises would do. A panic had feized them, and though the prince cried aloud, That he himself, as good and as brave an officer as Bickermajît, was alive, they listened not as they passed, and soon sled beyond the power of hearing.

Shaw Jehân became almost distracted with his during the misfortunes. He refolved feriously to prevent battle. future misery and distress, by an immediate death. His adherents, however, prevailed upon him to retreat. He fled to the mountains of Mewat; his army falling off as he fled. Jehangire was the more astonished at his good fortune, the more it was unexpected. When the news of Abdalla's treachery was brought him, he had given all over for lost. He distrusted Asiph Jah; and he sent a messenger to recal him from the front, when that minister was upon the point of engaging the enemy. Fortunately for the emperor, the meffenger did not come up to the visier till the affair was decided. The latter obeyed Jehangire, and

The battle was scarce decided, when Sultan Sultan Purvez, in consequence of his father's orders, Purvez arrives in the arrived from Allahabad, in the Imperial camp. camp Jehangire received him with an excess of joy. The victory over his rebellious on had elevated brought him the news of victory.

his foirits, and diffipated all his fears. He fent A D 1611 Hio 1012.

74

his feraglio before him to Agra, and raifed Pur sez, under the tuttion of Mohâbet, to the com mand of the army Shaw Jehan, in the mean time, with a few adherents, purfued his way to the Decan, and Pursez was ordered to follow him with a confiderable force The fugitive prince floot with his adherents, to refresh them felves at the river Geniva Purvez, in the mean time, came up a cannonade enfired, and the Imperialifts having forced their paffage. Shaw Jehan retreated with precipitation

Teire in e Decen

We must, for a moment, lose fight of the prince, in the misfortunes of his adherents The emperor in his extreme affection for Shaw Jehan, had, while yet he remained in his duty. fubmitted to his government an extensive divifion of the empire, confifting of feveral provinces. In that number was the rich kingdom of Guze rat. Bickermaiit, who was flain in the action near Delhi, had been governor of that province. and when he joined the prince in his expedition against his father, Suffvi Chan was lest in the fuperintendency of Guzerat Abdalla, whose in deferting his fovereign in the late battle, we have already mentioned, was rewarded. by the prince, for his treachery, with the go vernment vacant by the death of Bickermajit Unwilling to leave the prince in his diffress, Ab dalla dispatches his friend Offader Chan to com mand, in the mean time in that province. Of fader arriving with a fmall force, at Ahmedabad. the capital, displaced Suffvi Chan the Imperial Suffvi fled to Hankfi governor He wrote from thence to Nasir, the governor of Patan Understanding that Suffyr was no stranger to the march of & Itan Dawir Buxsh the son of Chuse ro, under the vation of his maternal grandfather Chan

Chan Azem, to command for the emperor in Guzerat, Nasir blamed him for his flight. He met Suffvi, with a force at Caperbenîz. They resolved to march to Ahmedabad: and setting forward in the evening, they arrived next morning under the walls of the city. Dividing their forces into three bodies; each body attacked a gate. The elephants broke them open: the Imperialists entered, and Offâder was seized.

A D 1623 1,032,

Shaw Jehân, after the rencounter at the River Shaw Je-Geniva, fled to Mando, the capital of Malava. han's par-News was brought to him in that city, that Guze-ed in Gurat was lost. He was much affected; but Ab-zerat. dalla made light of the matter. That Omrah marched toward Ahmedabad with feven thousand horse. When he arrived at Wasset, he found Suffvi, now the Imperial Suba, ready unexpectedly to receive him. This lord, finding that prince Dawir Buxsh and Chan Azem had lagged on their march, provided himself with an army. He posted his forces about twelve miles from Ahmedabad. Abdalla endeavoured to turn his rear. He was prevented by the vigilance of Suffvi; and he, therefore, resolved to come to battle. Dividing his army into three columns, he advanced, in that order, upon the enemy. Nafir Chan supported Suffvi, with his courage and conduct. The battle was obstinate. Many officers of rank fell on the fide of Abdalla. He was routed with great flaughter. He fled to Surat. The country people cut off the greatest part of the shattered remains of his followers in their retreat. He foon after, with a few troops, betook himself to Brampour.

The prince Purvez and Mohâbet, after the af-Purvez defair at the river Genîva, returned to the Emperor, Jehan at who was encamped under the walls of Fattepour. the Nur-The disturbances in Guzerat convinced Jehan-bidda.

A D 1613 Hig 1032

gire, that the flames of civil war could be only extinguished by the total ruin of Shaw Jehan. He, therefore, ordered Purvez and Mohabet at. the head of the Rajaputs, in the Imperial pay, to purfue the rebel and to take him alive Jehan left Mando, with a resolution to try his fortune in a battle He passed the river Nirbid da and threw up works to defend the ford was, by this time, reduced to great diffrefs adherents gradually deferted him. He became tired of hostilities which promised no success He fent to his brother Purvez, for very moderate terms Purvez, by the advice of Mohabet. amused him with hopes, without coming to any de termined point. The usual precautions were ne glected on the fide of Shaw Jehan, and Mohabet, who watched an opportunity, croffed the river and furprized him in his camp He was defeated with great flaughter

Shaw Je han flies to Orixe. Shaw Jehan fled from the field, through Gol conda, and then took the route of Orixa, to Bengal The governor of Orixa Ahmed Beg, fled on the prince's approach That province was given to Kulli Chan, one of Shaw Jehân adherents, whilft he himfelf advanced to Burd wan, and took poffession of that district He did not continue long at Burdwan lbrahim, go vernor of Bengal, had collected all his forces to Raja Mahil, to oppose the unexpected invasion, and Shaw Jehân marched toward the place.

Paters Bengal and de f ats the Suba. When the prince had arrived within a few miles of Raja Mahil, the Suba abandoned that fortress as untenable. He retreated, in good order, to the fort of Tellia Gurri, which had been built to defend the pass between the mountains and the Ganges. In the fort were a number of Europeans. He strengthened them with a reinforce ment of his best troops, whilst he encamped his

ırmy

A D

1624. Hig

1033

army on the opposite bank of the river. Shaw Jehân, upon his arrival, invested the fort of Tellia-Gurri. He made little impression, the Europeans being excellent gunners and engineers. He attempted to cross, but was repulsed, having but a few boats. A neighbouring Raja, however, provided the prince with a fleet of boats; -and in these he transported two thousand horse. Ibrahim, finding that he was to be attacked in his camp, croffed the river in his turn. He diew up in order of battle, against the prince, but in the action his troops were defeated and he himfelf flain. Bengal fell, with the Suba, from the empire. Rumi, the chief engineer of Shaw Jehân, in the mean time, found means to carry a mine, under the fort of Tellia-Gurri, and blew up about twenty yards of the rampire. The place was taken by affault, and the garrison put to the fword.

Shaw Jehân, after this great and unexpected Bengal fubmits: fuccess attending his arms, marched to Dacca, where Ibrahim, the late Suba, had deposited his own and the Imperial treasure. He no fooner appeared before Dacca, than it furrendered. Forty lacks of roupees were found in specie, befides jewels, much spoil, and warlike stores. Dacca was the last place in Bengal, that held out for the emperor. The Rajas, the hereditary governors of districts, and all those who held estates of the crown, crowded into the court of the prince; and with presents and prossers of allegiance, endeavoured to secure their possessions. The whole kingdom received a new fovereign, and Darab, the fon of Chan Chanan, was raised to the high office of Suba under Shaw Jehân.

The ambition of the prince was not to be con- and Behar. fined to Bengal. He turned his eyes upon the adjoining province of Behar. He scarce had permitted

1641 Hie 1011

mitted his army to breathe after the conquest of Dacca, before he led them in to Behar Muchlie Chan, the Imperial governor of that province, fled to Allahabad, at the approach of the prince. The gates of Patna, the capital, were left open to receive him He kept his court in the Subi's pa The Zemindars crowded, from all quarters, into the city, made their fubmission, and, with prefents, obtained his favour was of greater consequence to the prince. Mu barick, governor of the impreenable fort of Rhotas, which had never been taken by force. came and prefented to him the keys. Shaw Ie han was exceedingly rejoiced at this piece of good fortune. He had now a place of fecurity for his family; and he found his mind, as alle viated from care, fitter to encounter the dangers of the field and the vicifitudes of fortune

He dlades ble army Into three parts.

The prince having restored the civil govern ment of Behar, which had been ruined by his invalion, railed Nafir Chan to the office of Suba. He himself took again the field. He divided his army into three parts. The first he placed under the command of Abdalla, who had been lately fo unfortunate in Guzerat. He ordered that officer to proceed to Allahabad, with his di vision, to drive away the Suba of Behar from thence, and to take possession of the place. Dena Chan was placed, by the prince, over the fecond That general was ordered to reduce divition the country round Jionpour The third division Shaw Jehan, in person, commanded vanced, by very flow marches to Benaris, hearing complaints, deciding causes, and settling the go vernment of the country, as he went

Fortune huberto favoured the arms of the reward him bellious prince Purvez with Mohabet Chan had purfued the fugitives, from the affair at the Nir bidda.

A D.

1624. Hig

1033

bidda, into the heart of Golconda. At Hydrabad they gave over the pursuit, and began to employ themselves in resettling the affairs of the Decan, which the rebellion of Shaw Jehan had very much deranged. The news of the loss of the eastern provinces alarmed Mohâbet. Even Jehangire, who passed his time in voluptuousness, with his favourite Noor-Mâhil, was rouzed from his lethargy. He dispatched express after express to Purvez. The march of Shaw Jehan toward the capital, determined Mohâbet to endeavour to intercept him on his way. He marched with Purvez through Malava and Behâr. He croffed the Jumna at Calpé, and the Ganges at Babere. The Imperial army came up with Deria, who commanded one of the three divisions of the rebels, at Manicpour. He was instantly defeated; and he fell back to Benâris. Abdalla, at the fame time, evacuated Allahabad, and joined Shaw Jehân. A council of war was called. Their deliberation was short. They resolved to give immediate battle to Purvez and Mohâbet

The resolution was scarce taken, when the Im- Preparatiperialists appeared in fight. No time was to be tion lost. Shaw Jehân drew up his army on the banks of a brook called Tonish. Abdalla commanded the right wing; Nasir Chan the left; the prince himself took his post in the center. The advanced guards were commanded by Raja Bimè: and the whole field was marshalled by Sujait Chan, who was at the head of the referve in the rear. The artillery, under the direction of Rumi, was drawn up in one place before the center, instead of being disposed properly along the line. The army of the rebels exceeded forty thousand horse: the Imperialists were more in number.

Mohâbet, in the mean time, was not idle. The army of Shaw He formed in order of battle the army of Prince Jehan Purvez.

A. D 1624. Hig 1033.

Purvez His superiority, in point of numbers, enabled him to out flank the enemy The parti culars of his disposition are not related -The action was begun by the artillery on the fide of Shaw Jehan But more than a thousand shot were expended before one took place the enemy being yet at too great a distance, Mohabet would not permit his artillery to play, till he was fure of doing execution. The cannonade continued near an hour Some of Rumi's guns were dismounted, his men were driven from others Shaw Jehân immediately ordered his advanced guard to charge a body of the Impe rialists, who were coming forward, with hasty strides, to seize his artillery The two advanced parties fought with great bravery Those of Shaw Jehan at length gave ground Raja Bime, who commanded them, preferred death to flight. He stood, with a few gallant friends, and was cut to pieces

torally de feated

Mohâbet, observing the defeat of the enemy's advanced guard, came forward brifkly, with his whole line, and fell, with great fury, on the center, where Shaw Jehan commanded in perfon The shock was violent, but did not last The prince was driven back from his guns, which were feized by Mohâbet Sujait Chan, who commanded the referve of the rebels, threw him felf into the interval left by Shaw Jehan a retreat He fought for fome time, with great bravery, and furnished the prince with an opportunity of rallying his broken fquadrons But Sujait was, in his turn, defeated, and driven back in great confusion Shaw Jehan advanced to the charge but advice was brought him, that Nasir was defeated on the left and that fome of the enemy, who had passed his flanks, were seen advancing in his rear

1 D 1624

Hig.

The desperate situation of the prince suggested to him a desperate resolution. He advanced as if he heard not the messenger, and plunged into the thickest of the enemy. He was followed by five hundred horse. This small body, devoting the biavethemselves to death with their leader, were irrefiftible. They effected more by despair than the whole army had done by courage. Mohâbet received a check, when he least expected it. He began to retreat: but Shaw Jehân was not properly supported. His officers confidered the battle as lolt, and refused to advance. Abdalla, who had hitherto maintained his ground on the right, received a message from the prince. He returned for answer, that all hopes of victory were gone, and that the best retreat they could make, was now the only thing left them by fortune. The prince was enraged. He resolved to die. His companions, feizing his horse by the reins, forced him from the field. He fled not, but he was carried to the fort of Rhotas. The rich plunder of his camp faved him from being purfued.

Sultan Purvez and Mohâbet, having stopt for He flies a few days to refresh their army, after the fa-toward the Decan tigues of a long march and an obstinate battle, took the route of Bengal. Shaw Jehan left his family in the fortress of Rhotas. He collected the remains of his defeated army. He marched to Patna, and prepared to defend that city. He, however, evacuated the place at the approach of his brother. He fled through Bengal. Purvez was close at his heels. Shaw Jehan took the route of the Decan, by the way of Cuttack. Bengal, Behâr and Orixa fell into the hands of Purvez. That prince and Mohâbet spent some time in resettling the government of the three provinces; and when the current of regulation

Belieges Bran pour tion and law was restored to its ancient channel; they marched after Shaw Jehan into the Decan, by the northern road

Though Shaw Jehân's assairs were, to all ap-pearance, ruined, he found resources in his own active mind During the time that Purvez and Mohabet remained in the recovered provinces, he found means to attach to his party the Raia of By the junction of the Raja s forces, he found himfelf in a condition to fit down be fore the city of Brampour He had reduced it to great distress, when the Imperial army, under Purvez and Mohabet, arrived on the banks of He had not a force sufficient to opthe Nirbidda pose them he raised the siege, and took shelter in the mountains of Ballagat In his retreat he made an attempt on the castle of Hasser is a strong fortress on the frontiers of Chandeish It stands upon the top of a mountain forings of water, and of good foil a fufficiency to maintain with its produce four thouland men As all access to the fortress is impracticable, he might have waited there for the change which time might make in his fortunes. He was repulsed. This latter piece of bad success completed the run of his party. His nobles first deserted him, and they were followed by the private soldiers. A thousand horse only remained. His spirits such within him, his missortunes oppressed him, his guilt and folly were always present to his mind. Sickness was added to his other miseries. He was hunted, like a wild beast, from place to place. All markind were his enemies, and he was their foe. Where he thought he could not overcome, he sied he spread devastation through places where he could prevail. He was, how ever, tired of rapine; worn down by contention and and hostility. He wrote letters of compunction to his father. He enlarged on his own grill, he even added, if possible, to his own wreichelness and missortune. Ichaa ire sas often full of affection, he was always veik He as or's at the miferable condition of a fon, once had loved. His ten 11 o Shaw Jehan's letter where the angle of the stand his crimes vanished fice and a

Emieq -

In the midit of this gire was not altogether governors of Rhotas, of a which were full hell out in the up their forts, and in the income Aurungzebe, and Aurul fashe time accompany them, according to the for his past crimes. Shaw Jehan embrace offer with joy He delivered up the forts. he fent his children to Agra He, Lowever, found various pretences for not appearing in person at court. He alleged that he was assumed to see a father whom he had fo much injured, but he vas actually afraid of the machinations of the Javourite Sultana. He made excussions, under a pretence of pleasure, through all pairs of the empire, attended by five hundred horse. He was sometimes heard of at Amere, fometimes at Tata on the Indus, and again, in the Decan.

In the rebellion of Shaw Jehan, we lost fight empire of the Persian invasion, under Shaw Abas. The fovereigns of Persia had long laid claim to the city of Candahar. They endeavoured often to obtain it by negociation, and often by force. They had failed in the first, and they were not fuccessful in the latter, till the civil distractions of India furnished them with an undisturbed opportunity of belieging the place. When the Vol. III. Persian

A D 1620

Cindahar

A D 1625 111g 1034. Persian invasion, happened, Candahar was but slightly garrisoned. The place, however, held out with vigour, till Shaw Abbas appeared be fore it in person. It surrendered to that monarch, and the news of the missortune met Rustum Suffavi at Lahore, as he was on his march to relieve the besieged. The Persians, after the capture of Candahar, retreated, and Jehangire, having occasion for all his troops to quell domestic disturbances, fat silently down with the loss.

Irruption of the UI becks. Shaw Abas had fcarce retreated, when the Usbeck Tartars, encouraged by his success and the civil dissentions in Hindostan, invaded the province of Ghizni, and took several small forts. When the news of this invasion arrived at court, Chana zad, the son of Mohabet, was sent from Cashmire, with some troops, to oppose the invaders. This young officer attacked them with vigour on all occasions, and, in general, with great success. They were, at length, after an obsunate and bloody war, which continued nine months, driven out of the empire. The conqueror pursued the fuguives, and laid waste a part of their country.

IEHANGIRE.

C H A P. V.

Mobabet in favour—Accused of intended treason— Ordered to court—Machinations of his enemies— Indignities offered him—He resolves to seize the emperor—He takes him in his tent—Defeats the visier-Condemns the Sultana to death-But pardons her-Governs the empire-Attacked by the citizens of Cabul—he lays down his power— Obliged to fly-Sent against Shaw Jehan-Death of prince Purvez-His character-Death of Chan Chanan.

THE valour and abilities of Mohâbet, in conducting the war against Shaw Jehan, raised sentiments of gratitude in the breast of Jehangire. His son, Channa Zâd, had been lately gratisted Mohabet with the government of Cabul, and others, his in high farelations and friends, were advanced to lucrative vour and honourable employments. The great victory near Benâris confirmed the emperor's high opinion of Mohâbet, and the news of that important event filled him with excessive joy. His grateful feelings for his general role in proportion to the These sentidecrease of his fears for his throne ments, however, did not long continue. hâbet had a great many enemies: his fovereign had but little firmness. The abilities of the

1625 Hig

A D 1625 11 g 1035 former had raifed envy, and nature had given to the latter a disposition too easy and plant, to be proof against nusrepresentation. To explain the causes of an event which almost transferred the empire from the house of Timur to other hands, we must look back to some circumstances prior to this period.

Accused of intended

Chan Chanan, mentioned as the tutor of Purvez. in his government of Candeish, had, through fome disoult, attached himself to the fortunes of Shaw Jehân, when that prince succeeded his bro ther in the command of the Imperial army in the It was by that lord a advice, that he cut off Chusero by his advice he rebelled against his father He accompanied the prince in his expedition to Agra and Delhi, and, though he took no part in the fatigues of the field, he ruled in the cabinet. When the affairs of Shaw Jehan be came desperate after his retreat to the Decan. he advised him to sue for apardon, through his brother Purvez, to whose temper and character he could have been no stranger. When he arrived in the Imperial camp, he found no disposition in Mohâ bet to relinquish by terms, the advantages which had been obtained by the fword Having failed in his endeavours for the prince, he applied for himfelf. Mohabet was shocked at this reite ration of treachery, and he perfuaded Purvez to throw him and his family into prison latter were fent, under an escort, to Agra, he lumfelf was detained, in close confinement, in the camp and his estate was confiscated by an Imperial edict

After the decifive battle near Benaris, the proh of vince of Bengal, which had been reduced by Shaw Jehan, fell at once into the hands of the conquerors Purvez, who had a commission from his father to govern the eastern provinces, conferred

1625

conferred the subaship of Bengal upon Mohâbet, who fent his fon Channa Zâd, lately arrived in the army, to manage his government in his own absence. Dara, the son of Chan Chanan, had been made suba of Bengal, by Shaw Jehân. That young lord was feized by the people, and delivered into the hands of Channa Zâd, as foon as he arrived at the capital of the province. immediately fent Dara to his father, who, having informed the emperor of that circumstance, 1eceived orders to put him to death, as an obstinate rebel. Mohâbet obeyed, and fent the unfortunate fuba's head to Agra.

Chan Chanan, though confined in the camp of His ene-Purvez, found means, by letters, to infinuate mies at court. himself into the good graces of the Sultana, and her brother the visier. The two last had been long the enemies of Mohâbet; and the former imputed the death of his fon to that lord, and was resolved to revenge the injury. He wrote to the Sultana: he fent letters to Afiph. He informed them that Mohâbet was forming defigns to raise Purvez to the throne. This was carried to the emperor's ears. He ordered Chan Chanan to be released and that Omrah, who remained with Purvez, accused Mohâbet, by letters to the emperor, of intended treason.

Jehangire, naturally suspicious, was alarmed The em-The spirit of jealousy and distrust took possession peror alarmed of his mind. He forgot the services of Mohâbet in his own fears. He ordered him to court, and raised Chan Jehân Lodi from the government of Guzerat to the command of the army under Mohabet, before the emperor's orders arrived, had fet out with Purvez, for Bengal. He had been guilty of a neglect, which gave colour to the accusations of his enemies. elephants taken in battle are Imperial property. Thefe

1616 Hig 1035

These he had retained, together with the presents which his fon Channa Zad had received in refettling the province A fecond peremptory order was fent to him. He was acquainted, that he was appointed to the subaship of Puniab. but that the emperor deprived him of Lahore, which had been usually annexed to that government. He was thunderstruck at the sudden change in the emperor's mind He refolved to obey went to take his leave of Purvez. The prince was cold and stately, and seemed to forget his friend in the displeasure of his father

Mobabet

Sensible of his own abilities, conscious of his manded to honour, elevated by his reputation in war, Mohabet was disgusted, beyond measure, at this return for his fervices He refolved to retire to his castle of Rintimpour but an order arrived to de liver that fortress into the hands of one of the Sul Thus latter ctreumstance con tana's creatures firmed what his friends at court had written to him before, that his life was in danger, should he trust himself in the Imperial presence wrote to Jehangire He expressed his assouth ment at his displeasure. He declared his perfect confidence in the honour of his prince but he expressed his well grounded distrust of his advisers The letter produced nothing but an order for his immediate appearance at court. To refuse was to rebel. He wrote again to the emperor will, ' fave he. " ferve my fovereign with my life against his enemies, but I will not expose it to the malice of his friends. Affure me of fafety, and I will clear myfelf in the prefence ' Jehangire, upon receiving this letter, was enraged patched a courier, with his last commands for his appearance He at length resolved to obey Five thousand Rajaputs, in the Imperial pay, from an affection for their general, offered him their service to conduct him to court.—— Escorted by these, he took the rout of Lahore, where the emperor, at the time, resided.

A D 1625. Hig 1035.

He obeys.

On the eighteenth of April 1626, Jehangire fet out from Lahore toward Cabul. News was brought to the Imperial camp that Mohâbet had fent before him the elephants taken at the battle of Benâris: and that he himself followed, with a retinue of five thousand Rajaputs. The Sultana and the visies were struck with a double ter-They were afraid of a reconciliation: they were afraid of his force. They perfuaded the emperor not to admit him into the camp. When, therefore, he arrived near the tents, he was ordered to stop, till he accounted for the revenues of Bengal, and the plunder taken at the battle Mohâbet was enraged: he difof Benâris. patched his fon-in-law to the emperor, to complain of an indignity fo unworthy of his fidelity and fervices. He could not have chosen a worse messenger. The emperor had been much offended with Mohâbet, for giving his daughter in marriage without his confent, and he had resolved to be revenged. When, therefore, the young lord alighted from his elephant in the Imperial fquare, he was fuddenly feized, he was stript of his clothes, covered with rags, bastinadoed, and fent out of the camp riding backward on a forry jade, amid the shouts of the whole aimy.

The intelligence of this groß affront came to His mef-Mohâbet, before the dishonoured youth appeared. Genger He bore it with seeming patience He was shock-affronted. ed at the weakness of the emperor, which had yielded so much to the malice of a vindictive woman. He separated, by degrees, his retinue from the camp He sound he could not trust himself in the hands of his enemies, and he took at once a bold resolution. The emperor was on his

A D 1/2/ 11 4 1 35 his march to Cabul, and he refolved to watch his motions. He hovered, during the night, round the fkirts of the camp and the morning prefented a favourable opportunity for the execution of his

He fur prif he emperor in his tent

When Mohabet arrived, the Imperial army lay encamped on the banks of the Behat or Gelum, at the end of the bridge, on the high road which led to Cabul The advanced guard began to move over the bridge in the morning, and was gradually followed by the other troops peror remained in the old camp. He was not in an enemy's country and he used no precautions When the greatest part of the army had passed, Mohabet fuddenly advanced with his faithful Ra japuts He seized the bridge, and set it on fire, leaving two thousand of his men under the com mand of his fon, to defend the flames, and to flop the return of the enemy Having made this disposition, he rode with great speed to the Imperial fourre He was first observed by the officers of the household, passing by the haram in seem ing disorder His countenance was pale, but de termined They were alarmed, and he rushed forward to the emperor s tent takes him

The writer of the Acbal Namma, who was then lord of the wardrobe, suspecting that Mohabet meant to assistance the emperor, drew his sword and followed him with great speed. The Omrahs in waiting did the same. When they had advanced to the Imperial tent, they sound Mohabet surrounded by five hundred Rajaputs on foot, standing at the door, with swords by their sides and pikes in their hands. The lords were immediately seized and disarmed. The emperor, hearing the noise and consusion without, cut his way through the screens and entered the bathing tent, which was behind his sleeping apartment. Mohabet

Hig

1035

habet alighted and entered, not finding the emperor, he prefled forward with forty Rajaputs, to the bathing-tent. Some of the Imperial guards flood at the door. The officer who commanded them, sternly asked Mohâbet, Why he presumed to intrude on the emperor's privacy? He answered him, by putting his hand upon his fword and frowning upon him, with a determined countenance A panic feized the guards. They made way for him to pass. In the outer apartment of the bathing tent, stood many Omrahs of high rank. They drew their fwords, but the Rajaputs furrounding them, they thought proper to deliver up their arms

The news of this infult was carried to the em-prisoner. peror by some of the women who attended him in the inner tent. He seized his sword, and was about to assault Mohâbet, when he saw his guards and nobles disarmed. He dropt his point; and faid, "What dost thou mean, Mohabet Chan?" Mohâbet touching the ground and then his forehead with his hand, thus replied. " Forced by the machinations of my enemies, who plot against my life, I throw myself under the protection of my fovereign."-" You are fafe,"-answered the emperor, "but what would these, who fland armed behind you?"-" They want full security," rejoined Mohâbet, " for me and my " family, and without it, they will not retire." " -I understand you," faid Jehangire: " name your terms, and they shall be granted. But you do me an injustice, Mohâbet, I did not plot against your life. I knew your services, though I was offended at your feeming disobedience to my commands. Be affured of my protection: I shall forget the conduct which necessity has imposed upon you."

Mohâbet,

A D 1626. Ilig 1035

adenr

Mohabet, without naming his conditions, ob ferved to the emperor, that it was now time to take his daily amusement of hunting waiting for a reply, he ordered his own horse to be brought lebangire declined mounting him Mobabet feemed not to liften bet Chan, faid the emperor, " if still I have a horse of my own. I will mount him ' One was brought him They rode flowly away together. furrounded by the Ramputs When they had ad vanced beyond the flirts of the camp, Mohâbet observed to the emperor, That it would be pru dent for him to mount an elephant, to avoid any accident that might happen in the confusion which was likely to enfue Jehangire had now no will of his own He mounted the elephant. and three Rajaputs, under a pretence of defend ing him, mounted by his fide

to be own

The emperor had scarce placed himself on the elephant, when Muckurib Chan, one of the officers of state, pressing through the Rajaputs, climbed up the elephant's fide, and fat down by his fovereign He was threatened by the Raja Tuts He was obstinate, and would not stir One flightly cut him on the forehead with his fabre, but he was not to be moved They had now proceeded near a mile from the camp, when fome of the officers of the household mounted upon elephants, came up, and placed themselves on the road before the emperor Mohâbet or dered them to clear the way they refuled, and were cut to pieces He then continued his rout. without further obstruction, to his own camp The emperor was brought to his tent and all spectators being removed, Mohâbet explained himself to him, protesting, that he had formed no designs neither against his life nor his power "But,"

"But," concluded he sternly, "I am determined to be fafe "

1525 Hig 1034.

Aliph, the vilier, had croffed the bridge in the morning with the Imperial army The Sultana, when Mohabet was busy in securing the person Cuts off of the emperor, made her escape to her brother Chan He confidered, that nothing was done, fo long as that haughty woman remained out of his power. He resolved to prosecute his plan, with the same resolute boldness with which it was begun returned with the emperor to his former camp, on the bank of the Gelum. Sujait Chan, an Omiah of high reputation, had arrived that instant to join the Imperial army. He knew the fituation of affairs, and loudly inveighed, in the presence of the Rajaputs, against Mohâbet. That lord was at once enraged and alarmed He ordered his troops to fall upon Sujait and his retinue, and every man of them was put to the fword. The other Omrahs, who had hitherto hovered round, struck with the fate of Sujait, fled across the river, and joined the Imperial army.

Noor-Jehan was the messenger of the disaster, The visier which besel the emperor, to her brother Asiph. determines to He immediately called the Omrahs together refere the and the Sultana vehemently accused those who emperor. had been left with Jehangire, of negligence and cowardice A debate arose about the best method of rescuing their sovereign out of the hands of Mohâbet. The measure was full of peril, but it must be taken. They agreed to affemble their forces by the dawn of next morning, and to endeavour to repass the river against the rebel The emperor was apprized of their intentions began to fear for his life. Repeated messages were fent to the visier to desist from his purpole, but that minister did not think himself obliged to obey

1626 Hig 1035

feated

obey the commands of an imprisoned monarch, v ho was under the influence of the man who had forzed his person

Afiph b cun his march with day When he came to the bridge he found it burnt down He resolved to ford the river, but the water was fo deep, that many were drowned Those who guned the further thore had to fight the enemy at a manifest dif dvantage. They were cut off as fast as they ascended the bank A succession of victi no came to the fwords of the Rajaputs The action continued for fome hours of the Imperialit's preffing into the river, prevented the front from retreating. The Sultana was not a tame spectator on the occasion Mount ed on an elephant, she plurged into the stream with her daughter by her fide. The young lady was wounded in the arm but her mother preffed Three of her elephant drivers were forward fucceffively I illed, and the elephant received three wounds on the trunk. Noor Jehan, in the mean time, emptied four quivers of arrows on the enemy The Rajaputs pressed into the stream to feize her, but the mafter of her household, mounting the elephant, turned him away, and carried her out of the river, notwithstanding her threats

i h great L ghter

and commands
Whill these things happen in the river, I'dat
Chan and Abul Hassen, with some other gallant nobles forming a squadron of gentlemen in the rear of the Imperialist, plunged into the river, and gained the opposite shore. The shock between them and the Rajaputs was violent. The latter gave way, and fled toward the tents of the prince Shariar where the emperor remained un der a guard. They stopt and the action became bloody. The arrows and shot piercing through the tents, the emperor was in imminent danger.

but Muchlis Chan, who stood near him, covered him with shields. In the mean time, Mohâbet re-established the ranks of the fugitives behind the tents. He turned them, and Jell upon the flank of the Imperialiss. Visier Bec, Attalla, and several gallant lords, were killed. Fidar was covered with wounds The Ipinit of his followers began to fink. Mohâbet pressed hard upon them; and at length they fled. The field was covered with dead bodies, and a complete victory remained to the R naputs.

A D 1 135

The runaways, gamme he opposite fid of the midden river, found then to op a manife I and com-puter or pletely rained. They gave up all thoughts of further resistance each sled to his own home. The army, in the space of a few hours, was dilfipated. Afiph fled to his estate, and shut himfelf up, with five hundred men, in the castle of New Rhotas, on the Attoc. The Sultana found means to escape to Lahore. Mohâbet dispatched a messenger to Asiph, with assurances of safety, should he return to the camp The visier would not trust himself in his hands. Meer Berwir, the fon of Mohâbet, with a detachment besieged the fort of Rhotas. Afiph was foon reduced to dif- The Sulties; and, on the arrival of Mohâbet before the tana feizplace, that lord, with his fon Abu Talib, fuirendered at discretion. Noor-Jehan had scarce returned to Lahore, when she received letters from the emperor. He acquainted her, that he was treated with respect by Mohabet, and that matters were amicably fettled between them conjured her, therefore, as she regarded his peace and fafety, to lay afide all thoughts of hoftile preparations. He concluded, with commanding her to follow him to Cabul, whither, of his own free choice, he then directed his march. Noor-Jehân did not long hesitate. She set out from from Lahore, and foon came up with her lord When the arrived, troops were fent out by Mohabet, by way of doing her honour. But they were her keepers, and not her guards. They furrounded her tent, and watched all her motions.

A D 1626. H g 1 15

Contemped o dea h.

Mohabet, who carried every thing before him in the presence, accused her publicly of treason He affirmed, that the had conspired against the emperor by estranging from him the hearts of his lubie is that the most cruel and unwarrant able actions had been done by her capricious or ders, in every corner of the empire that her lau himes was the fource of public calamities, her malis nity the ruin of many individuals that f e had even extended her views to the empire, by favouring the foccession of Shariar to the throne under whose seeble administration she hoped to govern India at pleasure. He therefore infilled that a public example should be made of fo wicked a woman, as a fign to mankind, that crimes in the most exalted persons ought to meet with no more favour, than iniquities in the mean and low ' You, who are emperor of the Moguls! faid Mohabet, addressing himself to Jehan gire, ' whom we look upon as fomething more than human, ought to follow the example of t loc t loc t loc God who has no respect for persons.'

Jehangire was too well acquainted with his fituation to contribus Mohabet. He owned the justice of the accusation, and he signed a warrant for her death. Being excluded from his presence, her charms had lost their irressible insluence over him, and when his passions did not thwart the atural birs of his mind, he was always just the dreadful message was delivered to the Sultana. She heard it without emotion. "Imprisoned sovereigns,' faid she, "lose their right to life."

A D

1035

with their freedom; but permit me for once to fee the emperor, and to bathe with my tears the hand that has fixed the feal to the warrant of death." She was brought before her husband, in the presence of Mohabet. Her beauty shone with additional lustre through her forrow. uttered not one word. Jchangire burst into tears. " Will you not spare this woman, Mohabet?" faid the emperor, "you fee how the weeps"-"The emperor of the Moguls," replied Moh?-bet, "should never ask in vain" The guards retired from her, at a wave of his hand, and she was restored that instant to her former attendants.

nerofity, and he had cause to repent of it him-Cabul felf. The Sultana lived not to thank her forgiver, but to revenge herself. The Imperial camp moved to Cabul. Mohâbet, without appearing to command, directed every thing at court. The emperor implicitly followed his advice, and he even feemed to harbour no refentment against him for the past. He had long known his abilities, he was now convinced of his integrity and generofity. Naturally fond of indolence and pleasure himself, he could not wish to have left the affairs of the state in better hands. The attention paid him by Mohâbet, eradicated every idea of bondage: and the weight which his edicts carried, from their precision and wisdom,

The friends of Mohîbet disapproved of his ge-March to Six months had passed in Cabul in an apparent D sign of harmony between the monarch and his minister. the Sultana against The busy spirit of Noor-Jehan was, in the mean Mohabet time, hatching mischief. She concealed her schemes so effectually, that they escaped the penereconciled his fituation to his pride, by the obedience which was paid to them over all the empire.

A D 1616
H g 1035

trating eves of Mohabet The emperor refided in his palace at Cabul the minister lay every night in the camp of his Rajaputs, without the walls When he came one morning to pay his respects at court with his retinue, the citizens, at the instigation of the Sultana, attacked him from both ends of a narrow street Some, posted in windows on either side fired upon him with musquets. He turned back, and forced his way to his camp. He arrived among the Rajaputs unburt his followers were all either wounded or slain. The citizens did not rest here. They fell upon the guards, which he had placed round the emperor, and put sive hundred to the sword.

defeated

Mohabet enraged at the perfidy of the Cabu lians, prepared to take ample revenge He block ed up the city with his army. The maffacre within was discontinued. Fear succeeded to The principal inhabitants, laying the whole blame upon the rabble came out in the most fuppliant manner to Mohabet Jehangire, who disclaimed all knowledge of the tumult in terceded for them, and the enraged minister spared the city, after having punished the most noto He, how ever, declared, that he would never enter the perfidious city of Cabul he gave directions to the emperor to quit it the next day, and, having made the necessary preparations the Imperial camp moved in a few days toward Lahore

Ioh ber finsti pi On the way to Lahore Mohabet took a sudden resolution to throw up his power. He had no intertions himself upon the empire, and he had triumphed over his enemies, and served his friends. He exasted, and obtained from Jehan gire, the most solemn promises of oblivion for the past, and he restored that prince to all his for interconsequence and power. He promised to assist

A D 1625 Hig 1035 nothing with him but his life his wealth was left in the Imperial camp, and became the property of Noor Jehân. His flight had scarce become public, when an edict was issued by the Sultana's procurement, to all the governors of provinces to make diligent search for him. He was declared a rebel, and a reward was put upon his head.

His con-

Afiph disapproved of his fifter's violence He knew the merit of Mohabet he was not forget ful of his kindness to himself, when under his power He was tired, besides, of the weakness of Jehangire, and of the Sultana's tyranny however, observed a cautious silence His power depended upon his fifter, and the was haughty as well as vindictive. Mohâbet flew from place to place. He took, at first, the route of Tatta, but the unfortunate have enemies every where. The boldness, which had lately raised him to the fummit of power, forfook him not in his diffress He mounted his horse; and rode solitary near four hundred miles, to throw himfelf into the con verfation of Afiph That minister, at the time, was in the Imperial camp at Karnal, on the road between Lahore and Delhi Mohâbet, in a mean habit, entered the camp when it was dark, and about nine o clock placed himfelf in the paffage, which led from the apartments of Aliph to the Haram The eunuch, who stood at the door, questioned Mohâbet He knew that lord by his voice; but he affured him of his fidelity habet told him, that he wished to speak to his lord on affairs of the last moment. The visier came with Afph When Afiph faw the low condition into which he, who lately commanded the empire, was fallen, he could fearee refrain from tears. He took him in his arms they retured in filence to a fecret place. Mohabet, after mentioning the ingrati

tude

A D 1626 Hig. 1035

tude of Noor-Jehân, complained of the imbecility of the emperor, and plainly told the visier, that, low as he was reduced, he was determined to raise up another sovereign in India. "Purvez," continued Mohâbet, "is a virtuous man, and my friend. But he is easy and pliant; and we must not change one weak prince for another. I know the merit of Shaw Jehan, I have fought against him, and when I conquered, I gained not a victory, but my own life. He fuits the times. He is ambitious, and fometimes fevere; but he will aggrandize the empire abroad, and add vigour and precision to the laws at home." -Asiph was overjoyed at this declaration. He was connected in friendship as well as in affinity with Shaw Jehân. "You must go hence with speed," said Asiph; " and I will endeavour to procure your pardon. The emperor, who is not averse to you, will listen to my request, especially as Shaw Jehân, with whom you alone are able to cope in the field, is in arms. I shall procure for you an army, which you shall use as the circumstances of the time will demand."

The two Omrahs, having fworn fidelity to one in favour another, parted. Mohâbet, mounting his horse, of Shaw Jehan. dived into the night: Afiph went into the prefence. The emperor was much alarmed at the news from the Decan, that his rebellious fon had collected an army. He regretted the loss of Mohâbet, and Asiph took that opportunity of fuing for his pardon. The emperor, in the warmth of his zeal against his son, ordered an edict of indemnity to be forthwith issued, which restored Mohâbet to his honours and estates. commission was given him to command the army against Shaw Jehan, and the ceremony of giving thanks in the presence, was dispensed with in his favour, as he could not trust his life to the mercy of Noor-Jehân.

1626 Hig 1035 Dea h of

An event, however, happened, which ren dered these preparations against Shaw Jehan un-That prince delifted from his new enterprize without the interpolition of force When Mohabet carried all before him at court. his friend and pupil, the prince Purvez, remained at the head of the army, and commanded all the castern and southern provinces in great tran quillity He took no notice of his father's con finement, and he used no means for his release He knew that Mohaber had no designs upon the empire, and he was rather pleafed, with a check upon the emperor, which might prove an excuse to himself, from being bound by his commands. In the midft of the infentibility and tranquility of Purvez, he was feized by an apoplexy, which carried him off in the thirty eighth year of his age.

His cha-

Sulian Purvez was one of those harmless men that pass without either envy or fame through life Destitute of those violent passions which acreate the animated and ambitious, he was ne ver completely happy, nor thoroughly miferable. I afe was his only comfort, toil his fole aversion Though battles were gained in his name, he was rather an incumbrance to an army, than the fpring which should move the whole. Without ambition to command, he thought it no indig miv to obey. He approved of the counfel of others, without ever proposing his own He was in thort an uleful engine in the hands of an able general There was a kind of comity in his manner, which commanded respect, where he impressed no awe, and even men who knew his wearness, listened with attention to his com mande Ilis constitution was feeble and lethar pic, his life a perpetual flumber Had he lived. he was deflined for the throne, and, as he had no passions to gratify, the happiness or misery of his reign would depend on those whom chance might place around him. His death was regretted, more, perhaps, than that of an abler man might have been. He never committed injuries, and mankind gave him credit for benevolence. Mohâbet mourned him as a good natured friend, Jehangire as a dutiful son. The contrast which the character of his prother presented, justified the fentiments of both.

A 1) 1626 Hig 1035

When Mohabet sled, Noor-Jehan governed affore at the empire without controul. While yet he held Cou t, and in the Dethe reins of government, he had fent orders to can his fon Channa-Zâd, Suba of Bengal, to fend him the furplus of the revenues of that country. Twenty-two lacks. under an efcort, were advanced as far as Delhi, when the flight of Mohâbet happened; and the fame messenger, who brought the news of the treasure to the emperor, brought him also intelligence of the death of Purvez. hangire was affected, beyond measure, at the loss of his fon: he never had disobeyed his commands, and his manner was naturally engaging and pleafing —The command of the army devolved upon Chan Jehân Lodi He was ordered to send his family to court as hostages for his faith.—An unexpected war furnished a field for the abilities of Lodi. The Nizam raised disturbances, but he was reduced, without battle, to terms.

Chan Chanan, who, after his release from con- Death of finement, had remained with Purvez in the camp, Chan Chadid not long survive that prince. He attained to the feventy-fecond year of his age and, though in his latter days he was accused of treachery, he had covered the former part of his life with renown. He performed many memorable actions. under the emperor Akbar. He reduced the kingdom of Guzerat; he defeated with twenty thousand

A D 1616 Hig 1035 thousand horse, an army of seventy thousand, under the confederate princes of the Decan He was a scholar, as well as a soldier He was the most learned man of his time threwd in politics, eloquent to a proverb He translated the commentaries of the emperor Baber into the Persic, from the Mogul language. He understood the Arabic, the Pehlvi, and all the dialects of India. He was also a good poet and many of his pieces have come down to our time. In abilities he yielded not to his father, the famous Byram, though he possessed and unfullied virtue

۱

JEHANGIRE.

CHAP. VI.

Schemes of Mohabet and Asiph—Death of the emperor—His character—Ancedotes of his private life—Ilis religion—His violence—Severe justice and humanity—The son of prince Chusero raised to the throne—Deseat of Shariar—Shaw Jehan marches from the Decan-Young emperor deposed, and murdered—Children of Jehangire—State of Persia.

MOHABET, after his conference with Afiph, made the best of his way to the dominions of the Rana. He had been recommended by letters from the vifier, to that prince; and he was received with extraordinary marks of distinction. Schemesof A circumstance, omitted in its place, will contribute to throw light on the fequel. A correfpondence, by writing, between Mohâbet and Afiph would be a measure full of peril to both. They had resolved to seize upon the accidents that might arise in the course of time, for the service of Shaw Jehân. The visier was to be the judge, as having the best access to know the period fit for their purpose, from his residence at court and intimate knowledge of its affairs. Mohâbet left a ring in his hands, which, when it fhould

AD. 1627. Hig. 1057

A D should be fent, was the fignal for him to espouse like openly the interests of the prince

Death of the emperor

The edict of indemnity to Mohabet had scarce been promulgated when that lord understood from court, that the emperor began to decline vi fibly in his health. The prospect of his approaching diffolution rendered it unnecessary to wrest from him by force a scepter which he was foon to refign to death Mohabet remained quiet with the Rana, who, holding a friendly corre fnondence with Shaw Jehan, took an opportunity of informing that prince, that his noble guelt was no enemy to his cause. Jehangire had, for seven veart been troubled with a slight afthma His disorder encreased toward the end of the preceding year, and he refolved to make a progress to Cashmire, for the benefit of the air autumn proved very severe in that elevated coun He was ferzed with a violent cold, which fell upon his lungs. The sharpness and purity of the air rendered his breathing difficult. He com plained of a kind of suffocation, and became im patient under his disorder. He commanded the camp to move, with flow marches, toward Lahore

Oct 27th

the air rendered his breathing difficult. He complained of a kind of fuffocation, and became impatient under his difforer. He commanded the camp to move, with flow marches, toward Lahore He was carried in a litter as far as the town of Mutti, which flands about half way on the road from Cashmire. At Mutti his difficulty of breathing increased. He was growing worse every day, and the army halted. On the ninth of November, of the year 1627, he expired, and having lived fifty eight and reigned twenty two lunar years and eight months.

Hu cha ta ter Jehangure was neither vicious nor virtuous in the extreme. His bad actions proceeded from passion, and his good frequently from whim Violent in his measures without cruelty, merciful without feeling, proud without dignity, and ge nerous without acquiring friends. A flave to his pleasures, yet a lover of business, destitute of all religion, yet full of superstition and vain fears. Firm in nothing but in the invariable rigour of his justice, he was changeable in his opinions, and often the dupe of those whom he despised. Sometimes calm, winning, and benevolent, he gained the affections of those who knew him not; at other times, morose, captious, referved, he became terrible to those in whom In public, he was familiar. he most consided complaifant, and easy to all, he made no diffinction between high and low, he heard, with patience, the complaints of the meanest of his subjects; and greatness was never a security against his justice. in private, he was thoughtful, cold, and filent, and he often clothed his countenance with fuch terror, that Afiph Jah frequently fled from his presence, and the Sultana, in the plenitude of her influence over him, was known to approach him on trembling knees. His affection for his children bordered on weakness. He was as forgetful of injuries as he was of fa-In war he had no abilities, he was fond vours. of peace and tranquillity, and rather a lover than an encourager of the arts of civil life. turally averse to tyranny and oppression, property was secure under his administration: he had no avarice himself to render him unjust, and he was the determined and implacable enemy of extortion in others. He was a man of science and literary abilities, and the memoirs of his life, which he penned himfelf, do him more honour as a good writer, than the matter, as a great monarch. Upon the whole, Jehangire, though not a faultless man, was far from being a bad prince he had an inclination to be virtuous, and his errors proceeded

A D

A D. 1627 11 g 103

III p I vate life n i opini proceeded from a defect more than from a de pravity of foul. His mother was thought to have introduced a tincture of madness into his blood, and an immoderate use of wine and opium render ed sometimes frantic a mind naturally inflamed

Though Jehangire was often ferious and distant among his domeltics, he was fond of throwing off the character of the emperor, and of enjoy ing freely the conversation of his subjects often dilappeared in the evening from the palace, and dived into obscure punch houses, to pake fome hours in drinking and talking with the lower fort He had no enemies, and he was un der no apprehensions concerning the fafety of his person. Being in the hall of audience, ac cessible to all ranks of men, after the perform ance of the usual ceremonies, he was often known in his nocturnal excursions But the people loved his familiar openness, and did not by rudenels abuse the trust reposed in them by their prince. He often defired his companions at the bowl to ask no favours of him, lest Serim, in his cups, might promise what lehangire, in his fober fenfes, would not chuse to perform. When the liquor began to inflame him, he was rather mad than intoxicated. He flew from one extreme of passion to another, this moment joy ful, the next melancholy and drowned in tears When in this fituation, he was fond of arguing upon abstruse subjects Religion was his favourite topic He fometimes praifed the Mahommedan faith, fometimes that of the Christians, he was now a follower of Zoroaster, and now of Brah ma In the midst of these devout professions, he would fometimes, as if flarting from a dream exclain, That the prophets of all nations were impostors, and that he himself, should his indolence permit him, could form a better fystem of religion religion than any they had imposed on the world. When he was fober, he was divested of every idea of religon, having been brought up a Deist under the tuition of his father Akbar.

The variety of opinions, on the subject of scienc of religion, which prevailed in India, occasioned mg 3 new great uneafiness both to Jehangire and his father tails Akbar. The tenets of Mahommedanism, which the family of Timur had brought along with them into their conquests, were the religion established by law, but the majority of their subjects were of different persuasions. The followers of the Brahmin faith were the most numerous, and the next were the Persian Guebres, who worshipped the element of Fire, as the best representative of God. The Christians of Europe and of Armenia possessed several factories in the several cities and ports, and they wandered in purfuit of commerce over all the empire. The different opinions among all thefe fects, on a fubject which mankind reckon of the last importance, were the fource of disputes, animosities, and quarrels. Akbar was chagrined. He tolerated every religion; he admitted men of all persuasions into his confidence and service, and he had formed ferious thoughts of promulgating a new faith, which might reconcile the minds of all his subjects. He esteemed himself as equal in abilities to Mahommed, and he had more power to enforce his doctrine. But, forefeeing the distractions which this arduous measure might occasion, he dropt his design, and, instead of establishing a new faith, contented himself with giving no credit to any of the old systems of religion Jehangire in his youth had imbibed his father's principles. He began to write a new code of givine law, but he had neither the austerity nor the abilities of a prophet. He shewed

more

A D 1/27 11 c 10 7

lli ria Ience more wisdom in relinquishing, than in forming fuch a visionary scheme.

Jehangire was subject to violent passions upon Complaints against his nobles, many occasions and even against his favourite sons, were received with an eagerness, and a rage against the offenders, more easily imagined than described his mind was heated with a relation of oppref fion, he often burst out into a loud exclamation, ' Who in my empire has dared to do this wrong? His violence flew before the accufation, name any person to him, was to convince him of his guilt Shaw Jehan had been known, when in the greatest favour, to have come trembling before his father, at the accusation of the meanest fubject, and the whole ministry, and the fervants of the court, frequently flood abashed, pale, distant, and in terror for themselves, when a poor man in rags was relating his grievances to the emperor

An ii fiance

His excellive feverity in the execution of im partial justice, was the great line which marks the features of the character of Jehangue --He had no respect of persons, when he animad His former favour was obverted upon crimes literated at once by guilt, and he persevered with undeviating rigour, to revenge upon the great, the injuries done to the low. The flory of Seif Alla remains as a monument of his favage The fifter of the favourite Sultana had a son by her busband Ibrahim, the Suba of Benyal who, from his tender years, had been brought up at court by the empress, who hav ing no fons by Jehangire, adopted Seif Alla for The emperor was fond of the boy, he even often feated him upon his throne At twelve years of age Alla returned to his father in Ben Jehangire gave him a letter to the Suba, with with orders to appoint him governor of Burdwan. Alla, after having resided in his government some years, had the missortune, when he was one day riding on an elephant through the street, to tread by accident a child to death. The parents of the child followed Alla to his house. They loudly demanded an exemplary punishment on the driver; and the governor, considering it an accident, refused their request, and ordered them to be driven away from his door. They abused him in very opprobrious terms; and Alla, proud of his rank and family, expelled them from the district of Burdwan.

A D 1627 Hig 1037

Jehangire residing, at that time, in the city of of his se-Lahore, they found their way, after a long journey on foot, to the presence They called aloud for justice, and the emperor wrote a letter to Alla with his own hand, with peremptory orders to restore to the injured parents of the child their possessions, and to make them ample amends for their loss and the fatigue of their journey. The pride of Alla was hurt, at the victory obtained over him; and instead of obeying the orders of his prince, he threw them into prison, till they made submissions to him for their conduct But as foon as they were releafed, they travelled again to Lahore. Alla was alarmed, and wrote letters to the Sultana and Afiph Jah, to prevent the petitioners from being admitted into the presence. They hovered to no effect, for some months, about the palace. They could not even come within hearing of the emperor, till one day, that he was taking his pleasure in a barge upon the river. They pressed forward through the crowd, and thrice called out aloud for justice The emperor heard them, and he recollected their persons. He ordered the barge to be rowed, that instant, to the bank, and, before

A D 1627 H E. 1037 he enquired into the nature of their complaint, he wrote an order for them to receive a pension for life, from the Imperial treasury When they had explained their grievances, he said not a word, but he commanded Alla to appear immediately at court in the exe cutton of juffice.

Alla obeyed the Imperial command, but he knew not the intentions of Jehangire, which that prince had locked up in his own breaft. The youth encamped with his retinue, the night of his arrival, on the opposite bank of the river. and fent a messenger to announce his coming to the emperor Jehangire gave orders for one of his elepliants of state to be ready, by the dawn of day, and he at the same time directed the pa rents of the child to attend He himfelf was up before it was light, and having croffed the river, he came to the camp of Alla, and commanded him to be bound The parents were mounted upon the elephant, and the emperor ordered the driver to tread the unfortunate young man to death But the driver, afraid of the refentment of the Sultana, passed over him several times, without giving the elephant the necessary directions. The emperor, however, by his threats obliged him at last to execute his orders. He retired home in filence, and iffued out his commands to bury Alla with great pomp and magnificence, and that the court hould go into mourning for him for the space of two moons -" I loved him, ' faid Jehangire, " but justice, like necessity, should bind monarchs

Of his h

The fevere julice of Jehangire established tran quility through all his dominions when they were not disturbed by the ambition of his sons. The Subas of provinces avoided oppression, as the poor had a determined avenger of their wrongs, in their sovereign. He, upon every occasion as seeded.

fected the conversation of the lower fort. They had immediate access to his person, and he only feemed pleased, when he was humbling the pride of his nobles, upon the just complaints of the vulgar. He boasted of his humanity, as well as of his justice. He had used to say, That a monarch should even feel for the beasts of the field; and that the birds of heaven ought to receive their due at the foot of the throne.

A D 1627-Hig. 1037-

As foon as Jehangire expired, Afiph, at the Dawir head of the Imperial retinue, proceeded with the Buxsh raif body to Lahore. When arrived on the banks of throne. the Gelum, he dispatched a Hindoo named Narsi, with the ring, to Mohâbet, as the fignal for that lord to espouse the cause of Shaw Jehan will of Jehangire had been opened immediately upon his demise. He had, at the instigation of the Sultana, named his fourth son Shariai, as his fuccessor in the throne; but that prince had, some weeks before, fet out for Lahore. When the news of the death of Jehangire arrived at that city, the prince feized upon the Imperial treafure, and encouraged the troops to join him, by ample donations. The visier was alarmed. gain time for the execution of his defigns in favour of Shaw Jehân, he proclaimed Dawir Buxsh, the son of prince Chusero, emperor of the Moguls. His fifter disapproved of this meafure; and endeavoured to raise a party in the camp in favour of Shariar: but he put an end to her schemes, by confining her to her tent, and gave strict orders, that none should be admitted into her presence.

Shariar, by means of the Imperial treasure, Shariar collected together a considerable force. Being ill defeated, taken and of a venereal disorder himself, he appointed Baiê-blinded. fâr, the son of his uncle, the prince Damâl, to command his army. The troops of Afiph were inferior

A D 1627 H g 1037 inferior in number to those of Shariar, but they were, in some measure, disciplined, and inured to the field. Shariar had croffed the Gelum be fore the arrival of Aliph, who drew up his forces upon the first appearance of the enemy It was rather a flight than a battle. The raw troops of Sharrar gave way, before they came to blows. He was not himfelf in the action he flood on a dif tant hill, and fell in into the current of retreat. He that himself up in the citadel of Lahore, which was invested the next day by the army of Asiph The friends of Shariar deferted him, and made terms for themselves. The unfortunate prince hid himfelf in a cellar within the haram. was found, and dragged to the light by Ferose Chan, and Alliverdi bound his hands with his girdle, and brought him to Dawir Buxsh was ordered to be confined, and the second day he was deprived of fight

March of Snaw Johan.

Nath the messenger of Aliph, arrived with the ring after a journey of three weeks, at Chibir on the borders of Golconda, where Mohabet, at the time resided, with Shaw Jehan formed the prince of the death of Jehangire, and acquainted Mobabet of the plan formed by the visier, to secure the throne for the former, and that Dawir Buxih was only raifed, as a temporary bulwark against the designs of the Sultana, and to appeale the people, who were averse to Shariar Shaw Jehan, by the advice of Mohâbet, began his march through Guzerat I wo officers were fent with letters to the vizier. and Nillar Chan was dispatched with prefents to Lodi who commanded the army in the Decan

Siptom or well of Iour

I odi was always aveife to the interests of Shaw Jelán He was proud and passionate, of high birth, and reputation in war Deriving his birth from

A D

1627 Hig

1037 from the Imperial family of Lodi, he even had views on the empire. Many of his nation ferved under him in the army, and confiding in their attachment, he looked with fecret pleasure upon the contests for the throne, which were likely to arise in the family of Timur. He had detached a part of his army to feize Malava, and all the Imperial territories bordering upon that province. The messenger of Shaw Jehan was received with coldness. The answer given him was undecifive and evafive, and he was difmiffed without any marks either of ielentment or favour. Lodi did not fee clearly before him, and he was resolved to take advantage of events as they should happen to rife.

Shaw Jehân having, as already mentioned, Dawir taken the rout of Guzerat, received the submission poled and of that province. Seif Chan, who commanded murdered. for the empire, being fick, was taken in his bed; but his life was spared at the intercession of his wife, who was the particular favourite of the fister of the prince. Having remained seven days at Ahmedabâd, news arrived of the victory of the visier over Shariar. Chidmud-Perist was dispatched to the conqueror with letters. They contained expressions of the deepest gratitude to the minister, but he, at the same time, intimated, that diffention could not cease but with the life of the fons of Chusero and Danial.-The temporary emperor, Dawir Buxsh, had been dethroned and imprisoned three days before the arrival of Shaw Jehân's messenger at Lahore. His brother Gurshasp, and Baiesar and Hoshung, the fons of Danial, had been also confined. To show his attachment to Shaw Jehân, the visier delivered the keys of the prison to Perist; and that chief, to gain his master's favour, strangled the three princes that very night. Afiph made no enquiry concerning their deaths. He marched Vol. III. Q the

A D the next day toward Agra, having proclaimed
Shaw Jehan emperor of the Mogule

Shaw Jehân emperor of the Moguls

Shaw Jehân arriving at Ajmere, was joined, in that city by the Rana and his fon They were

Shan Je han att ves at Agra dignified with titles, and feveral Omrahs were raifed to higher ranks of nobility. The government of Ajmere, with many rich estates, were conferred upon Mohabet, and the emperor, for Shaw Jehân had assumed that title, marched toward Agra, and pitched his camp in sight of that capital, on the 31st of January 1628, in the garden which, from its beauty, was called the Ilabitation of Light Cassim, the governor of Agra, came with the keys, and touched the ground with his forchead before the emperor, who entered the city the next day, amid the accla mations of the populace. They forgot his crimes in his splendour, and recognized the right to the tilrone, which murder had procured

jhn⊶ gu chil dreu

Seven children were born to the emperor Ichangire five fons and two daughters. The first were Chusero Purvez, Churrum, Jehandar, and Shariar, the daughters were Sultana Nissa, and Sultana Bar Banu Chufero, Purvez and Jehandar died besore their father Shariar fell a victim to his brother's jealouly, and Churrum, under the name of Shaw Jehan, succeeded to the The prince Chusero left two sons. Da wir Buxth and Gurshafo the first had obtained the name of emperor they were both murder ed, as has been already mentioned, at Lahore The children of Purvez were a fon and a daugh ter the first, by dying a natural death soon after his father, prevented the dagger of Shaw Jehan from committing another murder, and the latter became afterwards the wife of Dara, the eldest fon of Shaw Jehan .- The two fohs of Danial. Baiefar and Hofhung, had been confined during the reign of their uncle Jehangire. Strangers to the world, and deflitute of experience, then nerves were relaxed by machinity, and their minds broken by advertity. This flate of debility did not sccure them from the jealousy of the new emperor, by whose commands they were firangled at Lahore. The emperor, either by the dagger or bowstring, dispatched all the males of the house of Imur; so that he himself and his children only remained of the posterity of Baber, who conquered India.

A D

Hig.

1037

The state of Persia suffered no change during State of the reign of the emperor Jehangire in Hindostan Usbekian Show Abas, firnamed the Great, who was in Tellary. his twentieth year on the throne of the family of Seifi at the death of Akbai, outlived Jehangire. He covered with splendid exploits, and a rigorous adherence to justice, the natural severity and even cruelty of his character, and acquired the reputation of a great, though not of an amiable, prince. The Usbec l'artars of Great Bucharia, who had made encroachments on the Persian dominions during the interrupted reigns of the immediate predecessors of Abas, lost much of their consequence in the time of that victorious prince. Domestic troubles and disputes about the fuccession converted the western l'artary into a scene of blood, and offered an object of ambition to Abas. He invaded Chorassan; he befieged the capital Balick, but he was obliged to retreat, by the activity and valour of Baki, who had possessed himself, after various vicissitudes of fortune, of the throne of the Usbecs. Baki, dying in the third year of his reign, was fucceeded by his brother Walli; who being expelled by his uncle, took refuge, with many of his nobles, in the court of Shaw Abas. The Persian assisted him with an army. He was successful Q 2

A D. 1628 Hig 1037 cefsful in many engagements, defeated his uncle's forces, and took the city of Bochara, but his fortune changed near Samarcand, and he fell in a battle, which he loft. The views of Abas, on the western dominions of the Usbecs, which had formerly belonged to Persia, fell with his ally Walli Emam Kulli and his brother divided between the empire, and, notwithstanding the efforts of Abas, retained the dominion of the extensive province of Chorassan.

SHAW JEHAN.

CHAP. 1.

Reflections—Accession of Shaw Jehan—Promotions
—The emperor's children—State of the empire with regard to foreign powers—Incursion of the Usbecs-War in Bundeleund-Disgrace-Tragical story-and flight of Chan Jchan Lodi-Death and character of Shaw Abas of Persia-Emperor's march to the Decan-IVar in Golconda and Tellingana—Irruption of the Afgans— The visier Asiph takes the field.

THE ideas upon government which the Tartars of the northern Asia carried into their conquests in Hindostan, were often fatal to the posterity of Timur. Monarchy descends through the channel of primogeniture; but despotism tions. must never fall into the hands of a minor. prince is the center of union between all the members of the state, and, when he happens to be a child, the ties which bind the allegiance of the fubject arc dissolved. Habituated to battle, and inured to depredation, the Tartars always adopted for their leader, that person of the family of their princes who was most proper for their own mode of life, and lost fight of hereditary fuccesfion in the convenience of the nation. they

AD. Hig.

120

they fettled in better regions than their native country, they did not lay aside a custom suited only to incursion and war. The succession to the throne was never determined by established rules, and a door was opened to intrigue, to murder, and to civil war Every prince, as if in an enemy's country, mounted the throne through conquest, and the fasety of the state, as well as his own, forced him, in a manner, to become an affaffin, and to fram the day of his accession with the blood of his relations When therefore the Defoot died ambition was not the only fource of broils among his fons They con tended for life as well as for the throne; under a certainty that the first must be lost, without a possession of the second Self preservation, that first principle of The human mind, converted fre quently the humane prince into a cruel tyrant and thus necessity prompted men to actions, which their fouls perhaps abhorred

Acceffion of Shaw Jehan.

Shaw Jehan had this apology for the murder of his relations, and the manners of the people were fo much adapted to an idea of necessity in fuch a case, that they acquiesced without mur muring under his government. He mounted the throne of the Moguls in Agra on the first of February, of the year 1628 of the Christian Æra. and, according to the pompous manner of eastern princes, affumed the titles of THE TRUE STAR OF THE FAITH, THE SECOND LORD OF THE HAPPY CONJUNCTIONS, MAHOMMED, THE KING OF THE WORLD He was born at Lahore on the fifth of January, 1 92, and, on the day of his accession, he was thirty fix solar years and twenty eight days old To drive away the memo ry of the late affaffinations from the minds of the people, and to gratify the nobles, who had crowded from every quarter to Agra, he uthered in his reign with a festival, which exceeded every thing of the kind known in that age, in magnificence and expence. The pompous flews of the favourite Sultana, in the late reign, vanished in the superior grandeur of those exhibited by Shaw Tehân

Hig 1037

In the midst of festivity and joy, Shaw Jehân Promotidid neither forget the state not the gratitude which he owed to his friends. Afiph Joh, though not yet arrived from Lahore, was confirmed in the office of visier. His appointments to support the dignity of his station, as a reward for the part he acted, in securing the possession of the throne to the emperor, amounted to near a million sterling. Mohâbet, who in Shaw Jehîn's progress from the Decan to Agra, had been presented with the government of Almere, was raised to the high office of captain-general of all the forces, and to the title and dignity of Chan Chanan, or first of the nobles His fon Chanazâd, who had been raised to the title of Chan Zimân, was placed in the government of Malava. Behâr was conferred on Chan Alum, Bengal on Casim, Allahabad on Jansapar Chan The emperor, in bestowing the province of Cabul on Liscâr, exhibited an instance of justice. He had, during his rebellion, taken eight lacks of roupees by force from that Omrah, and when he appointed him to Cabul, he at the same time gave him a draught on the treasury for the money, fignifying to Liscar, "That necessity being removed, there was no excuse for the continuance of injustice" Fifty Mahommedan nobles, together with many Indian Rajas, were raifed to honours, and gratified with prefents

During these transactions at Agra, Asiph pur. Asiph arfued his journey in very flow marches from La-nves at Agra. hore. His sister, the favourite of the late emperor,

A D 1628 Hig 1037 peror, being ruined in all her schemes of ambition, was left, in a kind of confinement at La hore, in the Imperial palace The four fons of the reigning emperor, Dara, Suia, Aurungzêbe, and Morad, had been fent as hostages for their father's good behaviour to Jehangire were in the Imperial camp when that monarch expired. and Aliph treated them with kindness and refpect. He arrived at Agra on the twenty fecond of March, and prefented his fone to the emperor, when he was celebrating the festival of the Norose, which is Fept by the followers of Ma hommed at the vernal equinox in every year The emperor was so much resourced at the fight of his children who had been all born to him by his favourite wife the daughter of Aliph, that he conferred upon their grandfather, the pompous THE PATHER OF title of PRINCES. STRENGTH OF THE REALM, AND PROTECTOR

Child en of the em

OF THE EMPIRE The Imperial prince Dara Shêko was thirteen years old at the accession of his father to the throne, Suja was in the twelfth, Aurungzebe in the tenth, and Morad in the fourth lunar year of his age. The eldest of the emperor's chil dren, by the favourite Sultana, the daughter of Aliph, was the princels Jebanara, which name fignifics The ornament of the world was fourteen years of age when Shaw Jehan mounted the throne Sensible, lively and generous, elegant in her person, and accomplished in her mind, she obtained an absolute empire over her father A fimilarity of disposition with the open and fincere Dara attached her to the interest of that prince, and he owed, in a great mea fure, the favour of his father to her influence. Rothenral Begum, or THE PRINCESS OF THE EN LIGHTENED MIND, was the fecond daughter of

Shaw

A D

Ηg

1037

Shaw Jehan, and his fourth child by the favourite Sultana Her wit was sharp and penetrating, her judgment found, her manner engaging like her person, she was full of address, and calculated for stratagem and intrigue. She resembled the pervading temper of Aurungzêbe, and favoured his deligns. The emperor's third daughter was Suria Bânu, of The splendid PRINCESS; a name fuited to her exquisite beauty. She was eafy and gentle in her temper, foft and pleasing in her address, humane, benevolent and filent: averse to duplicity and art, full of dignity and honourable pride. She took no part in the intrigues which disturbed the repose of the state, devoting her time to the accomplishments of her fex, and a few innocent amusements

Shaw Jehân found himself in the peaceable State of possession of the extensive empire of his father, pire. and he had abilities to govern it with dignity, justice and precision. Tranquillity was established at home; and there were no enemies to disturb him from abroad. Shaw Abas soon after died in Persia; and the sceptre fell into the weak and inactive hands of his grandfon Sefi, a prince, incapable of either governing his subjects with dignity, or of giving any disturbance to his neighbours The spirit of the Usbecs had declined, and they were exhaulted by disputed successions and civil wars. The Indian nations, beyond the pale of the empire, were peaceable and unwarlike incapable of committing injuries, and too distant from the seat of government to receive The Portugueze, though the most powerful European nation in India, were not formidable to the empire, though hated by the prince. Shaw Jehân, when in arms against his father, had solicited their affistance. They had not only sefused him their aid, but, in a manly manner, reproached

A D 1628. 111g 1037 reproached him for having demanded in his parent and fovereign. He was fenfit justice of the reproof, and therefore of forgive it. The Sultana was their enen had accompanied her husband to one fettlements, and the was enraged beyong fore against them for the worship they impares.

Lols fub-

The difrespect shewn by Lodi who con in the Decan, to Nishar Chan the emperfenger, produced a superfeding commission latter against the former Nishar produ Imperial mandate but Lodi would no Mohabet was ordered with a force against fractory general, and Nishar, on accoun not having acted with a proper spirit, Chan Ziman, from his govern called Malava, marched with all his forces to th his father Mohâbet Lodi was foon red He fent meffengers to M with a requelt of his mediation with the e explaining away his conduct, by the diffi deciding in favour of the reigning empero: the will of lebangire " But now, he "that Shaw Jehan remains alone posterity of Timur, Lodi cannot hesitate his commands Thefe letters were rece Mohabet before things came to open h He transmitted them to Agra, and Lodi stored, in appearance, to favour

Invation

The confusions occasioned by the disputcession, after the death of Jehangire, rous ambition of Shaw Kuli, prince of the Ust tars. He looked upon a civil war as a event in India, and he resolved to seize then thousand of his best horse under Niddhommed, accompanied with a good train tillery, to penetrate into the province of Cabul. That general entered the Imperial dominions, and laid fiege to the fortress of Zohac But the place was so strong, and so well defended by Zingis. who commanded the gairison, that Mahommed, after fuffering a confiderable loss, railed the fiege The Usbecs, however, did not retreat to then own country. Mahommed, after being repulied at Zohâc, attempted to surprize Cabul, and, having failed in the entciprize, he fat down before that city.

A D

1628 Hig

1037

Having summoned the garrison of Cabul to no of the UL purpose, the Usbecs began to make their approaches. They foon advanced their batteries to the counterscarp of the ditch, and, by a constant fire, made several breaches in the wall. Ziffer. the late Suba, had left the place; and Liscar, the new governor, was not yes arrived. The command of the garrifon was in Jacob Chan; who defended himself so well, that the enemy was beat back with great loss in a general affault. Mahommed, though repulsed, was not discouraged. He raised, with great labour, mounds to command the walls, and drove the besieged from the tampart. The breach, however, had been repaired, and the Usbecs durst not attempt to scale the walls.

The news of the invasion had, in the mean Repulsed. time, arrived at the court of Agra, and the emperor, finding that Mohâbet had fettled the affairs of the Decan, ordered that general to the relief Having left his fon in his command in the fouth. Mohâbet hastened with all expedition to the north. Twelve thousand horse attended him, and he was to take up the forces of Punjab on his way The siege had now continued three months; the Usbecs had again made a practicable breach, and the ditch was almost filled.

THE HISTORY OF HINDOSTAN 128

the rigid darkness of Shaw Jehan s countenance

continued, and the captain general flood at a 1038

1418

His

distance in close conversation with the Raja The emperor faw them but he was filent prince, and even Mohabet, despaired of success They came the third day into the presence, and flood, as usual, at a distance The Raja was in fetters, and Mohabet chained his own band to that of the ortfoner 'Approach, Mohaber faid Shaw Jehan " The captain general will have it fo, and I pardon Hidia Singh life without dignity is no prefent from the enipefor of the Moguls, to a fallen prince fore, to his government restore Hidiar Singh, upon paying fixteen lacks of roupees, and furnishing the Imperial army with forty elephants of war " Mohabet Notwithstanding the deference which was shewn

r mo mi from the Fead of th a my

to Mohabet for his great abilities, the emperor was lealous of his influence and popularity therefore requested of him to relign the command of the army on the frontiers of the un conquered provinces of the Decan, together with the government of Candeith, both which offices the captain general discharged, by Chan Zeman his fon Eradit, the receiver general of the Imperial revenues, was appointed to that important station. He fer out from court and Chan Zeman having refigned the army and go vernment to him, returned to Agra This change in the government of the frontier provinces was productive of disturbances The Nizam of Gol conda who had been kept quiet by the reputa tion of Mohabet and his fon invaded upon the departure of the latter, the Imperial province of Candeish Diria, who, in subordination to the new Suba, commanded the army, attacked the Nizam in a diladvantageous fituation, and obliged min to reneat into insown dominions, with the loss of a great part of his army

The unsuccessful attempts of the Usbecs upon Cabul, in the beginning of the preceding year, together with domestic distractions consequent Irruption upon their disgrace, had hitherto secured the of the Uspeace of the northern frontier of the empire. They were, however, anxious to recover their lost reputation. An army of volunteers were collected, and the command vested in Zingis. That officer fuddenly entered the Imperial dominions; and fat down before the fort of Bamia, in the mountains of Cabul The place was feebly garrifoned, and the Usbecs pressed the siege with vigour. It fell into their hands, and Zingis having demolished the walls, returned, with the plunder of the open country, to the dominions of the Usbecs. This irruption could be scarce called a war, as the sudden retreat of the enemy restored the public tranquillity.

The most remarkable event of the second year Story of of Shaw Jehân is the flight of Chan Jehân Lodi Chan Jehan Lodi. from Agra. This nobleman, at the death of Jehangire, commanded, as already mentioned, the Imperial army stationed in the Decan. The favourite Sultana had found means, by letters, to gain over Lodi to the interest of the prince Shariâi, whom she had resolved to place on the throne of India. Shaw Jehân, in his march to Agia, applied to him for a passage through his government, which he absolutely refused. He added contempt to his refusal, by sending a thoufand roupees, a horse, and a dress to the prince, as to a person of inferior dignity to himself. The messenger of Lodi, however, had not the courage to deliver the humiliating present. He gave the roupees, the drefs, and the horse to a Thepheid, when he got beyond the walls Brampour,

A D Brampour, where Lodi refided He, at the same time, desired the shepherd to return the whole to Lodi, and to tell him. That if the presents were not unworthy of him to give they were too infignificant for his servant to carry to a great prince. Having given these directions to the the phord the messenger proceeded to Shaw Je han The prince approved of his behaviour, thanked him for having such a regard for his ho nour, and after he was settled on the throne, rass ed the messenger as a reward for his services, to the rank of a noble

Case of Shaw Jehan, being in no condition to force his way through the government of Lodi, took tentment a long circuit round the hills, through wild and unfrequented paths Lodi became soon sensible of his error. The defert and death of Shariar, his way through the government of Lodi, took eat a long circuit round the hills, through wild and unfrequented paths Lodi became foon fenfible of his error. The defert and death of Shariar, the imprisonment of the Sultana, the murder of Dawir Burth, and the accession of Shaw Jehân to the throne, came successively to his ears. He thought of submission, but an army was on its march to reduce him to obedience. Zimân, the son of Molâbet, was at the head of this force, but Lodi being in possession of an army, and an extensive and rich province, the emperor gave to his general a commission to treat with that refractory Lord. He soon closed with the terms.

upon his refigining the Imperial division of the Decan The emperor, however, was not sincere in the pardon which he promised His pride revolted at the indignities offered him by Lodi, and, at a proper occasion, he resolved to punish him

I odi was not long in possession of the government of Malava, when he received orders to repair to court. As his resignation of the command of the army might be construed into obedience,

A D.

dience, rather than attributed to fear, he was under no apprehensions in making his appearance in the prefence. An edict of indemnity had been promulgated to all the Omrahs who had opposed the accession of Shaw Jehan to the throne, and Lodi thought that there was no probability of his being excluded from the indulgence granted to others. Fic was, however, convinced of his error, on the first day of his appearance at court. The uther, Perist, obliged him to exhibit some ceremonies of obedience, inconfistent with the rank which he held among the nobility. He was fomewhat refractory, but he thought it prudent to submit His son, Azmut Chan, was introduced after his father. The youth was then but sixteen years of age. He thought that the usher kept him too long prostrate upon the ground, and he started up before the signal for rising was given. The usher, in a rage, struck Azmut over the head with his rod, and infifted upon his throwing himfelf again on the ground. Azmut, full of fire and valour, drew his fword. He aimed a blow at the usher's head; but one of the mace-beaters waided it off, and faved his

A sudden murmur spread around. All fell He is difinto confusion, and many placed their hands on graced in the pretheir fwords. Lodi, confidering the blow given fence to his fon, as the fignal of death, drew his dagger to defend himself. Hussein, his other son, followed his father's example. The tumult encreafed, and the emperor leapt from his throne. Lodi and his fons rushed out of the presence. Their house was contiguous to the palace, and they shut themselves up, with three hundred dependants. The house being inclosed with a strong wall, no impression could be made upon it without artillery; and as a fiege fo near the gates of Vol. III.

1629

the palace would derogate from the majefty of the emperor, Shaw Jehan endeavoured to entice Lodi to a furrender, by a promife of pardon His friends at court, however, acquainted him, that there was a refolution formed against his life and he resolved to make his escape, or to die in the attempt

Ilı dî tref

Night, in the mean time, came on, and he was tormented with various passions. His wo men were all around him. To leave them to dif honour was intolerable, to remain was death, to remove them by violence, cruelty. He was af flicted beyond measure, and he burst into tears His wives faw his grief, and they retired They confulted together in an inner apartment. Their resolution was noble, but desperate, they raised their hands against their own lives The groans reached the ears of Lodi He rushed in, but there was only one taper burning which, his hafte, he overturned and extinguished He spoke, but none answered He searched around, but he plunged his hand in blood He stood in filence a while, and one of his fons having brought a light, discovered to his eyes a scene of mexpressible horror He said not a word, but the wildness of his eyes was expressive of the tempest which rolled in his mind. He made a fignal to his two fons and they buried the un fortunate women in the garden. He hung for fome time in filence over their common grave Then starting at once from a profound reverse. he issued forth in a state of horror and despair He ordered his drums to be beaten, his trumpets to be founded His people gathered around him They mounted their horfes in the court yard, and he himself at once threw open the gate He iffued out with his two fons, and his followerfell in order into his path. The Imperial troops were assonished was heard to e with the found tremble at my city like a w

1. disturbed at the sudden noise, and flight. Malava. is bed. He enquired into the The emperq dered Abul Hussein, with nine started from b puriae the fugitive. They colother nobles, to Tall. and left the city by the Lodi, without halting, rode forlected their tr miles He was flopt by the river dawn of, day. was fo high, fo rough and rapid, ward near forty he rains, that he could not fwim Chunbil, which all the boats had been carried on account ofream. This was an unexpected down by the flack, but as the weather was and terrible coped that the torrent would foon now fair, he hink. In the midit of his anxiety, fall; and in that oops appeared. He called his peoflood on the band told them, he was resolved to the Imperial fir here was a pass behind him, which ple together, in two hills into a narrow plain. die in arms. ediate possession of the pass; the

d cut off all hopes of flight, ferved

He took imm

river, which he lists, trusting to their numbers, His gallour, to cover his reaction confidence, but they were for lant behaviour, advanced with ear. Shame forced them to renew felect body pressed forward into shock was violent, and the slaughthe charge. A des, was as great and expeditious, the pass. The ace in which they engaged would ter, on both find had a resource in numbers; as the small plant behaviour, and the slaughthe pass. The ace in which they engaged would the find had a resource in numbers; as the small plant behaviour, and the slaughthe pass. The ace in which they engaged would the pass. The ace in which he could conside but his permit. Husself R 2 valour.

134

THE HISTORY OF HIPhis men now re

A D 16 9-Hig 1038

wounded in the valour Scarce one hundred of mained unburt, he himself was desperate. His right arm and the enemy were conjured him to time to advance. His affairs were would fecure his two fons Azmut and Huffein. replied Lodi. attempt the river, and that they retreat 'The danger is equal g, as his wound " But can I They infifted upon his retreatire when I have most had rendered him unfit for action twhen I have most it leave you both, faid Lodi, "I attend me in "need of my fons? One miles a greater evil " my misfortune, which is perha" "than death itself? A disperse retreat. At arose between the brothers, each who had struck the honour of covering their fath in the front of that instant, the usher, Perist, thing is deter Azmut in the presence, appeared thou behold that the Imperialis "Hussen, the spurred onward mined, faid Azmut, "dost plurged into plunged into " villain, and bid me fly?" his horse his father and brothe if great strength the river and ef cape.

He faw Azmut Perist was a Calmuc Tartar, the ranks, and of body and intrepidity of mind iy Azmut had advancing, and he started from rode forward to meet him half wie aimed an arhis bow ready bent in his hand row at Perist and laid him dean did not long his horse. But the valuant youthal friends who h did not long furvive his enemy He was cut ill friends who Imperialists, and the few faithf had remained by his fide, were boaft of their the fpot, or driven into the rive three officers of The conquerors had no reason to three officers of victory, four hundred men, and ton, six nobles high rank, were slain in the act reliefs were wounded. and a great number of inferio wounded. The latter action was fo short, that it was over before Lodi and Huffein had extricated themselves from the stream. When they ascended the opposite bank of the river, they looked back with anxiety for Azmut, but Azmut was no more to be feen. even his followers were, by that time, flain, and the victors, with fliouts of triumph, possessed the further shore

H g

Lodi had no time to deliberate, none to in-His liftless dulge his grief for Azmut. The enemy had al- and briveready plunged into the stream, and he made the best of his way from the bank. He entered his own province of Malava, but the Imperialifts were close at his heels. Before he could collect his friends, he was overpowered by numbers, and defeated in several actions. He was at length driven beyond the boundaries of Malava. He continued his flight to Bundela, with a few adherents who had joined him, and he maintrined, with great bravery, every pass against the troops that purfued him in his retreat. The Imperialist, however, being at length haraffed by long marches, bad roads, and continual skirmishing, gave over the pursuit. Lodi remained a few days at Bundela, then he traversed the provinces of Berar and Odipour, in his rout to Golconda, and piefented himself before the Nizâm at Dowlatabâd. That prince received the unfortunate fugitive with open arms, a warm friendship having, for some years, subsisted between them.

The emperor expressed great uneafiness at the Uneafescape of Lodi He knew his abilities, he was nels of the acquainted with his undeviating perseverance High-spirited and active, Lodi loved danger, as furnishing an opportunity for an exertion of his great talents, and he was always discontented and uneafy at that tranquillity for which mankind in general offer up their players to Heaven The

more

136

THE HIS arms. His pride had been rouzed

A D 1629 Hi_k 1038 more noble ancies thrown upon him, and he were now up in h of his wives and of his gallant by the indignity of Shaw Jehân. His haughty afcribed the deal gainst submission, and his pru afcribed the deal gainst submission, and his pru fon to the person to listen any more to pardons temper revolted neere. The emperor knew the dence forbad his he had to contend, and he was that were not siews of his arrival in the Decan man with whom it to reconcile the jarring interests. He foresaw a sit were the avowed enemies of the be given to Lody of princes, who decision. He thought the object of princes, who decision. He thought the object his presence on the southern he was rapid in parter, and he ordered his army bether, that he might command frontier of his effected war in person frontier of his effected war in person.

Death and ha act r of Shaw Abas. them in the e phis accession to the throne. He During there his public entrance, when the rived from Sh fler s death arrived Abas died Shaw Jehan on He s death arrived Abas died had fearce mad January of the year 1629, after news of his malyears over Choraffan, and more news of his mai'as fovereign of all Persia He in the month of a warlike disposition, a good than forty two p politician, a great conqueror uel and produgal of blood was a prince in enemy, nor thought he ever statesman, a dee arded a friend Severe in his But he was creample, he rendered what is in never forgave a ood, a real evil He knew no fufficiently rewes death, which is among man justice beyond est punishment was the least in itself a public g Though given to oppression degrees in crim himfelf. kind the greate flicted by Aba himself, he permitted none in others. He was the monarch, and he would be the only tyrant. He delighted in curbing the haughtiness of the nobility: he took pride in relieving the poor. All his subjects had access to his person. He heard their complaints, and his decisions were immediate and terrible. His people, therefore, became just through fear, and he owed a reign of half a century to the terrors with which he furrounded his throne. He was passionate and violent to a degree that fometimes perveited his judgment; and he who boafted of holding the scales of just dealing between mankind, broke often forth into outrageous acts of injulice. During his life, he was respected by all; but his death was lamented by none.

A D

16,1 Hig 1040

The great preparations made by Shaw Jehan Preparafor an expedition into the Decan, detained him war at Agra till the fourth of February of the 1631 of the Christian Æia. He placed himself at the head of one hundred thousand horse; which, together with infantry, artillery and attendants, increased the number of the army to three hundred thousand men. He advanced toward the Decan; and the governors of the provinces through which he passed, fell in with their forces into his line of march. On the borders of Chandeish, he was met by Eradit Chan, the Suba of the province, who conducted him to his own refidence, the city of Biampour. The emperor encamped his army in the environs of Brampour, and dispatched messengers to the tributary princes of the Decan. The principal of these were, Adil fovereign of Bejapoui, Kuttub, who styled him-felf king of Hydrabad and Tellingana, and the Nizam prince of Golconda He threatened them with utter destruction should they not come perfonally to make their fubmission, after having disbanded distanced the armies which they had raised to support the rebellion of Lodi. He also recommended to them, either to deliver up or expel the man who had, by encouraging their schemes projected their ruin. They sent evasive answers to these demands; and continued their preparations for war

1 18

A D

Emperor arr ves in the Decaus

The fudden arrival of the emperor with fuch a great force, was, however, premature for the affairs of Lodi He had not vet been able to unite the armies of his allies, nor to raife a fuf ficient force of his own The terror of the Im perial army had made each prince unwilling to out his own dominions, left they should become the theatre of invalion and war. They faw the florm gathering but they knew not where it was to fall and when they were afraid of all quarters. they took no effectual means for the defence of any They were besides divided in their councils Ancient realousies and recent injuries were re membered, when the good of the whole was for Distrust prevailed, indecision and terror followed, and the unfortunate Lodi, in faite of his activity, his zeal and abilities, found but small ground on which he could reft his hopes

He de taches The emperor in the mean time was piqued at the inattention which princes, whom he con fidered as tributaries had shewn to his embassly. He resolved upon revenge. The Nizam as being the first who had received Lodi under his protection was the first object of his resentment. He raised Eradit, the governor of Chandeish, to the title of Azim Chan, and submitted an army of twenty five thousand men to his command. The force was not judged sufficient for the reduction of the Nizam but the emperor would not trust Lradit with the absolute command of a more numerous army. He sell upon the expedient of detaching detaching two other armies, confishing each of fourteen thousand horse, under the separate commands of Raja Gop Singh and Shaista Chan. These two generals were to act in conjunction with Eradit, but they were not absolutely under his orders. The three aimies began their march from the capital of Chandeish, about the veinal equinox of the 1631 of the Christian Æra, and took the rout of Dowlatabad.

A D

16.1 Hig

1010

The emperor, in the mean time, remained at armies Brampour Forces from various quarters crowd- from the Imperial ed daily into his camp He detached seven thou-camp fand horse, under Raw Ruton, toward Tellingana, and as many more, under the conduct of Abul Hussein, into the principality of Nasic, in the mountains of Ballagat. The Raja of Nafic had infulted Shaw Jehan in his exile and miffortunes; nor did he ever forget an injury which affected his pride. The Hindoo prince suffered for his insolence; his country being, without mercy, subjected to fire and sword. The emperor told Hussein at parting: "The Raja of Nafic listened not to me in my distress, and you must teach him how dangerous it is to infult a man, that may one day be fovereign of the world" The expression alluded to his own name; but a jest was unfit for the tragedy which was acted in the desolated country of Nasic.

The first account of the success of Shaw Je-Successin hân's arms arrived at Brampour, from Bakîr the governor of Orissa. That province lying contiguous to Golconda, Bakîr had received orders to make a diversion on that side. He accordingly had marched with a confiderable force; and found the fide of the country nearest to Orissa uncovered with troops. He laid siege to Shudda, Shikerist, Chizduar and Berimal, places of great strength in Golconda, and they fell successively 1042. Hlg 1\31 into his hands. The news of this fucces pleased the more the less it was expected. In the splendour of the other expeditions, that under Bakir was forgotten, and the emperor scarce remembered that he had given orders to the Suba to invade the enemy, when he heard that he had penetrated into the heart of their country. Ho nours were heaped upon him, and his messengers were loaded with presents.

Lodi com m wis he cm fede rates

Though Lodi had failed in bringing the united force of the confederates into the field, he led the councils of the courts of Golconda and Bua pour By representing to them, that when they fought one by one all should be overcome, they fulmitted their armies to his command vanced immediately toward the Imperialifis, and threw himfelf into the paffes of the mountains before Lradit, who made many vain efforts to penetrate into Golconda. A reinforcement of nine thousand men were detached to him from the Imperial camp. Nothing would do fituation and abilities enabled Lodi to counteract all his motions, and he either remained machine. or loft numbers in fruitless attempts which penetrated from Guzerat into the countries on the coast of Malabar, was not so unsuccessful The firong fortiefs of Chandwar fell into their hands, and they forcad their devaltations far and wide

Aff sat

Shaw Jehan was not in the mean time idle at Brampour Though he directed all the motions of the armies, he was not forgetful of the civil government of his vaft empire. With a justice which bordered on feverity, he quantied all petty diffurbances through his dominions. He inquired minutely into every department. He heard all complaints against his own officers, and when the people were aggrieved, he removed them from their employments. Nor was he, in the midst of public business, negligent of that grandeur and magnificence which, by raifing awe in his subjects, gave weight to his commands. He felected a hundred out of the fons of the nobility, who were of the most dislinguished merit, and created them Omrahs in one day. He gave to each a golden mace, and they were, by their inflitution, always to attend the presence. They were all uniformly dreffed in embroidered cloaths, with golden helmets, fwords inlaid, and shields fludded with gold. When the emperor rode abroad, these attended him, with drawn fabies, all mounted on fine Arabian horses. Out of these he chote his officers, and when he fent any of them on fervice, his place was immediately supplied from another corps who, though not dignified with titles, were equipped in the fame manner, only that then ornaments were of filver. They also attended the emperor on horseback, when he rode abroad.

Eradit, having despaired of being able to force An action. the passes of the mountains where Lodi was posted with the aimy of the confederates, directed his march another way. He was close pursued by Lodi with twelve thousand hoise. That general, finding a proper opportunity, attacked the Imperialists with great vigour, threw them into confufion, and went near routing the whole army. Six Omrahs of rank fell on the Imperial fide; but Eradit having formed his army in order of battle, Lodi thought proper to give way, and to shelter himself in the hills. Eradit took advantage of his retreat, and hung close upon his heels: -but Lodi had the address not to offer battle, excepting upon unequal terms on the fide of the enemy. He in the mean time harassed the Imperial army with flying squadrons; cutting off their convoys, convoys, defeating their foraging parties, and laying waste the country in their rear. Nor was the expedition under Raw Ruton into Fellingana attended with more success than that under Era dit. The general was inactive, and the army weak. Raw Ruton was recalled, and disgraced for his inactivity, and Nazir Chan took the command of the Imperial troops in Tellingana.

A D

Afgans repulfed

The active foint of Lodi was not confined to the operations of the field. No stranger to the funerior power of the emperor, he armed against him, by his emissaries, the Afgans of the north They issued from their hills to make a diversion on that fide. They were led by Kemnal, the chief of the Robilla tribe, and they entered Pun 18h with a numerous but irregular army The project failed The emperor despised too much the depredatory incursion of naked barbarians. to be frightened by them from his main object. He contented himself with sending orders to the governors of the adjacent provinces to repel the The Afgans accordingly were opposed, defeated, and driven with little loss on the fide of the empir, to shelter themselves in their na tive hills. The project of Lodi, though well planned, fell short of the intended effect

Eradit fu profeed in the com mod of the arms The flow progress made by Eradit, against the conduct and abilities of Lodi, induced the emperor to think of superfeding him in his command. He had promised to himself success, from the great superiority of his army in point of numbers, and the disappointment fell heavy on his ambition and pride. To place himself at the head of the expedition, was beneath his dignity, and his presence was otherwise necessary at Brampour, as the place most centrical for conveying his orders to the different armies in the field Besides, the civil business of the state, the folid regulation

1631

Hig.

1040.

regulation of which he had much at heart, re-A D quired his attention and application. He therefore resolved to send his visier Asiph into the field. His name was great in the empire, and his abilities in war were, at least, equal to his talent for managing the affairs of peace.

SHAW JEHAN

CHAPH

The Visier commands the arry—Defeat of the con fed rates—Fight, misfortunes, and d ath of Lodi—Pragress of the war in the Decan—Death of the favourite Sultana—A famine—Peace in the Decan—Emperor returns to Agra—Persecution of Idolaters—War with the Portugueze—Their factory tiken—Raja of Bundela reduced and slain—Marianges of the princes Dara and Suja—War in the Decan—Golconda reduced—Death of Mobilis—Affairs at court

H K R H R J

Viller takes the command of he ar

 $\Gamma_{
m H\Gamma}$ vilier, in obedience to the emperor's or ders fit out from Brampour on the nineteenth of November, with a folendid retinue, together with a reinforcement of ten thousand horse. took the command of the army upon his arrival in the mountains, and Eradit remained as his lieutenant, the emperor distrusting more the abilities than the courage and fidelity of that Omrah The name of Aliph, at the head of the army, firuck the confederates with a panic They were no strangers to his same, and they began to be conquered in their own minds. They resolved to retreat from their advantageous post Lodi remonstrated in vain. They had taken their refolution.

Hig

1040

folution, and would not hear him. His haughty ipirit was dilgulted at their cowardice. Several nobles, formerly his friends, had joined him in his misfortunes, with their retinues. They adhered to his opinion, and refolved to fland by his fide. They took possession of advantageous ground; and they engaged the visier with great resolution and conduct. The battle was long equal: numbers at last prevailed. Lodi and his brave friend Dilia Chan covered the retieat of their party, whilft they theinfelves flowly retired. The field of action and the passes of the mountains remained to the visier, who immediately detached a great part of the army under his lieutenant Eradit to Dowlatabâd.

The Nizam, being advanced in years, was un-The Nifit for the fatigues of the field. He had remain- poles ed in his capital, but as foon as he heard of the term? approach of Eradit, he evacuated the city, and shut himself up in the citadel, which was thought impregnable. Lodi, after his defeat, made the best of his way to Dowlatabad, with an intention of throwing himself into that capital, to defend it to the last extremity. He was too late by some -hours: Eradit was in the city. He fled, and took possession of a pass near Dowlatabad, where he defended himself till night, against the whole force of the Imperialists. He escaped in the dark, and wandered over Golconda. The army of the Nizam had, by this time, thrown themselves into the fortreffes, and the open country was over-run by the enemy. To complete the missoitunes of that prince, his nobles daily deferted him, with their adheients, and joined Shaw Jehân. began ferrously to think of peace, and, dispatched ambassadors both to the emperor and to the visier.

The

A D Hir light

The emperor had given instructions to Asiph to liften to no terms, without a preliminary arti cle. that Lods should be delivered into his hands The affairs of the Nizam were desperate, and Lodi was afraid that necessity would get the better of friendship. He now considered his allies as his greatest enemies, and he resolved to sly from Gol conda The emperor had foreseen what was to happen, and he placed firong detachments in all the passes of the mountains Notwithstanding this precaution, in fpite of the general orders for feizing him dispersed over the country, Lodi forced his way, with four hundred men, into Malava, and arrived at the city of Ugein. Shaw Jehan was no fooner apprifed of his escape, than he sent Abdalla in pursuit of him with ten thousand horse Abdalla came up with the fugitive at Ugein, but he escaped to Debalpour, and being also driven from that place, he surprised Strong where he feized feveral Imperial elephants, and with thefe he took the route of Bundela

Missortune pursued Lodi wherever he went The Raja s fon to gain the emperor s favour fell upon him In the action he loft many of his best friends Diria was the first who fell, and the unfortunate Lodi gave up his foul to grief He fled, but it was to accumulated milery fell in, the very next day, with the army of Ab dalla there scarce was time for flight. His eld est fon, Mahommed Aziz, stopt, with a few friends, in a narrow part of the road, and de voting their lives for the fafety of Lodi were cut off to a man He waited half the night on a neighbouring hill, with a vain expectation of the return of his gallant fon All was filent, and the unhappy father was diffolved in tears. The noise of arms approached at last, but it was the enemy, recent from the flaughter of his fon and his friends. He fled toward Callenger; but Seid Amud, the governor of that place, marched out against him. A skirmish ensued: Lodi was defeated, Hussein, the only fon left to him, was slain, and his adherents were now reduced to thirty horsemen. He was purfued with fuch vehemence, that he had not even time for despair.

ΑD 1631 Hig 1041

Abdalla, hearing of the low ebb of Lodi's for- and death tune, divided his army into finall parties, to fcour of Lodi; the country. A detachment under Muzisser Chan fell in with the unfortunate fugitive. When he faw the enemy at a small distance, he called together his thirty followers "Misfortune," laid he, " has devoted me to ruin it is in vain to struggle co longer against the stream. I have lost my " fons; but your attachment, in the last extreme, " tells me I have not lost all my friends I only " remain of my family, but let me not involve " you in the destruction which overwhelms me "without resource. Your adherence is a proof ce that I have conferred favours upon you. per-" mit me to ask one favour in my turn. It is -that you leave me-and fave yourselves by " flight." They burst all into tears, and told him, that was the only command from him which they could not obey. He was filent, and gave the fignal with his fword to advance. Muziffer was aftonished when he saw thirty men marching up against his numerous detachment. He imagined they were coming to fuirender themselves. But when they had come near his line, they put their horses on a gallop, and Muziffer ordered his men to fire. A ball pierced I odi through the left breast, he fell dead at the feet of his horse, and his thirty faithful companions were cut off to a man

Such was the end of Chan Jehân Lodi, after a His chaferies of uncominon misfortunes. He was de-racter. Vol. III. fcended S

A D 1651 11 g 1041 feended of the Imperial family of Lodi, who held the feeptre of India before the Moguls His mind was as high is his defeent his courage was equal to his ambition. He was full of ho nour, and generous in the extreme. His pride prevented him from ever gaining an enemy, and he never loft a friend. The attachment of his followers to his perfon, is the best eulogy on the benevolence of his mind, and the fears of the emperor are irrefragable proofs of his abilities. Those missortunes, therefore, which might have excited pity had they fallen upon others, drew admiration only on Lodi. We feel compassion for the weak, great men are a match for adversity the contest is equal, and we yield to no emotion but surprize.

r n brok

When the news of the death of Lodi arrived in the Imperial camp, Shaw Jehan betraved every fymptom of joy The head of the unfortunate rebel was placed above one of the gates of the city of Brampour Abdalla was careffed for his fervices Valuable prefents were given him, and he was dignified with the fplendid title of, THE BUN OF OMRAHS. AND THE VICTORIOUS IN WAR Muziller, whole fortune it was to kill Lodi, was railed to the dignity of the decealed being af terwards diffinguished by the name of Chan Je-The negociations for the re establishment of peace between the emperor and the confederate princes of the Decan, was, in the mean time, broke off by the too great demands on the part of Shaw Jehan Hostiliues were accordingly recommenced, and Eradit was left in the command of the army the public bufinels demand ing the presence of the visier at court The con federates had, as has been already observed, re tired from the field into their strong holds war was converted into a succession of sieges. The fortreffes were strong, the garrifons determined,

A D

1631. Hig

1041

and the Imperialists unskilful; but the emperor was obstinate, and would not abate from his first demands The confequence was, that Shaw Jehân, after a war of two years, in which he lost multitudes of men by famine, disease, and the fword, and after having expended prodigious treasures, found himself possessed of a few forts, his army tired out with ineffectual hostilities, and the enemy distressed, but not vanquished.

A minute detail of unimportant campaigns Progressof would be tedious and dry. Uninteresting par-rial arms. ticulars and events fcarce stamp a sufficient value on time, to merit the pen of the historian. In the summer of 1631, Damawir, the strongest fort in Golconda was taken. In the beginning of the year 1632, Candumâr in Tellingana, which was deemed impregnable, fell into the hands of the Imperialists. Little treasure was found in either. The Patan princes never had a disposition for hoarding up wealth. A fierce, warlike, and independent race of men, they valued the hard tempered steel of their swords more than gold and filver, which the rest of mankind so much prize.

On the eighteenth day of July, 1631, died in Death and child-bed, about two hours after the birth of a character of the Sulprincess, the favourite Sultana, Arjemund Banu, tana the daughter of Afiph Jah. She had been twenty vears married to Shaw Jehan, and bore him a child almost every year Four sons and four daughters survived her. When her husband ascended the throne, he dignified her with the title of Mumiaza Zemani, or, The most lxalted of the age. Though she seldom interfered in public affairs, Shaw Jehân owed the empire to her influence with her father Nor was he - ungrateful: he loved her living, and lamented her when dead. Calm, engaging, and mild in her disposition, she engrossed his

A D idgi Hig ioqi affection and though he maintained a number of women for state, they were only the slave of her pleasure. She was such an enthusiast in Dessin, that she scarce could forbear perfecting the Por tuguese for their supposed idolatry, and it was only on what concerned that nation, she suffered her temper, which was naturally placid, to be russed. To express his respect for her memory, the emperor railed, at Agra, a tomb to her name, which cost in building the amazing sum of seven hundred and sifts thousand pounds.

Public ca lamitics.

The death of the Sultana was followed by pubhe calamities of various kinds. The war in the Decan produced nothing but the delolation of that country An extraordinary drought, which burnt up all vegetables, dried up the rivers, and rent the very ground, occasioned a dreadful fa The Imperial camp could not be supplied with provisions diffress prevailed over the whole face of the empire Shaw Jehan remitted the taxes in many of the provinces, to the amount of three millions fterling, he even opened the treasury for the relief of the poor but money could not pur chase bread a prodigious morrality ensued, dif eafe followed close on the heels of famine, and death ravaged every corner of India city of provisions prevailed in Persia the famine raged with still greater violence in the Western Tartary No rain had fallen for feven years in that country Populous and flourishing provinces were converted into folitudes and defarts few, who escaped the general calamity, wandered through depopulated cities alone.

The copfederates fue for peace. But as if famine and difease were not sufficient to destroy mankind, Asiph Jah, who had resumed the command of the army, assisted them with the sword. He trod down the scanty harvest in the Decan.

A D

1533. Нg

Decan; and ravaged with fire and fword the kingdom of Bijapour. Adıl Shaw, the sovereign of the country, came into terms when nothing was left worthy of defence. He promised to pay an annual tribute to the house of limur, and to own himself a dependant'on the empire. Money was extorted from the Nizam, and from Kuttub, prince of Tellingana The conditions were, That the emperor should remove his army; bu that he should retain, by way of security for their future behaviour, the strong holds which had fallen into his hands. Such was the end of a war, begun from motives of conquest, and continued through pride. The emperor, fquandering a great treasure, and losing a multitude of men, fat down without extending his limits, without acquiring reputation. His great superiority in point of strength, when compared to the small force of the confederates, prevented battles which might yield him renown. He wasted his strength on sieges, and had to contend with greater evils than the fwords of the enemy. He, however, humbled the Patan power in India, which, during the distractions occasioned by his own rebellion in the preceding reign, had become formidable to the family of limir.

The emperor returned not to Agra, from the Retuin of unprofitable war in the Decan, till the seventh of he emperor to March of the year 1633. Eradit was left in Agrathe city of Brampour, in his former office of governor of Chandeish. He, however, did not long continue to execute the duties of a commisfion which was the greatest the emperor could be-The command of the army stationed on the frontiers of the Decan, had been annexed to the subaship of the province, and though Shaw Jehân was in no great terror of Eradit's abilities, he, at that time, placed no trust in his fidelity. The

1613 116 1011

52

The command and the province were offered to the visier, who was alarmed left it might be a pretence of removing him from the prefence. He covered his diflike to the measure with an aft of generality. He recommended Mahahet to the office deffuned for humfelf, and the emperor. though, from a realousy of that lord's reputation. he had kept him during the war in the command of the army near Brampour, confented to grant his request He, however, infinuated to Mohâ bet, that he could not foure him from his councils. and, therefore, recommended to him to appoint his fon Chan Ziman his deputy, in the province of Chandeith ion of the Jundons.

The emperor had observed, that during the diffress occasioned by the late famine, the super flitious Hindoos, inflead of cultivating their lands. flew to the fhrines of their gods. Though ner ther an enthusiast, nor even attached to any system of religion, he was enraged at their neglect of the means of subfiftence, for the uncertain relief to be obtained by prayer " They have a thou fand gods," faid he, " yet the thousand have not been able to guard them from famine This army of divinities, continued he, " inflead of being beneficial to their votaries, distract their attention by their own numbers, and I am therefore de termined to expel them from my empire ' These were the words of Shaw Jehan, when he figned an edict for breaking down the idols, and for demolishing the temples of the Hindoos measure was impolitic and in the event, cruel. The zealous followers of the Brahmin religion rofe in defence of their gods, and many enthu fiasts were massacred in their presence. Shaw Jehan faw the impropriety of the persecution, he recalled the edict, and was heard to fay " That a prince who wishes to have subjects, must take them with all the trumpery and bawbles of their religion."

Soon after this infult on the superstition of Brahma, letters were received at court from Casim Chan, governor of Bengal. Casim complained Cuba of to the emperor, that he was very much disturbed con plains in the duties of his office by a parcel of European of he Portugueze idolaters, for fo he called the Portugueze, who had been permitted to establish themselves at Hugley, for the purposes of trade; that, instead of confining their attention to the business of merchants, they had fortified themselves in that place, and were become fo infolent, that they committed many acts of violence upon the subjects of the empire, and presumed to exact duties from all the boats and veffels which paffed by their fort. The emperor wrote him in the following laconic manner: " Expel these idolaters from my dominions." The feverity of this order proceeded from another cause.

When Shaw Jehan, after the battle at the Nir- Their inbidda, found himself obliged to take refuge in Shaw Jethe eastern provinces, he passed through Orixa han into Bengal. When he arrived in the neighbourhood of Dacca, Michael Rodinguez, who commanded the Portugueze forces at Hugley, paid him a visit of ceremony. Shaw Jehan, after the first compliments were over, requested the affistance of Rodriguez, with his foldiers and artillery; making large promises of favour and emolument, should he himself ever come to the possession of the throne of Hindostan. The governor faw the desperate condition of the prince's affairs, and would not grant his request. He had the imprudence to add infult to his refufal, by infinuating, that he would be ashamed of serving under a rebel, who had wantonly taken up aims against his father and sovereign. Shaw Jehan was silent; but he victory, face in the field. The war was protracted for two years. Judger Singh maintained every post to the last, and he yielded in one place, only to retire with accumulated fortitude to another. Aurungzêbe, though but thirteen years of age, displayed that martial intrepidity which distinguished the rest of his life. could not, by the influence of Nuserit, be restrained in the camp: he was present in every danger, and shewed an elevation of mind in the time of action, which proved that he was boin for tumult and war.

1044

1633 Hig

Hig

The last place which remained to the Raja was His mifhis capital city; and in this he was closely befieged bravery He was hemmed in on every fide by the Imperial army; and the circle grew narrower every day. Resolution was at last converted into despair. His bravest foldiers were cut off: his friends had gradually fallen. The helpless part of his family, his women and children, remained He proposed terms, but his fortunes were too low to obtain them. To leave them to the enemy, would be dishonourable, to remain himself, certain death to him, but no relief to them. He set fire to the town, and he escaped through the flames which overwhelmed his family A few hoisemen were the companions of his flight, and Nuserit followed close on their heels for two hundred miles. The Raja at last crossed the Nirbidda, and penetrated into the country of Canduana

The unfortunate prince was, at length, over- and death come with fatigue. He came into a forest, and finding a pleafant plain in the middle, he refolved to halt, dieaming of no danger in the center of an impervious wood. Both he and his followers alighted, and, tying their horses to tiees, betook then selves to rest. A barbarous race of men possessed the country round. They had not seen the Raja's troop, but the neighing of his horfes led some of them to the spot Looking from the thicket into the narrow plain where the fugitives lay, they perceived, to their aftonishment, a number of men richly dreffed, fleeping on the ground, and fine horses standing near, with fur niture of filver and gold The temptation was too great to be withflood by men who had never feen so much wealth before They rushed upon the strangers, and stabbed them in their sleep While they were yet dividing the spoil, Nuserit came The 10bbers were flain, and the head of the Raia was brought back to the army, which Nuferit had left under the command of Aurungzêbe In the vaults of the Raja's palace were found to the value of three millions in filver coin, in gold, and in jewels, which Aurungzebe hid at the feet of his father, as the first fruit of his victories He was received with uncommon demonstrations of joy and Nuferit, for his fervices, was raifed to a higher rank of nobility

the

156

Marn gen of th S114

During these transactions, all remained quiet at court The emperor applied to public bufiness, is and nor was he forgetful of pleasure. Though dur ing the life of the Sultana, his affections were confined to her alone, he became diffolute after her decease The vast number of women whom he kept for state in his haram, had among them many enchanting beauties He wandered from one charming object to another, without fixing his mind on any, and enjoyed their conversation, without being the dupe of their art. The daugh ter of his brother Purvez was now grown into marriageable years, and he gave her to wife to his eldest fon Dara, whom he destined for the throne. Suja, his fecond fon, was at the fame time married to the daughter of Rustum Suffavi of the royal line of Perfia. The ceremonies of thefe these two marriages were attended with uncommon pomp and leitivity: eight hundred and fesenty-five thouland pounds were expended out of the public trea ury alone, and the nobles contended with one another in expensive entertainments and frews.

Though the jealoufy of the emperor prevented Moh Let Mohabet for some time from taking upon himself Cokonda. the Subaship of Chandeilly, and command of the army on the frontiers, that lord was at lad permitted to retire to his government. His active genius could not remain idle long. Diffatistie I with the conduct of his prodecessor Fracti, had carried on the late unfuccessful war in the Decan, he found means of renewing holdities with the Nizàn. He led accordingly the Imporial army into the kingdom of Golcond. The Nizâm was no match for that able general in the field, and he shut himself up in the citadel of Doulatabâd. Mohâbet sat down besore it, but for the space of fix months he could make little impression upon it, from it, uncommon strength and fituation.

the

The cuadel of Dowlatabad is built on a folid 1 les rock, almost perpendicular on every side, which bad rises one hundred and forty yards above the plain. The circumference of the outcrmost wall is five thouland yards, the thickness, at the foundation, five, the height fifteen The space within is divided into nine fortifications, separated by strong walls, rifing gradually above one another toward the center, by which means each commands that which is next to it beneath. The entrance is by a fubterraneous passage cut from the level of the plain, which lifes into the centre of the inner fort, by a winding stair case. On the outside, the entrance is fecured with iron gates; the top of the stair-case is covered with a massy grate, on which a large file is kept during a fiege.

A D

1044

fought on horseback against an elephant, in the presence of the emperor and the whole court, and by his dexterity killed that enormous animal. The whole empire rung with his praise, and the action was celebrated in verse by Saib Seliin, the best poet of the age. The prince Suja, naturally high-spirited and jealous, shewed violent figns of discontent at the preference g ven to Aurungzêbe. He began to look upon his younger brother as defigned for the throne, and his haughty mind could not endure the thought. He wished to be absent from a scene which gave him uneafiness, and he prevailed on Mohâbet to write to the emperor, requesting that he should be sent to him to the Decan Shaw Jehan confented Suja was created an Omrah of five thoufand horse, and, having received fixty thousand pounds for his expences from the treasury, he took leave of his father.

Dara, the Imperial prince, highly referted the Jeriousv honours conferred on Suja He hunself had his of Dara. therto remained at court, without either office or establishment. He complained to his father with great vehemence, and the latter endeavoured to footh his fon, by infinuating, that from his great affection for him, he could not permit him to take the field, and that, in the palace, there was no need of the parade of a military command. Dara would not be satisfied with these reasons; and the emperor, to make him eafy, gave him the command of fix thousand horse. The prince, however, could not forget the prior honours of Suja. He was told that Mohâbet designed that prince for the throne, and there were fome grounds for suspicion on that head Had Shaw Jehân had a ferious defign of favouring Suja, he could not have fallen upon more effectual means of ferving him, than by placing him un-

The Prince Supa arrived in the Imperial army in the Decen, while Mohabet was yet fettling the affairs of the conquered dominions of the Nix im The general received him with all the diffraction due to his birth, and foon after put Signhis troops in motion toward Felhagana enemy fortook the field, and betook themselves to their firong holds. Mohibet fat down before Bizida, but the garrifon defended the place with fuch obflinacy, that the laperialists made little progress. The warm valour of Supreould not brook delay. He attributed to the inactivity of Mohibet, what proceeded from the bravery of the calmy, and the flrength of the place. He raifed by his murmuring a diffention between the officers of the army. Mohabet remonstrated against the behaviour of Suja, and gave him to understand, that he himself, and not the prince, commanded the troops. Supr was obfu-Mohibet lent e preses to court, and the prince was recalled. He was enraged beyond measure at this indignity. but it was prudent to obey. He left the camp, and Mohabet, falling fick, was obliged to raife the fiege. He returned to Brampour, and his diforder having increased in the march, put a period to his life in a very advanced age

Mohábet was one of the most extraordinary Demand characters that ever sigured in India. Severe in of Noble disposition, liaughty in command, rigid in the bet execution of his orders, he was feared and respected, but never beloved by an indolent and esfeminate race of men. In conduct he was unrivalled, in courage he had sew equals, and none in success. In the sield he was active, daring and intrepid, always in perfect possession of his own mind. His abilities seemed to rise with the occasion; and Fortune could present nothing

A D. 1635 1 18 1041in battle which his prudence had not forefeen In his political character, he was hold in his re folves, active and determined in execution his own foul was above fear, he was an enemy to cruelty: and he was so honest himself, that he feldom suspected others. His demeanor was lofty and referred. his manner full of dignity and grace he was generous and always fincere He attempted high and arduous things, rather from a love of danger than from ambition, and when he had attained the lummit of greatnels, and might have refled there, he descended the precipice, because it was full of peril Jehangire owed twice to him his throne, once to his valour. and once to his moderation, and his name gave the emptre to Shaw Jehan, more than the friend thip of Aliph 12h

Anecdo es

Notwithstanding the great abilities of Moha bet. he feemed to be fensible of his own merit. and confeion of his importance in the flate was punctilious about rank, and would upon no occasion give place to the visier, who would not relinquish the precedence which he derived from his high office. The dispute was carried so high between these two great men in the beginning of the reign of Shaw Jehan that it was agreed they thould not come to court on the fame day The emperor did not chuse to interfere in the contest they were both his benefactors, both were powerful in the state, and it would not be prudent to disoble e one, by giving preference to the claims of the other He, however, was at last prevailed upon to decide in favour of Afiph And he made hu excuse to Mohabet, by laying, " That in all civilized governments the fword fliculd yield to the pen Mohabet fubnutted, but he avoided ever atter, as much as possible, the ceremony of appearing publicly in the prefence of the emperor.

ΑD

These disputes, though they did not break out into an open rupture between the visier and -Mohâbet, were the source of a coldness between him them. Shaw Jehân was at no pains to reconcile them. He was unwilling to throw the influence of both into one channel, and by alternately favouring each, he kept alive their realoufy. Mohâbet had a numerous party at court; and they had once almost ruined the power of Asiph by recommending him to the emperor, as the only fit man for settling the affairs of the Decan commission was ordered without his knowledge, but he fell upon means of turning the aitillery of the enemy upon themselves He persuaded the emperor that Mohabet only was fit to conduct the war; at the same time that he made a merit with that general, of transferring to him a government the most lucrative and important in the empire.

The emperor, upon the death of Mohâbet, se-Embasse parated the command of the army from the go-to the Us-vernment of the Decan Islam Chan became general of the forces, with the title of paymastergeneral, and the Subaship was conseired on Chan Zimân, the son of Mohâbet In the beginning of January 1635, Tirbiet Chan returned from his embassy to Mahommed, prince of Balick. That lord had been fent to Mahommed to demand redress for the incursions of his subjects into the northern provinces Mahommed excused the infult, in submissive letters, accompanied with prefents; the most valuable of which, to a prince of Shaw Jehân's amorous disposition, was the young and beautiful Malika Shadè, the daughter of Mahommed Sultan, lineally descended from Timur. The emperor received this northern Vol. III. T beauty

1515 HE I'm peror returns to

Aera

beauty with excess of joy, and foon forgot the invasions of the Usbecs in her charms

Shaw Jehan, after his return from Cashmire, continued for fome time at Lahore that city on the 27th of January, and arrived at Agra on the 23d of March, 1635 the daughter of Purvez, and wife of the Impe rial prince Dara, was brought to bed, on the way, of a fon, who received the name of Soliman She ko from his grandfather. Great rejoicings were made upon the birth of the prince, and the em peror, upon the occasion, mounted a new throne. formed of folid gold, emboffed with various figures and fludded with precious flones throne had been feven years in finishing, and the expence of the jewels only amounted to twelve hundred and fifty thousand pounds of our money It was afterwards distinguished by the name of Tuckt Taous, or the Peacock Throne, from having the figures of two peacocks standing be hind it with their tails foread, which were stud ded with jewels of various colours to represent the life Between the peacocks flood a parrot of the ordinary fize, cut out of one emerald The finest lewel in the throne was a ruby, which had fallen into the hands of Timur when he plun dered Delhi in the year 1398 Jehangire, with peculiar barbarity, diminished the beauty and luftre of the stone by engraving upon it his own name and titles, and when he was reproved for this piece of vanity by the favourite Sultana, he replied, "This stone will perhaps carry my name down further through time, than the empire of the house of Timur

Promoti ons.

The feltival on account of the birth of Soli man was fucceeded by various promotions at court Aurungzebe was created an Omrah of five thousand horse, and the visier was raised to the high dignity of captain-general of the Imperial forces. Shaw Jehân was not altogether disinterested in conferring this honour on Asiph. He paid him a visit in his own house upon his appointment, and received a present of sive lacks of roupees; which he immediately added to the sum of one million and an half sterling, which he laid out in the course of the year on public buildings, and on canals for bringing water to Agra.

the

A D.
1635
Hig

SHAW JEHAN

CHAP 111

Emperor s expedition to the Decan-Reduction of that country-Death of Chan Ziman-An infurredion in Behar-Quelled-Candabar reflored to the enpire-Invalion from Affam-Reduction of Tibet-Oppressive governors punished-Prince Suia narrowly escapes from the flames of Rajamabil-An embalir to Conftantinople-Calamities in the northern provinces-Death and character of Ahob 711-Tirbiet punified for oppression-An inva fron threatened from Perfia-Interrupted by the death of Shaw Sefi

ΥD 1616 The em ror reives to ovade the Decan.

SHAW JEHAN, whether most prompted by avarice or by ambition is uncertain formed a resolution to reduce the Mahommedan sovereign ties of the Decan into provinces of the Mogul empire. The conquests made by his generals were partial They had laid wafte, but had not subdued the country, and when most successful, they imposed contributions rather than a tribute on the enemy Even the creat abilities of Mohâbet were not attended with a fuccess equal to the fanguine hopes of the emperor, and all his profpects of conquest vanished at the death of that able general Shaw Jehan, though addicted to the enervating pleasures of the haram, was rouzed by his ambition to mark his reigh with fome splended conquest, " For it is not enough," he said, " for a great prince to send conly to his posterity the dominions which he " has received from his fathers" The thought was more magnificent than wife. To improve the conquelts of his fathers with true policy, would be more uleful to his posterity, and more glorious to himfelf, than to exhauft his strength in violent efforts to extend the limits of his empire. He however had determined on the measure, and the advice of his most prudent Omrahs and counfellors was defpised.

A D

1636.

On the first of October, 1636, he set out from He setsout Agra with his usual pomp and magnificence. from A-Dowlatabad was the point to which he directed his march; but his progress was politically flow. He had given orders to the governors of the provinces to join him with their forces as he advanced; and the distance of many of them from the intended scene of action, required time to bring them to the field. The prince Aurungzêbe attended his father on this expedition, and was highly in favour. He proposed, with a youthful ardor which pleased the emperor, to take a circuit with the Imperial camp, through the province of Bundela, to view the strong holds which he himself, under the tuition of Nuserit, had some time before taken from the unfortunate Judger Singh. The emperor had not as yet collected a force sufficient to ensure success to his arms, and to gain time, he listened to the request of his fon. The whole of the year was passed in premeditated delays, and in excursions of hunting, so that the emperor did not arrive in the Decan till the latter end of the rainy season of the 1637 of the Chissian æra.

1618 Hir TOUR He lava walle the enems .

country

The Subas of the different provinces had, with their troops, joined the emperor on his march His force was prodigious when he entered the bor ders of the enemy On his arrival at Dowlata bad, he was able to form twelve different armies. which, under twelve leaders, he fent into the kingdoms of Buapour and Tellingana The princes of the country had collected their forces. but they knew not to which quarter they should direct their march. The Imperialifts formed a eircle round them and war was at once in all parts of their dominions. The orders of the emperor were barbarous and cruel He fubmit ted the open country to fire, and garrisons that refished were put to the sword "War is an evil," " and compassion contributes only to he faid render that evil permanent " The eastern writers describe the miseries of the Decan in the peculiar hyperboles of their diction "Towns and cities," fay they, " were feen in flames on every fide, the hills were shaken with the continual roar of artillery. and tigers and the wild beafts of the defart fled from One hundred and fifteen towns the rage of men and caftles were taken and destroyed in the course of the year The emperor fate, in the mean time aloft in the citadel of Dowlatabad, and looked down, with horrid joy, on the tempest which he himfelf had raifed around which fubmits.

The devastations committed by the express or ders of the emperor, had at last the intended ef fect on the fovereigns of Tellingana and Bija Shut up in their strongest forts, they could not affift their fubjects, who were either ruined or maffacred without mercy around them They proposed peace in the most humble and sup-plicating terms Shaw Jehân took advantage of their necessities, and imposed severe conditions

They were established, by commission from the emperor, as hereditary governors of their own dominions, upon agreeing to give a laige annual tribute, the first payment of which was to be made at the figning of the treaty. The princes besides were to acknowledge the emperor and his fuccessors lords paramount of the Decan in all their public deeds, and to defign themselves, The humble fubjects of the empire of the Mo-

A D 1638 1018

The neaty being figned and ratified, the em-Emperor peror left his son Aurungzêbe under the tutton Almere. of Chan Zimân, the son of Mohabet, at the head of a confiderable force, to awe his new subjects In the strong holds which had fallen into his hands during the war, he placed garrifons, and having left the Decan, took the route of Almere. the eighth of December, 1638, he arrived in that city, and visited the shrine of Moin ul Dien, more from a defire to please the superstitious among his courtiers, than from his own devoti-He had not remained long at Ajmeie when the prince Aurungzêbe arrived, to celebrate his nuptials with the daughter of Shaw Nawaz, the fon of Asiph Jah. The visier, who had remained during the war at Agra, to manage the civil affairs of the empire, came to join the court at Ajmere, accompanied by Morâd, the emperor's youngest son, and was present at the splendid festival held in honour of the mairiage of his grandson with his grand-daughter.

Soon after the departure of Aurungzêbe from Death of the army in the Decan, Chan Zimân fell fick and Chan Zidied. His death was much regretted by the whole empire. Calm, manly, and generous, he was esteemed, respected, and beloved. He was posfessed of all the polite accomplishments of the gentleman: he was a brave general, a good statesman.

A D 1638, Hig 1049 statesman, an excellent scholar and a poet Under his original name of Mirza Amani, he published a collection of his poems, which are still in high repute for their energy and elegance over all the East. The emperor was so sensible of the high merit of Chan Zinnan, that he sin cerely lamented his death and spoke much in his praise in the hall of the presence, before the whole nobility. "We did not mis? said he, "the abilities of Mohabet, till we lost his son? Aurungzebe received immediate orders to repair to the Decan, and to take upon himself the sole command of the Imperial army, stationed in the conquered provinces."

Infurrec tion in Be

During these transactions in Ajmere, the revolt of the Raja of Budgepour happened in the province of Be ar The emperor detached a part of the army under Abdalla to suppress the infurrection Abdalla at the same time received a commission to govern Behar in quality of Suba-He attacked and defeated the Raja on his first arrival, and that unfortunate prince, whose love of independence had made him overlook his own want of power, was reduced to the last extremity He shut himself up in a fortress which was invest ed on all fides When a breach was made in the walls and the orders for the affault were issued. the Raja came out of his castle, leading his chil dren in his hand. He might have been par doned, but his wife appearing behind him fealed She was extremely handsome, his doom Abdalla, though old himfelf, withed to grace his haram with a beautiful widow. The unfortunate Raja, therefore, was put to death on the spot as a rebel Candahar c livered up to the empire. The news of the defeat and death of the Raja of Budgepour scarce arrived at court, when Shaw Jehan received an agreeable piece of intelligence

from

Hig

from the northern frontier of the empire. The feeble administration of Sefi, who succeeded Shaw Abas in the throne of Persia, had thrown the affairs of that kingdom into confusion. Ali Murdan commanded in the forticles of Candahar. His fidelity was fuspected; and, besides, he saw no end of the troubles which distracted his country. He resolved to save himself from the malice of his enemies, by delivering the city to the eniperor of Hindoltan, from whose hands it had been wrested by Shaw Abas. A negociation was therefore set on foot by Ali Murdan with Seid Chan, the governor of Cabul His terms were only for himself Seid closed with him in the name of his fovereign. He fent his fon in haste with a force to Candahâr, which was delivered by Ali Murdan, who fet out immediately to pay his refpects to his new fovereign.

Sefi no fooner heard of the treachery of Ali Persians Murdan, than he issued orders for a force to march from Chorassan to retake Candahâr. This expedition was under the conduct of Seahôsh. That officer appeared before the city with feven thousand horse, but Seid, who commanded in the place, fallied out with an inferior force, and totally defeated the Perfians, for which fignal fervice he was raised, by the name of Ziffer Jung, to the dignity of fix thousand horse. Gulzar, the governor of Moultan, was removed to Candahâr; and as a general war with Persia was apprehended, the prince Suja was dispatched with a great army to the province of Cabul. Before Gulzâr arrived at his new government, Seid following his victory over the Persians, penetrated into Seistân Bust, Zemindawir, and other places fell into his hands; and all the district which had formerly been annexed to the govern1/38 11 # 1048 Ali Mur

dan re

worded

ment of Candahâr, was reduced to subjection by

The emperor was fo overjoyed at the recovery of Candahâr, that he received Ali Murdan with every mark of esteem and gratitude. He was raised to the rank of fix thousand horse, with the title of captain general of the Imperial forces, and invested with the government of Cashmire. The ferrice he had done was great, but the reward of treachery was extravagant. Ali, however, feemed to possess abilities equal to any rank Bold, provident and ambitious, he grasped at power, and when he had obtained it, he kept it during his life by management and intrigue. His generosity rendered him popular, and before his death he is said to have numbered sixteen thousand families of Asgans, Usbecs, and Moguls, among his clients and dependants.

Invalion from Af fam

The most remarkable transaction of the year 1638, next to the recovery of Candahar was an invasion of the province of Bengal by the Tartars of Askm They rushed down the river Burram puta in armed boats, to where it falls into the Ganges, below Dacca. They plundered fome of the northern diffricts and made themselves mas ters of feveral small forts Islam, governor of Bengal, hearing of the invalion, marched against the enemy with all the Imperial troops stationed in the province. They had the folly to come to action with the Suba, and he gave them a fignal defeat Four thousand were killed on the foot. and five hundred armed veffels fell into the hands of the conqueror The remaining part of the invaders fled, and the governor purfued them into their own country Fifteen forts, with the king of Affam's fon in law fell into his hands The whole province of Cochegi was reduced, and he invaded that of Buldive The latter was very obstinately defended. Few passes led into it, being environed with mountains. The Suba at last forced the passes, and the enemy sled to the hills.

The fovereign of Buldive did not long furvive Registron the reduction of his country. Worn out with fatigue, haraffed with grief, and tormented with vexation, he was feized with a contagious distemper, which infected his family, and carried him and them off in a few days. His people, however, would not quit their hills. The enemy fpread devaltation over the plana below, and the unfortunate Assimites beliefd from the woods the finoke of their burning towns. But the unbounded ravages of Islam occasioned his retreat. The grain was inadvertently destroyed in the fire which confumed the towns of Buldive, and a scarcity of provisions began to be felt in the Imperial camp. Islam marched back with the spoils of Assam, but he suffered incredible hardships from the badness of the roads, the torients which fell from the hills, and a distemper, which the rainy feafon, now come on, had raifed in the army. The kingdom of Tibet was, at the faine time, reduced by Zisser. The news of this double conquest came at the same instant to the emperor. He was greatly pleased with the success of his aims, as none of the Mahommedan princes, who had reigned before him in India, ever penetrated into those countries

The eleventh year of the reign of Shaw Jehân Death of Mah-Racommenced with the death of the Mah-Raja, in prince of the Rajaputs. He was succeeded in the throne by his fecond fon Huslinet Singh, it being the established custom of the branch of the Relaputs called Mahrattors, to leave the sceptie to the disposal of the sovereigns by their latter will. The Rajaputs, properly so called, did not acquiesce

A D 1638 Hig 1049 quiesce in the right of Hussiane. He had an elder brother, and they adhered to him. The slames of a civil war were kindled, but the emperor in terfered, and, after having examined the claims of both the princes, he confirmed the Raja's will in favour of Hussianet, whom he raised to the rank of sour thousand horse. His elder brother, who was deprived of all hopes of the throne by the decision of the emperor, was also created an Om rah of three thousand.

Peace with

The infult which Persia received through the invasion of its territories by the Mogul governor of Candahar, did not raise any spirit of revenge in the court of Ispahan The debility in the councils of Sefi brought on a peace between the empires Shaw Jehan had disnatched Sifder Chan his amhaffador to the court of Persia lord returned this year from Serifa, where Sefi refided, with a prefent of five hundred horfes, fome curious animals, and various manufactures of Persia, to the value of five lacks of rounees Sifter executed his commission to much to his master's satisfaction, that he was raised to the dignity of five thousand horse. The chief condi tion of the treaty of peace between Perlia and Hindoftan was, an entire cession of Candahar by the former in favour of the latter

De th of Aixil the n peror a preceptor The winter of the year 1637 had been remark able for a great fall of snow in the northern provinces of India It extended as far as Labore, and in the mountains of Cabul and Cashmire, many villages, with all their inhabitants, were overwhelmed and destroyed The emperor in the mean time, kept his court at Lahore. Peace being established on every side, he applied him self to the management of the civil government of the empire He issued many falutary edicts for the security of property, the improvement of the country.

A D

1638

country, and the encouragement of commerce. In the midst of his cares for the good of the state, he was afflicted with the death of Afzil Chan, a man of great literary talents, who had been his preceptor. The young princes were also educated under his care, and they mourned him as a father. He had been raised to the first honours of the empire. He obtained the rank of feven thousand, and the management of the civil affairs of the empire were in a great measure in his hands. The emperor, to show his great veneration for his abilities, allowed him an annual revenue of three hundred and feventy-five thousand pounds

Soon after the death of Aszil, the princes Dara Dira and and Suja were raised to higher ranks of nobility. moted Dara was dignified with the title of an Omrah of ten thousand horse, and ten thousand foot; and Suja with the rank of feven thousand horse and as many of foot. The emperor having frequently declared his intentions of leaving the throne to Dara, gave him always the first place in dignities and power. He shewed an inclination of habituating his other fons to a submission to Dara; and whatever marks of superior affection he might bestow on his younger sons in private, in public he directed his principal attention to the eldest. Aurungzêbe was not at court when his brothers were promoted Averse to idleness in his command of the army in the Decan, he made an incursion, under pretence of injuries, into the country of Baglana. The forts fell into hands, and the chiefs submitted to a tribute, but the sterility and poverty of those regions did neither answer the expence of the war, nor that of keeping the possession of the conquered country. He therefore evacuated the places which he had taken, and depended for the tribute on the future fears of the enemy. Having brought back the army within the limits of the empire. Air rungzube who was realous of the influence of Dara with the emperor, requested leave of abfence, and came to Lahore, where his father at the time relided

A 11 16.7 11... 210

Sum made

The prince Suia, who had been fent with an t Bene Larmy to Cabul, when a war with Perfin was apprehended, had for fome time remained in that city His wife dying, he returned on the twenty third of June, 1638, to Labore, where he was married with great pomp and folemnity to the daughter of Azim Complaints having been fent to court against Islam, governor of Bengal, he was removed from his office, and Suia was ordered to proceed, with a commission, into that kingdom, to restore the civil regulations which had been ruined by the rapacity of Islam Abdalla, governor of Behar, had also fallen under the empe rors displeasure for some oppressions which he had exercised in the execution of justice Iehân, who was a fevere justiciary, would not even have his representatives in the provinces suf nefted of partiality in the distribution of the laws He heard the complaints of the poorest fubjects, from the most distant corners of the empire, and the influence of the first men in the flate was not fufficient to protect the delinquents from his refentment. He was, therefore, beloved by the people, and reverenced and feared by the great An Imperial order was issued to Abdalla to appear in the presence, to give a public ac count of his administration, and Shaista, the fon of the visier, was raised to the government of Behar Abdalla had the good fortune to clear himself of the aspersions thrown on his character by his enemies, and he was fent, with a confi derable force, against insurgents in the province ٥f of Bundala, and some Rajas, who, from their

of Bundela, and some Kajas, who, from them A 1)
hills, made depredatory incursions into Behâr

Abdalla no sooner arrived in the place of his Hg to abdalla no sooner arrived in the place of his he governdestination infested the country, fled precipitately Excellent so their no their no sooner arrived in the place of infested the ment of to their nal homes. Some examples of justice the empetheir fever at homes. Some examples of juntee me upon those who fell into the hands of the Imperor rialists, cover all the empire. The attention of general of or to the improvement of his dominions, the emperor rial execution of justice, his exact the emper rival execution of justice, his exact oppressive mode of collecting the rendered his people happy and his revenues, ourishing. A lover of pleasure himself, thou was a considerable market for the his haram finest mark for the made for, and the ample provision made for, and a court where mage made for luster of princely courts, where magcapital a and elegant luxury prevailed in the ex-nificence le divided his time between the hall of audien the patience; he decided with precision plaints will and equit hefs, he dived into the elegant and fewith busin ments of his women, who, being the natives of lety of charms.

natives of tety of charms.

eyes a vari

Suja, the Bengal, narrowly escaped with his life, gal de arrival in which broke out in the capital of the throyed by

from a fire Many of his fervants, and some of the throyed by province. Many of his lervants, and following the women of the whole Tajamahil sof the Ganges joined iffue with the flames.

1019 1116 1019 flames in its destruction. The ground on which it stood was carried away by the river, and no thing now remains of its former magnificence, except some wells, which, as the earth on which they were fund, has been carried away by the stream, appear like spires in the channel of the river, when its waters are low

Ali Vint da pomarch

Alı Murdan, who, for the delivery of Canda har to the emperor, had been gratified with the government of Cashmire, returned to court at I ahore on the cighteenth or October No com plaints against his administration having been pre ferred in the hall of audience, he was received with distinction and favour To reward him for the equity and justice of his government, he was raised to the government of Punjab with a power of holding Cashmire by deputy Murdan took immediate possession of his new of fice, and the emperor fignified to his fon Aurung zobe that his presence in the Decan was necessary, to superintend the affairs of his government, which, in the bands of deputies, might fall into confusion, from the distance of the conquered provinces from the feat of empire.

Present of a market of the Ottoser n emaperor when Aurungzebe fet out for the Decan, the emperor refolving upon a tour to Cassimire, moved the Imperial camp northward from La hore. Whilst he amused himself in that beautiful country. Mahommed Zerif whom he had some time before sent ambassador to Constantinople, returned to court. Morad, who at that time held the Ottoman sceptre, had received Zerif with every mark of respect and esteem. The empires having no political business to settle, the embassy was chiefly an assault of compliment, with a request to permit Zerif to purchase some sine horses in Arabia. Morad not only granted the required favour, but even gave to the ambassador several feveral horses of the highest blood, with furniture of folid gold, fludded with precious flones, as a prefent to Shaw Jehan. The emperor was highly pleafed with the reception given to his ambaffador, and he was charmed with the beauty of the horses. On the seventeenth of February, 1640, he set out for Lahore, the business of the empire requiring his presence nearer its centre

AD. 1640 Hig 1049

When he was upon the road, a productous Calamifail of 1am laid the whole country under water. tous foods. No dry fpot was left for pitching the Imperial tent; and he was obliged to fleep for feveral nights in a boat. His army were in the mean time in the utinost dillieis. Their horses without provender; and they themselves destitute of provifions. Four thousand families were swept away and drowned by the river Behat. On the banks of the Choshal the destruction was greater still ven hundred villages were carried away, with their inhabitants, and every day brought fresh accounts of disasters from other parts of the country, through which the branches of the Indus flow. When the waters began to fubfide, the emperor haftened his march. The scene which prefented itself to his eyes as he advanced, was full of horror. Boats were feen flicking in the tops of trees, the fish were gasping on dry land, the bodies of men and animals were mixed with the wreck of villages, and mud and fand covered the whole face of the country. He was fo much affected with the misery of his subjects, that he issued an edict for the remission of the taxes for a year, to the countries which, had fuffered by that dreadful calamity. He also made donations from the public treasury to many of the farmers, to enable them to maintain their families; and, continuing his journey, arrived, on the first of April, at Lahore.

Vol. III.

During

A D 1610. Die 1010 Buff for prifed and tersken

During these disasters on the banks of the Indus. Bult was furprifed by the Persian governor of the province of Seiftin Gulzar, who com manded for the empire in Candahâr, detached a part of the garrifon under his lieutenant Leinf Chan, to retake the place He formoned Buff upon his arrival but the Perfians refused to fur-He began his approaches, and, after a fmart fiege, in which his vigilance, activity, and courage did him great honour, he took Buft The garrison were made prisoners, and Leitif. purfuing the advantage which he had obtained. made incurious into Seiftan, and carried off great boots, with which he returned to Candahar The debility of the councils of Persia suffered this affront to pair without revenue

An am 1 (Fador from Con ff ntinoы

In the summer of the year 1640. Arfelan Ara. who had accompanied Zerif from Conftantinople. as ambassador from Morad, had his audience of leave of the emperor. He was prefented with twelve thousand pounds for the expences of his journey home, and he was charged with mag nificent prefents for his mafter. News at the fame time arrived at court, that the oppressions committed by Azim governor of Guzerat, had occasioned an insurrection at the head of which. the two chiefs Jami and Bahara, appeared Azim. noffeffed of an immense revenue soon raised a force. which, in the end reduced the infurgents, but all the money which ought to have been remitted to the treasury, was expended in the war The empe ror was enraged at his conduct. He deprived him of his government, and ordered him to repair to court to give an account of his administrati His friends interceded in his behalf. The emperor was inflexible till a fair coufin of Azim. who was retained in the Imperial haram, threw berfelf at his feet, and not only obtained the par don of the governor, but even his reinstatement ın in his former office. After he had passed his word in favour of Azim to this weeping beauty, he commanded her never more to appear in his piclence: " For," faid he, " I will not have my > justice perverted by my weakness."

Hig 1051

Morâd, the fourth fon of the emperor, was The prince now in the leventeenth year of his age. Like diffinhis brothers he was high-spirited and a lover of guillier An opportunity offered which fuited his himfelf disposition Tagenat Singh, a prince on the confines of Marwar, who was a subject of the empire, revolted, and isluing from his native mountains, spread devastation through the neighbouring plains. The active spirit of Morad slew before him. He outstripped the news of his coming by his expedition, furprifed, defeated, and purfued the prince to his fort of Tara Cudda, in which, aftei a smart siege, he was taken, but pardoned, upon conditions. The emperor was pleafed with the vigour which he discovered in the soul of Mo-

râd, and he received him upon his return with great distinction and affection

The death of the visies Asiph Jah, in the se-Doubles venty-second year of his age, was the most ie-the visier markable event of the succeeding year. daughter Moina Bánu, the fifter of the favourite Sultana, and wife of Seif Chan, the high-steward of the household, died a short time before her father and his giref for her, as he was worn-out with business, infirmities, and age, seems to have hastened his death, which happened on the twentieth of November He was born in Tartary, many years before his father Aiâss quitted that country to push his fortune in Hindostan, and he did not leave the place of his nativity, till the affairs of his father affumed a very favourable aspect in the court of the emperoi Akbai. The merit of Aiass raised himself to the first offices of the state, and his fon was not of a disposition to relinquish the advantages which his family had gained Habituated to business under his father, he succeeded him in the office of visier, and managed the af fairs of the empire with great address during the remaining part of the reign of Jehangire The active part which he tool to fecure the empire for Shaw Jehan, met with every return of gratitude from that prince, who, foon after his accession. raised him to an office superior in dignity to that of vifier, called Vakiel Mutuluck, or absolute minister of the empire The emperor, who had the fincerest affection for his daughter, the mother of fo many princes and princesses, distin guished Asiph in his conversation with the title of Tather He dignified that minister at the same time with many pompous titles. In public deeds he was fivled. The Strength of the Realm, the Protector of the Empire, the Powerful Prince. the Lord of Lords, the revered Father of Wif dom the Leader of Armies, in rank great as Asipit, and a I ion in War

A D

He lea es his fostune to prince Dara.

Though three fons and five daughters furvived the visier, he adopted his grandson Dara, the Imperial prince, and constituted him heir to all He excused himself to his sons. by faving, that he had already raifed them to bigh ranks and employments in the state, and that, if they conducted themselves with prudence and wisdom, the favour of the emperor would be to them an ample fortune " But, should Folly be the ruler of your conduct, ' continued Afiph, " you do not deserve to possess the wealth which I have acquired by my fervices' There was prudence in the conduct of Afiph upon this occa-The emperor loved money, and he might have availed himself of the law, which constitutes the prince the heir of all his officers, and a dif pute pute of that kind might prove fatal to the influence and interest of the family of the visier. He, however, divided, before his death, three hundred and feventy-five thousand pounds among his children and servants. Dara, in terms of his will, took possession of the bulk of his fortune, which in coin, in jewels, in plate, elephants, and horses, amounted to near four millions sterling, exclusive of his estates in land, which, according to the tenures in India, reverted to the crown.

1641. Hig 1051

Though the abilities of Afiph Jah were little His chaknown under the wife and able administration of racter his father, they broke forth with luftre when he himself came into the first office in the state was a great orator, a fine writer, an able politician. In his private character, he was mild, asfable, humane, generous; in his public, severe, reserved, inflexible, exact He never excused negligence; he punished disobedience His orders, therefore, were no fooner issued than they were executed, his very nod was respected, understood, and obeyed. He was possessed of political as well as perfonal courage; as little afraid of the unjust reproaches of his friends, as he was of the weapons of his enemies; and he was often heard to fay, "That he who fears death is unworthy of life." He was uniform in his conduct, impartial and dignified in his actions, confiftent with himfelf. He courted not popularity by his measures: justice, propriety, and the ultimate good of the state, and not the applause of the vulgar, were his objects in all his decisions. He was fit for the field, as well as adapted for the cabinet, and had he not gained renown with the pen, he would have commanded it with the fword. In his youth, he was addicted to poetry. He wrote upon heroic subjects, and the fire of his genius was such, that the very found of his veise animates the soul

A D. 1611 1117 1051 to war The glory and happiness of Irdia during his long administration were great, and when war raged on the frontiers, the interior 'provinces enjoyed uninterrupted peace. The field in which he moved was extensive, but his eye comprehended the whole. An eastern witter continues the metaphor, and says, "That he rendered that field sourishing and fruitful He passed through it with reputation and lustre, and when he fink into the grave, a cloud of forrow obscured the sace of the empire."

Hi fns

The original name of the eldeft fon of Afiph was Mirzi Morad He was dignified afterwards with the title of Shaifta Chan, and he was governor of Behar at the death of his father He poffeffed not the abilities of his family, being of an infirm and fickly conflitution, with a delicate, rather than a vigorous and active mind Mirza Mifti, the fecond fon of Aliph, was a youth of great hopes, vigorous, active, and full of fire He loft his life in a drunken frolic, for being one day at the river Behat in Cashmire, when it foam ed over its banks he spurred his horse into the fiream, by way of bravado and, for his temeri ty, was drowned Mirza Hussein the third fon of the visier was a man of moderate abilities and his fourth fon, who had been dignified with the title of Shaw Nawaz, was a nobleman of great reputation and high distinction in the em pire

I flice of the mpe

The emperor, jealous of the influence which the governors of the provinces might acquire by a long continuance in their offices, made a practice of removing them every third year. When the news of any opprefilion committed by them ar rived at court, they were inflantly superfeded, and, upon examination, if found guilty, diselled of all their honours, and confined. The punish ment

1640 Hig

1052.

ment of death feemed to have been laid aside from the commencement of this reign. I'irbiet Chan was, this year, ordered back from the government of Cabul, for his leverity in exacting the revenue from the poor. The emperor himself had been a witness of the miscrable condition to which the people of that province were reduced, by the floods in the rivers Chohal and Behât, and they had not yet recovered from that grievous calamity. They were unable to pay their rents, and Tirbiet submitted them to the rigouis of military execution. He was divested of his honours as well as of his government, and the emperor issued money from the treasury to relieve thirty thousand of the inhabitance, whom the exactions of Tirbiet had reduced to want member," faid the emperor to his robles, "that when you are too fevere on my people, you only injure me; for it is but just I should pay for losses occasioned by my wrong choice of officers, to govern the provinces of my empire" Ali Murdan was appointed to the government of Cabul, in the room of Tirbiet. He was fucceeded in that of Cashmire, by Ziffer. Complaints had been received against the prince Aurungzêbe from the Decan. His father ordered him to the presence, to answer to the charge, which he did to satisfaction, and was forthwith reinstated in his government

The cruelty of Shaw Sesi of Persia had crowd-Persian ined hitherto his reign with tumult and misfortune threaten-The empire suffered in its consequence with fo-ed reign powers, during years which Sefi diffinguished only with the blood of his subjects. intentions against Ali Muidan lost him the strong fortress of Candahar, and he took no measures to revenge the infults which he received on his frontiers, after that place had fallen into the hands

A D 1642 111_K 1051

186

hands of the Moguls The tumults of the Perfians were at length quelled in their blood, and Sefi, having deftroyed his domeftic enemies, turned the strength of the field, and collected a great army, he took the field, and

Pev nted by th death f Shaw Seli moved toward Candahar with a professed design to retake that city The news of the motions of the Persians was brought by express to the court of Agra emperor was alarmed He gave a commission to the Imperial prince Dara, to command an army of fifty thousand men The troops were soon ready, and the prince took the route of Cabul Thirty thousand men, stationed on the frontiers, flocked also to the standard of Dara, upon his arrival at Cabul Morad, the emperor's fourth fon, was posted with twenty thousand men be hind the Nillb, with orders to reinforce, in case of a requisition for that purpose, the army of Dara But these formidable preparations were, in the event, unnecessary Sefi, to the great joy of his fubiects, fell fick and died The war, which was begun by him was dropt, with his other measures, by his successor The Persians retreated, and Dara and Morad returned to their father who still kept his court at Lahore. Morad, foon after his return to the prefence, married a daughter of Shaw Nawaz, the fon of the late visier Asiph

Affairs at

The emperor, who took pleasure in managing in person the affairs of his empire, created no visier upon the death of Asiph. That lord's deputy in office, without any rank or title, managed the business of the department and by a special commission, countersigned all public edicts. Aliverdi, governor of Punjab, who resided at Lahore, which had formerly been the capital of his government, had the imprudence to speak contemptiously of this mode of transacting the public public business. He said, That the emperor, from extreme avarice, endeavouring to fave to himfelf the usual appointments bestowed on visiers, had thrown disgrace upon his own administration. made no fecret of his sarcasms; and they were carried to Shaw Jehân He sent for Aliverdi, and faid to that lord: "You do not like, I am told, my mode of governing my fubjects, and therefore Aliverdi shall not assist in an adminiftration which he does not love " He was immediately divested of his government and honours, and dismissed with ignominy from the presence. The prince Morâd was raifed to the vacant government; and, having received magnificent presents from the emperor, set out for Moultan. The emperor, in the mean time, assisted at a grand festival, which he gave to his court, upon opening the new gardens of Shalimar, which had been begun in the fourth year of his reign. The gardens were laid out with admirable tafte; and the money expended upon them amounted to the enormous fum of one million sterling.

A D. 1642. Hig 1052.

SHAW JEHAN

CHAP IV

Residens—Emperor arrives at Agra—Incidents at court—Incursions of the Ushecs—Aurungzehe removed from the Dican—Sadulla Chan made visiter—Buduchshan invaded by the Moguls—Death and character of Noor Jehan—Balick reduced—Prince Morad disgraced—Aurungzehe defeats the Ushecs—Who submit to the empire—Emperor jealous of his sour-Arrival at Delbi—Persians take Candabár—Aurungzehe besieges it in vain—Defeats the Persians—Ushecs of Balick claim the Emperor s aid—Candabár again besieged to no pursose—Emperor returns to Agra—Provistions

If 42 Hig 1052. Reflecti In absolute governments, the Despot is every thing, and the people nothing He is the only object of attention, and when he sits in the midst of tranquillity the page of the historian languishes in the detail of unimportant events. His hall of audience is a court of summary justice. His decisions are rapid, and they are generally impartial, is his situation has placed him beyond the limits of sear and of savour. But there is a sameness which never pleases, in the transactions of a government whose operations run through once one unchangeable channel, and has for this realen only we pals lightly over the more peaceable years of the reign of Shaw Johan. In these he acted in the character of a judge, a mere determinator, if the word may be used, of differences between individuals, and it must be confessed, that he had abilities to lee, and integrity to do what was right.

ICes

Lahore, during the former reign, had been Emperor confidered is the capital of the empire, and the gives the most tested refidence of the prince Jeliangire, whole lungs were week, without to breathe in the free an of the north, and the improvemeats which he made in the pilace and gardens, had rendered. Lahore the most convenient and beautiful, if not the most magnificent of the lmpenal refidences. Shaw Johan, however, whose attention to the affairs of the empire was always uppermost in his mind, thought Lahore too distant from the fouthern provinces, which, on account of their wealth, were the most important division of his dominions. He therefore reloved, there was a prospect of permanent tranquillity on the northern frontier, to remove his court to Agra, where he arrived in the month of November. The cavalcade which attended his progress, was magnificent and numerous beyond description. The armies returned from the north were in his tiain, and half the citizens of Lahore, who, from his long residence in that place, were become in a manner his domeflics, accompanied him on his march. He pitched his tents in the gardens of his savourite wise, Mumtaza Zemâni. The tomb of that princels was now finished at a great expence; and he endowed with lands a monastery of Fakieis, whose business it was to take care of the tomb, and to keep up the perpetual lamps over her shrine.

Nothing

THE HISTORY OF HINDOSTAN Nothing material happened during nine months

after the emperor' arrival at Agra. The public

A D 1643
H g 1053 Applies to the public buliness

100

bufinels, which had been neglected through the alarm of the Persian war, took up a part of his time, and pleafure appropriated to itself the rest Several beautiful acquifitions had been made in the haram, and the emperor's attention to the execution of juffice was interrupted by his love for women A fon was in the mean time born to Dara, the Imperial prince Shaw Jehan, who loved his fon, gave a magnificent festival upon the His posterity began to multiply apace. A fon was born to Aurungzehe, whom he named Mahommed Mauzim, and Morad had this year a daughter, whom he called Zebe ul Niffa, or, The Ornament of Women. The emperor, in the course of the year, made an excursion to Aimere.

An acci-

and after he returned to Agra. Dara was feized with a violent fever, which endangered his life The emperor a alarm for Dara was scarce subfided, when a dreadful accident happened to his eldest daughter, whom he loved above all his Returning one night from visiting her father to her own apartments in the haram, the unfortunately brushed with her clothes one of the lamps which stood in the passage. Her clothes caught fire, and, as her modelly, being within hearing of men, would not permit her to call for affiftance, the was fcorched in a terrible manner She rushed into the haram in flames, and there were no hopes of her life. The emperor was much afflicted. He gave no audience for feveral days He distributed alms to the poor, he opened the doors of prisons, and he for once, became devout, to bribe Heaven for the recovery of his favourite child He. however did not in the mean time neglect the common means Alla, the most famous physician of the age, was brought brought express from Lahore; and the Sultana, though by flow degrees, was restored to health.

1053

The princess had scarce recovered, when the emperor himself escaped from imminent danger. The brother of the Maraja, whose name was Amar Rashness Singh, having rebelled against the decision of and death of Amar Shaw Jehân in favour of his father's will, was Singh. defeated by a detachment of the Imperial army, and fent prisoner to court. When he was brought into the emperor's presence, he was forced, by the lords in waiting, to make the usual submissions, and the emperor pronounced his pardon from the throne, defiring him at the fame time to take his place among the lords, in the rank which had been conferred upon him on a former occasion. He accordingly took his place; but being a young man of a proud and ungovernable spirit, he burnt with rage at the late indignity, as well as at the past injury, done him by the emperor, in preferring to him his younger brother. He drew his dagger in fecret; and rushed furrously toward the throne. Sillabut Chan, the paymaster-general of the forces, threw himself before Amar, who plunged his dagger in his body, and stretched him dead at his Chilulla, Seid Sallâr, and feveral other lords drew immediately their fwords, and flew the Hindoo prince on the fpot. The emperor, who had descended from his throne with his sword in his hand, ordered the body to be dragged out of the hall of audience. A number of his followers, feeing their master dead, fell upon the guards, and fought till they were cut off to a man.

The Usbecs, who had for a long time remain-Incursions ed quiet, made an incursion this year into the ter- of the Ufintories of the empire. They were led by Kuli the general of Mahommed, king of the Wellern Usbecs. Alı Murdan, governor of Cabul, marched out and defeated the invaders. He folvond the hims of the empire, ravaged their country as far as Balick and returned with a confiderable boots. The news of the victory arrived at Agra on the day that another for was born to Dara the Imperial prince. The emperor e pressed his fatisfaction on this double occasion of joy, by refloring Abdalla, his own former friend, to the dignities of which he had been deprived on account of his milmanaccinents in the government of the province of Behar Ab dalla, however, did not long enjoy the good change in his fortune. He died in the eightieth year of his age, having been fixty years a noble of the empire At the time of his death, he was possessed of the dignity of fix thousand horse. He had paffed through all the various viciflitudes of fortune. He was engaged in every war, and was unsucces ful in all, yet he was esteemed an able lowed his victory, and driving the fugures be

101

and aftive general had gained an afcendency over his mind in conversation, affable, polite and mild

Data by his constant residence with his father. prince wa free, generous and manly, pleafing emperor loved him as a friend, as well as a fon he listened to his advice and studied to please him He represented to his father, that it was danger ous to the repose of the empire to leave so long the management of the Decan in the hands of Aurungzebe I trust' favs he, " to my brother's honour but why should the happiness of the emperor depend upon the honour of any man? Aurungzebe possesses abilities, and his manner, and perhaps his integrity, has gained him many friends They in their ambition, may perfuade him to things which, without their advice, he would abhor The army he com mands are, by habit, accustomed to perform his pleafure.

pleasure, and are attached to his person. What if they should prefer the spoils of the empire, to their watchful campaigns on our frontiers? Ale the troops, debauched by the loofe manners of the capital, fit to cope with men inused to aims? To foresee danger is to no purpose," continued Dara, " unless it is prevented. It is my part to advise my father and sovereign, his to do what he pleases: but to remove Aurungzébe from the government of the Decan, is to remove temptation from that prince. If he is that devout man he pretends to be, he will thank Heaven for being deprived of the means of committing crimes."

A D 1645 Hig. 1055.

The emperor was fensible of the justice of Reflections observations, and he complied with his emperor. request. He was naturally fond of his children: he liked their spirit, and loved their aspiring genius. He was, however, too prudent not to foresee the disturbances which were likely to 11se from even their good qualities. His affection, when they were young, prevented him from following the policy of other Despots, by shutting up every access of knowledge from their minds. and to keep them at court after they had commanded armies and provinces, would be a perpetual fource of animofity between them, and of uneafiness to himself. He was heard often to fay, "I have the fons I wish; yet I wish I had no fons" But hitherto he had no just reason to complain: they kept on apparent good terms with one another, and they implicitly obeyed his commands.

Orders were sent to Aurungzêbe to remove to Aurung-Ahmedabâd, the capital of Guzerat, where he into Guze-should find a commission to govern that province. rat The prince obeyed, and Chan Dowran, who had lately been governor of Cashmire, was advanced to the superintendency of the conquered provinces, and to the command of the troops stationed on the fouthern frontiers of the empire. Dowran did not live to enjoy his high office, being affaf finated by one of his domestics, whom he had punished for some crime Sixty lacks of roupces, or about feven hundred and fifty thousand pounds of our money, were found in coin and jewels in The emperor was his heir as he had amassed his fortune in his fervice. He had been governor of feveral provinces, and he possessed

THE HISTORY OF HINDOSTAN

gult of the year 1645 nade vi

the rank of feven thousand horse in the empire When the news of his death came to court, Islam Chan was appointed his fuccessor, and that lord fet out for his government, in the month of Au The emperor, it has been already observed, did not appoint any fuccessor to Asiph Jah in the high office of viller Sadulla, the chief fecretary of Aliph, who was acquainted with the bulinels of the empire, transacted the duties of the office without the name. He was a man of abilities His experience in his department recommended him first to the emperor, and when he came to know him better he esteemed him for his inte grity He was fent for one day to the presence, and the emperor, without previously acquainting him of his design, delivered to him the seals of the empire and at the fame time presented him with a patent, for the dignity of five thousand horfe Whilst these things are transacted at court,

Alı Murdan, governor of Cabul continued his incursions into the dominions of the Usbecs took the fort of Shermud in Buduchshan, and fome other strong towns When the winter came on, he retreated into his province, and took that opportunity of paying his respects to the emperor,

1645 Hig

1055

AD. 1645

Hig

1055

emperor, who, upon his return from a tout to Cashmire, had stopt at Lahore. Shaw Jehân approved of his incursions, and recommended to him to continue the war. Ali returned to Cabul, and led his army to the north in the beginning of the spring. He took the direct road to Balick; but the enemy, turning his rear, cut off both his fupplies and his communication with Hindostan. They, at the same time, laid waste their own country, by carrying off or destroying the grain and cattle. All thought it prudent to retreat; but the Usbecs had retaken the forts which had, when he advanced, fallen into his hands. a fecond time laid fiege to Shermud; and, having forced it to furrender, he established posts along the skirts of Buduchshân, and then returned An ambassador, charged with rich presents, was dispatched this year to the court of Persia, to congratulate Shaw Abas the Second, upon his accession to the throne.

The emperor had not been returned to Lahore Death and many days, before the famous Noor-Jehân, the character favourite Sultana of his father Jehangire, died in Jehan her palace in that city. Twenty-five thousand pounds had been annually paid to her out of the treasury; and, as her power ceased with the death of her confort, she was too proud even to speak of public affairs, and she, therefore, gave up her mind to study, retirement, and ease. The extraordinary beauty of her person has been already mentioned; we shall now delineate the features of her mind. Her abilities were uncommon; for she rendered herself absolute, in a government in which women are thought incapable of bearing any part. Their power, it is true, is fometimes exerted in the haram, but, like the virtues of the magnet, it is filent and unperceived. Noor-Jehân stood forth in public, she Vol., III. broke scarce a gairsson within the walls. Having left detachments of his army in the conquered countries, he moved toward the frontiers of the empire; and waited there for orders of recal.

Y D 1646

The emperor having fixed his mind upon the Morad complete conquest of Buduchshan and Balich, disgraced. had no intention of withdrawing his army from these provinces. Morâd became impatient wrote letters to his father He pretended want of health, he faid he disliked the country, and he earnestly requested leave to return. Shaw Jehân, knowing the real state of his fon's health, was much offended at his request. He commanded him to remain in the north, to fettle the country according to the instructions given to him, and not to attempt to enter the dominions of Hindostan without orders. Morâd having a violent inclination to be near the capital, in case of his father's death, and preferring the rich and fertile provinces of the fouth to the sterile regions of the north, obstinately disobeyed the emperor, left the army, and returned to Cabul. His father refented this undutiful behaviour. He formally divelled him of the government of Moultân, and of all his dignities, without admitting him into his presence. He at the same time issued an edict, which banished Morad to the mountains of Pelhawir Sadulla the visier was sent to settle the affairs of the north.

The fugitive prince Mahommed having arrived Prince of at Ispahan, was treated by Shaw Abas with great the Usbecs to friendship and respect. He received at different Peria times four lacks of roupees, for his lublitlence. He, however, could obtain no aid. His applications were counteracted by the aml affador of India, and, belides, the Perlian was not fond of war. The bad fuccess of Mahommed foured his temper. He have diffespectfully of Shaw Abis

1647. Hig.

1057

the women were treated with the decency and respect due to their quality.

Aurungzêbe, who was fond of action, posted with great expedition to Balich. He took the command of the troops upon his arrival; and he Aurungwas informed that the enemy were, by that time, against advanced to within a few miles of the place. He them furveyed the works, and made temporary repairs; then devolving the command of the garrison upon Raja Mado Singh, he marched out against the Usbecs with the troops which had flocked in to his standard from the untenable posts in the province. Bahadur, of the Rohilla tribe of Afgans, commanded the vanguard. Ali Murdan was stationed on the right wing, and Ziffer on the left. The prince himself, after having marshalled the field, took his post in the center. The enemy, feeing the good order and firmness of the Moguls, declined, for that day, to come They, however, skirmished with small parties, whilst the main body retreated. coming on, Aurungzêbe lay on his arms.

When day-light appeared, the prince formed He comes his line of march, and purfued the Usbecs. veral detachments of the enemy hovered round, and infulted him from time to time, whilst others turned his rear, and began to plunder a part of his baggage: the main body, in the mean time, began to form in his front. The prince detached parties from the line, who drove the flying squadrons of the enemy from the field. He then drew up his forces in the same order as on the preceding day; but Ziffer, from exerting himfelf too much, was feized with a violent fever, and obliged to devolve his command on his fon. He fcarce had retired, when Abdul Aziz advanced upon the Imperialists with his whole force. Ziffer again mounted his horse, and when he returned

1057-

The Usbec was at the last overpowered, and driven off the field with great flaughter. Aurungzêbe thought himself in possession of a complete victory; but the battle was not yet over. The enemy took a circuit round the right, where All was restoring the line of his broken squadrons, and fell upon the rear of the Imperialists. The vanguard had retired thither after the commencement of the action, and formed a line round the artillery which had been little used. Abdul Azîz attacked them with great violence, and drove them from the guns Bahadur, who commanded the vanguard, rallied them, and fuftained the charge till Aurungzêbe came up in full speed from the line. Abdul Azîz was again repulfed with great flaughter, and the remains of the Usbec army quitted the field in disorder.

The prince, after the action was over, advanced and takes and took possession of the enemy's camp. It was camp now dark; and fuch an impression had the valour of the enemy made upon the Imperialists, that even the flight of the vanquished could not convince them of their victory. A panic feized the victors, frequent alarms disturbed the night, and, though fatigued and wearied, they lay fleepless upon their arms. Moining appearing convinced them of their error, and discovered to them how much they had done, by the number of the flain. Ten thousand lay dead on the field. Many officers of distinction fell on the Imperial fide, and Aurungzêbe justly acquired great reputation from the fortunate end of fuch an obstinate battle.

The Usbecs, under their gallant leader, being They are frustrated in their designs on Balich, by the sig-driven nal victory obtained over them, fell upon the duchstain province of Buduchshân Despairing of conquering that province, they laid it waste, and filled

their

1/49

confisted in his undeviating attention to business, and he gained the affections of his prince, by making him believe, that he was the fole fpring which moved all the affairs of his own empire. The vanity of Shaw Jehân induced him to wish that every thing was done by himfelf; and the prudent visier did not, by his obvious interference, deprive him of the reputation which he strove to On the fame day that Sadulla was promoted to the government of Behai, the prince Morâd was raised to that of the Decan. peror, though fond of his fon, distrusted his natural impetuofity and fire: he therefore committed the charge of the army on the fiontiers to Shaw Nawaz, the father-in-law of Morad himfelf. Without the confent of this lord, Morâd was not to attempt any thing of material concern to the empire. Though the Imperial ambassador, who had been Persians accession to the throne, had been well received at Ispahan, the court of Persia had not relinquished their pretentions to the city of Candahar. The arrangements necessary to restore the kingdom to order, after the tyranny of Shaw Sefi, had hitherto engaged their attention; and the numerous armies employed by Shaw Jehân on his northern frontiers against the Usbecs, rendered it imprudent to break with him, till they were withdrawn. After the pacification with the prince of Balich, the greater part of the Imperial army had been removed to the fouth, and a fair field was left for the defigns of Shaw Abas monarch accordingly, in the year 1648, marched with a great force toward Candahâr, but the news of his preparations for the expedition had been previously carried to Lahore. Shaw Jehân, who had arrived in that city toward the close of

fent to congratulate Shaw Abas the Second on his dahar

A D. 1640

Hig

1065

action. The shock was from wing to wing; and the contest was long and bloody. The prince owed the victory which he obtained to the bravery of Rustum, one of his generals, who commanded the referve, confifting of two thousand horse. Rustum, when the prince was on the point of quitting the field, fell on the enemy fword in hand, and threw them into confusion. Aurungzêbe, in the mean time, restored his ranks, and returned to the charge. The Persians sled, and were pursued twenty miles beyond the field; and the prince returned, with unexpected glory, to the emperor, who fet out foon after the arrival of his fon for Agra.

The Usbec Tartars beyond the Oxus, taking Usbecs apadvantage of the debilitated state of Nidder Ma-ply for aid. hommed, who had not recovered from the blow given to his power by the conquest of his country by the Imperialists, invaded the dominions of that prince. Mahommed applied, in the character of a vassal, to the emperor, who was so well pleased with this mark of his submission, that he sent him a very confiderable fum of money, which was the principal thing wanted. The efcort fent with the treasure to Balich, conveyed his women and children to Mahommed; but two of his fons, Chufero and Byram, who had been created nobles of the empire, remained from choice in India. Many marks of the emperor's favour were conferred on the family of Mahommed. An honorary dress was given to each, together with a considerable sum of money. Nor had their education been neglected. Masters had been appointed to teach the young princes; and the daughters were instructed in the suitable accomplishments of their

The prince Morâd, as before related, had Morad rebeen sent, under the tuition of his father-in-law, from the

Into Decan.

A D 1/51 Hig 1067 into the Decan Proud, haughty, and full of fire he could not bear, with patience, the con troul of that lord He possessed abilities, and he knew it, and he confidered it as an insupportable hardfup to have the name, without the power of government He, upon many occasions, ne blected the counsel given him by Shaw Nawaz . but at last he added insult to contempt you not,' faid he one day to his father in law. " that even you, who attempt to command me. are, by the Imperial commission, sulted to my government Behave yourfelf, therefore, as the humble adviser, not as the proud dictator of my Shaw Nawaz was enraged at this diffesect, and he wrote letters of complaint to the emperor, who, without further examination, removed his fon from the government of the De-He, however, conferred upon him that of Cabul, and removed Alı Murdan to the go vernment of Callinute.

Aurung be be firges

Morad, impatient in every flation, did not long keep the government of Cabul Aurung zebe, by the command of the emperor made preparations for re commencing the siege of Candahar Morad, instead of assisting him with the troops stationed in his own province threw every obstacle in his way, and pretended that the necessary service required all the troops under his command lo Aurungzebe s commission for taking his choice of all the troops in the northern provinces, his brother opposed his own commission for the absolute command of the forces in Cabul Aurungzêbe wrote the emperor, and Morad was ordered into province of Malava Upon his removal his brother collected an army The vilier joined him with fifty thousand horse from the south, ef corting five hundred camels loaded with treafure to pay the army, five hundred with arms, and two thousand with other warlike stores. The retaking of Candahâr engrossed so much of the emperor's attention, that he himself made a progress to Cabul to support the besiegers. Channa-Zâd, the son of Asiph Jáh, was upon this occasion raised to the office of paymaster-general of the forces. Prince Suja came from his government of Bengal to pay his respects to his father, soon after his arrival at Cabul took up a considerable time. Aurungzêbe did in vain not appear before it, till the month of January 1652. He invested the place on all sides, and began to make his approaches in form. But his gunners were bad, and his engineers, if possible, worse. The fiege continued two months and eight days, without any impression being made on the city All the warlike stores were at length exhaulted, the army was discouraged, from feeing no end to their toil. The prince was ashamed, and the positive orders of his father recalled him to Cabul. Shaw Jehân, after all his expence and idle parade, returned, without having effected any thing material, to Agra. that city his first business was to promote his children and nobles to honours and governments. Solimân, the fon of Dara, was raised to the dignity of leight thousand horse, and sent to the government of Cabul. Aurungzêbe was ordered back to the Decan. Dara, who held Guzerât by 'deputy, was removed to Moultan. Suja returned to Bengal, and Shaista Chan, one of the sons of the late visier, was promoted to the government of Guzerât, in the room of Dara

16,2 H ; 1062

The preparations for the ficge of Candahâr Candahar

SHAW JEHAN

CHAPV

Dara's scalousy of Aurungzebe—His bad success before Candabár—Rayed to a part of the Imperial power—Rebellion of the Rana—Rise and character of Jumla—Death of the where—War in Golconda—Exploits of Mahammed the son of Aurungzebe—War and reduction of Bijapour—Sickness of the emperor—Too great wipline of Dara—Emperor removes to Agra—Recoveri—Dara in high savour—Carries all before him at coart

Dara s jezhoufy of Au sungrebe.

1

THOUGH Shaw Jehan, by his great attention upon every occasion to Dara, had convinced his subjects of his design to appoint him his succes for in the throne, that prince was jealous of the growing reputation of Aurungzebe. The latter, in his frequent expeditions at the head of armies, sound various opportunities of gaining friends, by the places of honour and profit which he had by his commission, to bestow, and he was not of a disposition to relinquish by negligence, the in sluence which he had acquired by favours. Cool, subtle, and self-denied, he covered his actions with such an appearance of honest sincerity, that men.

men imputed his attention to their own merit, and not to his defigns. The penetrating eye of his father had pierced the veil which he had thrown over his ambition, but the implicit obedience which Aurungzêbe paid to all his commands flattered him into a kind of oblivion of his former observations on the duplicity of his character. Dara had carried his jealoufy of Aurungzêbe into a kind of aversion to his person. He envied him when fuccessful; and he triumphed over his misfortunes: but his exultation was as fecret as his hatred, as both proceeded from fear, a passion which his foul disdained to own.

Aurungzêbe having twice miscarried in his at- His unsuctempts on Candahar, Dara wished to gather lau-podition rels where his rival had failed. He applied to against Candahar. his father for an army: infinuating, that the bad fuccess which attended his brother, proceeded from his want of knowledge and conduct. very large fum was issued from the Imperial treafury; and the army and artillery in the provinces beyond the Indus were fubmitted to the command of Dara. That prince invested Candahâr. fiege continued five months, without any impreffion being made. The stores were at last exhausted, the troops were dispirited, and Dara found himself under the necessity of retreating with loss of reputation Shaw Jehan was filent upon the occasion, and even Aurungzêbe, who triumphed in fecret over Dara's disappointment, attributed, in his conversation, this fresh miscarriage to the strength of the place, more than to his brother's want of abilities in war.

The unsuccessful expedition to Candahâr did He is son not shake the emperor's design in favour of Dara appointed He forefaw the tumult and disorder which were successfor likely to arise from the ambition of his younger emperor. fons after his death; and he resolved to habituate Vol. III. them,

AD. 1652 Hig

A D 1652

Hig.

1062.

Sadulla the visier, to chastise him for his insolence, and to demolish the works. The Hindoo prince hung out the flag of defiance, and the vifier invested Chitôr. Parties were at the same time detached on all sides to lay waste the open coun-The refractory prince had not the spirit necessary to support his rebellion. He sent, on the eleventh day, to Sadulla a most submissive overture of peace. The minister referred him to the emperor, who still remained at Aimere; but that monarch would not receive the letters. Orders were fent to profecute the fiege with vigour; and to give no terms. The Maraja, in this extremity, found means to convey a present to Da-That prince foftened his father's refentment; and the Maraja, upon paying the expence of the war, was reinstated in his hereditary dominions.

The most memorable transaction of the year Rise and was the promotion of Mahommed Jumla, to the of Jumla. rank of five thousand horse. He was recommended to the emperor by the prince Aurungzêbe; and as he is to make a great figure in the fequel of the history, there is a propriety in premising something concerning his origin and gradual rise. Jumla was a Persian, born in Ardistan, a village in the neighbourhood of Ispahan. parents, though of fome rank, were extremely poor: he, however, found means to acquire some knowledge of letters, which circumstance procured for him the place of clerk to a diamond merchant, who made frequent journies to Gol-In that kingdom he quitted his master's fervice, traded on his own account, and acquired a confiderable fortune, which enabled him to purchase a place at the court of Cuttub, sovereign of In that station he behaved so well Tellingana. that he attracted the notice of his prince, who raised him to a considerable rank in the army.

 ${f Y}$

His

was great, but the destruction was immense. The avarice of the Imperialists was defeated by their fury. The flames moved quicker than depredation; fo that except filver, gold, and jewels, which neither the rage of men nor of fire could destroy, nothing of value remained to the conquerors.

Hig 1056

Cuttub, from this scene of slaughter, tumult and deand ruin, fled to the old city of Golconda, which king of flood about fix miles from Hydrabad. A number Goiconda. of his troops and many of the citizens followed their fovereign. Mahommed immediately invested Golconda. Cuttub, in his distress, resolved to try the fortune of the field. He accordingly marched out with fix thousand horse, twelve thoufand foot, and a great rabble of half-armed men, to give battle to the Imperialists. The affair was foon decided. Cuttub was defeated, and the enemy entered the city at his heels. The horrors of war were renewed in every form. Mahommed waded through blood; Cuttub threw himfelf at his feet, but he was not to be appealed by fubmission. The unfortunate prince at length produced his beautiful daughter, Rizia, to the victor, and he sheathed his sword. He married her in form, and a magnificent festival was held to celebrate the nuptials. Mirth was mixed with forrow, and pageants of joy with the folemn funerals of the dead.

Mahommed, after finishing with more good Returns to fortune than reputation the war with Cuttub, re-Brampour. turned to his father, who resided at Brampoui. Aurungzêbe wrote a pompous account of the fuccess of his son to the emperor, and that monaich raised him to the rank of eleven thousand horse. Shaista, the son of the late visier Asiph, was second in command in the expedition against Hydrabâd; and he, as a reward for his services, was dignified

A D

1657. Hig

1067

the Imperial forces, on his return from Agra to his province of Cashmire. His defection from his sovereign, the emperor of Persia, and his delivering up the important fortress of Candahar, had highly recommended him to Shaw Jehan, and he had abilities to keep the favour which he had once acquired. The defigns of Shaw Sefi against his life, were a sufficient apology for his revolt from that prince, and the fidelity with which he ferved his benefactor, is a proof that necessity was the sole cause of his treachery. He was rather a dignified than a great character; more fit for the fatigues of the field than for the intrigues of the closet. He was a faithful servant to his prince, a constant and unshaken friend, an active and a gallant officer. A love of money, which did not amount to absolute avarice, was the greatest defect of his mind, but, were we to judge from the number of his dependants, he was possessed of a generous disposition. Being always absent from court in the government of various provinces, he had no opportunity for expending his vast income; and he therefore amassed great wealth. The emperor became the heir of his foitune, which, in money and jewels, amounted to one million eight hundred and feventy-five thousand pounds.

Intelligence of the march of Jumla flew before Fxpedihim to the kingdom of Bijapour. Ali, the visier Bijapour. of the deceased Adıl, who had raised the son of that prince to the throne, had foreseen the storm which was now gathering over his head. He levied forces; he fortified his dilmantled castles and towns. Jumla, in the mean time, advanced to Brampour. Aurungzêbe joined him with his forces, and, with his usual affected humility, pretended to submit himself to the command of his father's visier. That minister, however, was

A D 1657

Hig.

1067

been scattered there in the confusion. It took fire, and, communicating with the magazine, blew up the bassion, which was covered with people, and destroyed the greatest part of the garrifon, who had been drawn together into that place to oppose the enemy. The governor and his three fons were numbered among the dead. The affailants, in the mean time, fuffered confiderably from the explosion. The whole place was exposed. The Imperialists took advantage of the consternation of the surviving part of the enemy. A thick darkness, occasioned by the smoke and dust, covered Bider: Aurungzêbe rushed over the ruins; and when light began to appear, he found himself in the midst of the citadel. Though there was no resistance, death ravaged all around him; for even his authority could not appeale, for some time, the rage of the troops.

Ali, who had looked on Bider as impregnable, Adil Shaw had deposited in that city the greatest part of his young fovereign's wealth, and Aurungzêbe acquired an immense treasure as well as an unexpected reputation, from the capture of the place. The minister, though struck with the loss of his strongest fortress, did not give all his hopes away. He collected a numerous army of Abyssinian mercenaries under the walls of Kilburga; and placed the prince at their head. Aurungzêbe despised the enemy too much to march against him in perfon. He detached twenty thousand horse, under the command of Mohâbet, toward Kilburga; whilst he himself fat down before Kallian, which, after a fiege of a few weeks, fell into his hands. Mohâbet, in the mean time, came to battle with Alı, and defeated his mercenary army with great flaughter. Aurungzêbe himself arrived in the camp foon after the battle, and invested Kilburga, where the fugitives had taken refuge.

Kılburga

his constitution. The scene of ambition was not distant, and Aurungzêbe, who had opened his whole foul to Jamla, had concerted all his future measures with that lord Orders, in the mean time, arrived, for the visier to return to court. Having fworn fidelity and fecrecy to one another, the prince and the minister parted at the gates of Brampour.

On the seventeenth of September, 1657, Shaw Imperor Jehan was suddenly seized, in the city of Delhi, falls sich. with a paralytic disorder, accompanied with a violent strangury. He remained in a state of infensibility for several days, and all hopes of his recovery vanished. But by the copious bleeding prescribed by his physicians, he was at length relieved. His disorder, however, returned, though not with the fame violence, and, on the occasion, the customary edict for the remission of the taxes due for the year, when the life of the emperor is in danger, was issued, with the usual formalities. Large fums were, at the same time, given to the poor, and to Fakiers of reputed fanclity, for their prayers to Heaven for the recovery of Shaw Jehan. The mosques were filled with the devout; and the people in general expressed unfeigned grief at the danger of a monarch, under whose auspicious reign they had enjoyed protection and happiness. All business was suspended in Delhi. Silence prevailed over the whole place, except when that filence was broken by anxious enquiries concerning the emperor's health. Shaw Jehân was a stranger to the interest which he possessed in the hearts of his subjects, till he fell into a disease which was thought mortal by all

The emperor being by his disorder rendered Dara alincapable of giving any attention to business, the fumes the management of public affairs fell into the hands ment of Dara. His father had prepared for an accident

A D

Those, therefore, who will show the earliest zeal in my support, shall command my gratitude. Be explicit and open, as I always am, and refolve to continue faithful. Such of you as owe favours to my brothers, will not ferve me with zeal. Let them, therefore, in their prudence, retire to their houses. I want not their pretended fupport; and I will not bear with their intrigues in favour of others" The wishes of the prince were commands. The lords, who had estates in Bengal, in Guzerat, and in the Decan, the governments of Suja, Morâd, and Aurungzêbe, to avoid suspicion, confined themselves at home.

On the eighteenth of October, the emperor Emperor being much recovered of his disorder, was placed carried to Agra by his fon in a barge, which was ordered gradually to fall down the Jumna to Agra. army and court moved along the banks of the river, with flow marches, under the command of Dara, who, though he passed the most of his time with his father, spent the night always ashore. Several arrangements were made in the greater offices, during this progress. Chilulla was fent back to the government of Delhi, and Danismund was turned out of his office of paymaster-general of the Imperial forces. Amin, the fon of Jumla, had found means to recommend himself to Dara, and, notwithstanding that prince's aversion to his father, the son was raised to the vacant office of Danismund.

The tour from Delhi was recommended to the Recovere. emperor, for the re-establishment of his health, and he gradually recovered on the way. On the 16th of November, 1657, he arrived at a palace in the country near Agra, and he continued daily to mend, till the 7th of February, 1658, on which day he entered Agra in perfect health. The populace, who had exhibited their affection in filent forrow during his illness, crowded round him with tuinultuous joy His heart was opened at the shouts of his people, and he ordered con Inderable fums to be diffributed among the poorer fort The first thing he did after his arrival in the Imperial palace, was to enquire for Jumla. the late visier. He was, however, told that, during his illness, that lord had applied to him for leave to proceed to the Decan and that the leave had been granted. He fent for Dara. The prince appeared before him, and was feverely reprimanded, for dismissing so able a man from an office which demanded abilities Jumla,' fuld he, " must be disgraced, since vou will have it fo Dara is to be my successor in the throne, and the authority of the heir of the empire must not be diminished, by the resto ration of men whom he has difmiffed in his dif for Dara had bestowed great attention and care on his father during his illness. He fat often, for whole nights, by his fide, and watched the very motion of his eye, to supply him in all his wants When the emperor was at the point of death, the prince dropt unfeigned tears, and he could not suppress his joy when the first dawn of his father's recovery appeared But if Dara's filial piety was great, the emperor s gratitude was not less He exhibited to his son unbounded testi monies of his affection and regard. He raifed him to the honours of fixty thousand horse, and, in one day, gave him jewels to the value of one hundred thousand pounds, twelve hundred thou land in specie and an order upon certain reve nues to the amount of three millions more Three hundred Arabian horses, with rich furni tures, and a number of elephants were, at the fame time, bestowed on the prince by the lavish hand of his father. "He who prefers the life of an aged parent," faid Shaw Jehân, "to the throne of India, can never be fufficiently paid for his fihal prety."

A D. 1658. Hig 1068.

Though Dara laid down the name of autho-who carritv at the recovery of his father, his influence forehim at was equal to actual power Soliman Shekô, his court eldest fon, was appointed to the command of ten thousand horse, to suppress some disturbances in the province of Allahabad; his second son, Cipper Shekô, was raised to the government of Behâr, and Bahadur was fent as the deputy of the prince, to manage the affairs of the province The Rana, Jessevint Singh, who adhered to the interest of Dara, was raised to a higher degree of nobility. All means were used to attach the affections of the grandees to the heir-apparent. Jassier Chan, known long for his abilities, was placed in the high office of visier; Mohâbet was fent to the government of Cabul, on account of his hatred to Aurungzêbe; and the Rana, who had been faved from destruction at the intercesfion of Dara, was gratified with the rich and extensive province of Malava.

SHAW JEHAN

CHAP VI

Cause of the civil war—Character of the Emperor's fons—Dara—Suja—Aurungzehe—Morâd—Su ja takes the field—Descated by Solimān the son of Dara—Morâd rebels in Guzera!—Aurungzehe in the Decan—Marches to Brampour—Battle of the Nirbidda—Preparations and obstinacy of Dara—Opposes Aurungzehe—Totally deseated near Agra—Resseltions

A D.
1658.
H'g 1068.
Caufe of

SHAW Jehan, after a reign of thirty years of prosperity found himself suddenly involved in trouble and misfortune. The storm had been long gathering it was foreseen, but nothing could prevent it from falling. The emperor, with abilities for business, was addicted to plea sure, and, though he was decisive in the present moment, he was improvident of the future. His affection for his sons was the source of the cala mittes which shook his empire. Pleased with their promising parts when young, he furnished them with opportunities for exerting their talents in the cabinet, as well as in the field, and when they became, by their own merit, objects of public attention, it was dangerous, if not impract ticable, to reduce them into private stations.

A D 1658

The infettled system of succession to the crown had rouzed their ambition, and awakened their sears. They were to each other objects of terror, as well as of envy. They all looked forward with anxiety to the death of their father, and each saw in that gloomy point, either a throne or a grave. Then hopes and fears increased with their growing age. They had provided themselves against the important event of his demise; and when he was seized with what was deemed a mortal disease, they broke forth at once from that silent respect, which their reverence for the person and authority of a parent had hitherto imposed on their minds

The means of ambition, which their respective Views of ranks in the empire had placed in the hands of the emperor's fonsa each of the fons of Shaw Jehan, were great; but their boldness to carry their schemes into execution was greater still. High-spirited and intrepid, they wished for no object which their natural courage durst not attempt to obtain! they were born for enterprize, and though beyond measure ambitious, they loved danger more than power. Each was possessed of armies and of treasures: and, being rivals in fame as well as in influence, they lost all affection for one another, in the more violent passions of the mind. Dara, vested with his claim of primogeniture, as well as with his father's declaration in favour of his fuccession, construed the ambition of his brothers into rebellion. Sula, in possession of Bengal, was carried by his pride to the resolution of seizing the whole empire. Aurungzêbe covered his lineation of their respective characters.

Dara,

ambition with motives of religion; and the vehement Morâd arrogated all to himself by his courage. The figure which the biothers are to make in the succeeding scenes, seems to demand a deA D 1658. H g 1068

Ch rader of Dara

Dara, the eldest son of Shaw Jehan, was polite in his conversation, affable, open and free was eafy of access, acute in observation, learned, witty and graceful in all his actions. He pryed not into the fecrets of others, and he had no fecret himself, but what he disdained to hide. He came fairly upon mankind, he concealed nothing from them, and he expected that faith which he freely gave Active, lively, and full of fire, he was personally brave, and he forgot misfortune in the vehemence of his mind, which, neglecting past evils, looked forward to future good Though elevated with fuccess, he never was dejected by bad fortune, and though no be liever in a particular providence, he met with all the incidents of life as if they had been immove ably determined by Fate In his public character, he was fometimes morofe, frequently haugh ty, always obstinate, and full of pride. Self fusficient in his opinions, he scarce could hear advice with patience; and all he required of his friends was implicit obedience to his commands But, with this appearance of ill nature, he was in his disposition humane and kind, for though he was often passionate, his rage was not destruc tive, and it passed suddenly away without leaving a trace of malice behind In his private charac ter Dara wa, in every respect, unexceptionable He was an indulgent parent, a faithful husband, a dutiful fon When he returned at night to his - family the darkness which had covered his browthroughout the day, was dispelled his counte nance was lightened up with joy, and his whole conversation displayed a peculiar ferenity and be nevolence of disposition Though no enemy, from principle, to pleasure, he was naturally vir tuous, and he filled up his leifure time with fludy, instead of those energating indulgences, τ which render the princes of the East effeminate.

1658. Hig 1068

Suja was humane in his disposition, averse to cruelty, an enemy to oppression. In the execution of justice, he had no respect of persons but Of Suja when the natural tenderness of his disposition gave his mind a bias toward the unfortunate. Though honest, like his brother Dara, he was not so open and free. He never told a falsehood, but he did not always tell the whole of the truth He was more tranquil, more close and reserved than Dara, and he was more fitted for the intrigues of party, and that management which is necessary to direct the various paffions of men to one point. He was generous to his friends; he did not disdain to hear their advice, though he, for the most part, followed his own judgment of things. He was fond of pomp and magnificence, and much addicted to the pleasures of the haram. Graceful and active in his own person, he loved in women that complete symmetry of limbs which rendered himself the favourite of the sex, and he spared no expence in filling his feraglio with ladies remarkable for their beauty and accomplishments. In their fociety he spent too much of his time; but the warmth of his constitution did not make him neglect the necessary affairs of life. During his long government of Bengal, he won the affections of the people by the formers of his manners, and his exact and rigorous execution of juftice; and the country flourished in commerce and agriculture, under the protection which he invariably gave to industry. In battle he was brave; nor was he destitute of the talents necessary for a general, and we must attribute his misfortunes in the field to the effeminacy of his groops, more than to his own want of conduct

The

THE HISTORY OF HINDOSTAN

The character of Aurungzebe differed in every A D respect from those of his elder brothers Delli Hig tute of that graceful appearance of person which rendered them popular as foon as feen, he ac quired, by address, that influence over mankind, ng ébe which nature had on them bellowed In dilpoli tion ferious and melancholy, he established an opinion of the folidity of his understanding, even among those who had no opportunity of being acquainted with his great talents accommodating in his manner, he gained man I ind by flattering their pride, and he wrapt up his behaviour in fuch plaufibility, that they attribut ed his attention to their own merit, more than to his defigns. His common conversation turned always on trifles In affairs of moment he was rerved, crafty, and full of diffimulation Reli gian, the great engine of political impostors, he pro-fied in all its feverity With it he deceived tie week, and an ed into a kind of reverence for his person, the greatest enemies of his power Though not remarkable for humanity he did not natural ly detect in blood, but ambition was his darling passion, and before it vanished all the softer feelings of the sul Vear, which renders other tyrants cruel, had no place in his breast, but that provident caution, which wishes to shut up every access to danger, made him careless about the lives of his rivals. He had a particular talent for kindling diffensions among those who opposed his designs, and his art and cunning were more de

fiructive to his enemies than his fword of Morad, Morad, the youngest son of Shaw Jehan, was by constitution lively and full of fire. With too much levity for business, he gave up his time to mirth, action and amusement. He delighted in the chace, he was more sond of battle than of war In riding, in bending the bow, in throwing tho

1658 Hig 1068

AD.

the lance, he met with few that could equal him in the armies which he commanded; and he was more defirous of carrying the palm in the manly exercises of the field, than in the intrigues of the cabinet. He despised all cabals: he gloried in keeping nothing fecret. He thought it beneath his dignity to command mankind by ait, and he openly professed, that he distained to owe distinction to any thing but the fword. "To possess a throne by the will of a parent, to owe it to birth," faid Morâd, " is unworthy of a great prince; and had not my brother supported his pretensions to the crown by arms, I would disdain to wear it." In battle his foul was a stranger to fear; he was even an enthusiast in his love of danger, and flaughter was his favourite pastime. In peace he was mild, though proud, liberal, affable and But his very virtues were weakness, and his fate furnishes a melancholy proof, that an open generofity of spirit is never a match for hypocrify and deceit. His fplendid qualities, however, rendered him popular in the army, and Aurungzêbe, notwithstanding his superiority of parts, owed, at last, his success over Morâd, as much, at least to accident as to his known talents. Such were the illustrious competitors for the throne of their father.

Suja, who had possessed the government of Ben-Suja takes gal for many years, was the first who appeared in the field, upon receiving intelligence of the dangerous illness of Shaw Jehân. He excused his measures by the violence of Dara. He was informed, that he had nothing to expect from his brother should he possess the throne, but imprisonment, or even death, and he affirmed, that necessity had rendered rebellion lawful. The refources which Suja possessed, promised success to his enterprise. He had accumulated treasure, and

A D 1658 Hig 1058, and levied an army and, though his agent at court transmitted to him accounts of his father s recovery, he allected not to credit the intelligence. When he pitched his tent in the field, he issued out a manisesto, which bore that Shaw Jehân was dead, and that there were violent suspicious of Dara's being accessary to his death. Though he received letters from the hands of his father, announcing his recovery, he alledged that they were a forgery by Dara to amuse him, and to divert him from his intentions of revenging the death of the emperor on the parricide. The enemies of Dara contributed by their letters to make Suja persist in his resolution.

Oppoled by Soli man She

Dara had the earliest intelligence of the designs of his brother, and he made the necessary prepa rations against him. His fon Solinian, had march ed with ten thousand horse, to quell some disturb ances in the province of Allahabad Dara order ed a reinforcement to fall down the Jumna and to join Soliman. Raia lov Singh and Debere Chan commanded the detachment, and they had politive instructions, after joining the prince, to stop the progress of Suja to the capital with the The emperor, however repented of or ders procured from him by the violence of Dara He was averfe to a civil war, and he fent fecret directions to Joy Singh to endeavour to induce Sma to return to his government of Bengal Thefe directions were scarce dispatched to the Raja, when advices arrived at court that the prince Morad, who commanded in the kingdom of Guzerat, was proclaimed emperor by the army, that the receiver general of the Imperial revenues, in oppoling the usurpation, had been flain in battle, and that Morad, having negociated a confidera ble loan with the bankers of Ahmedabad, had comed money in his own name

The

The intelligence of this fecond rebellion haftened Suja in his measures. He wished to be the first of the competitors who should arrive at the capital, and he therefore moved his camp to Benâris. When he was bufy in constructing a Suji furbridge of boats for croffing the Ganges, Soliman prized in his camp, appeared in fight on the opposite shore with his A negociation was fet on foot with Suja by Joy Singh, and it was at last agreed, that the prince should return to his government and disband his army. The active spirit of Soliman did not relish this precarious pacification. Joy Singh, without his participation, had fettled the terms with Suja, and he did not think himself bound by a truce, in which he had no hand He changed his ground, and moved a few miles up the Ganges. The liver, by an extraordinary drought, was remarkably low. Solimân, to the astonishment of every body, discovered a ford by which the cavalry could pass. The circumstance was too favourable to the inclinations of the prince, not to be turned to immediate advantage. In the night he forded the river, and when day-light appeared, fell suddenly on Suja's camp.

Suja, who confidered the Ganges as an infupe-and derable barrier, permitted himself to be completely feated. furprized. The shouts of the army, and the clashing of fwords first jouzed him from sleep. He started from his bed, feized his arms, rushed forth and mounted his hoise. When he looked round him, he beheld nothing but confusion and terror, slaughter and flight. His voice was not heard in the tumult, and if heard, it was not obeyed. The crowd around him was great; but his army was too much agitated by fear to be reduced to any As no man could trust to another, each endeavoured to provide for his own fafety by The flaughter of those who stood, retarded

A D 1658 H g 1068

236

Suja, with some of his officers, fought with courage, but they were driven into the river, and the prince with great difficulty made his escape in a canoe, and fell down the stream without stopping, till he reached Mongeer Soliman, after his victory, marched into Bengal, and be sieged Suja in the fort of Mongeer But we must turn our attention to another quarter of the em

Aurung gebe heats of his

Aurungzebe, as has been already related. returned to Brampour after having finished the war in Tellingana. He did not continue long in that city He took up his residence in a town in the neighbourhood of Dowlatabad, which he had rebuilt, and called after his own name Aurungabad In this place he received the first news of his father s illness, but three months elapsed before he heard any further intelligence Dara, who was refolved to establish from court hunfelf firmly on the throne in case of the demise of his father, had placed guards on all the ferries and highways, at the fame time isluing orders to all the officers of the cultoms, and the commanders of diffricts, to flop all letters and travellers These circumstances induced Aurungzebe to be lieve that his father was dead, and he began to levy forces for his own fecurity In the midst of his preparations. letters were received from Morâd, who commanded in Guzerat That prince informed Aurungzebe that Dara had ufurped the throne, and was taking measures for cutting off his brothers. He therefore proposed that they should join in their own defence. Aurungzebe embraced Morad's proposal with joy He knew his own fuperior abilities, which were more than a match for the open valour of Morâd, and he hoped, that if by his affiftance he could defeat Dara, Dara, his own way to the throne would be paved. A negociation with Morâd was opened, and the preparations for war continued.

1658, Hip 1068

Jumla, who had been dismissed from the office of visier by Dara, airived in the mean time from Gaus Agra in the Decan Shaw Jehan having disap-over proved of that lord's being turned out of his dcpartment, endeavoured to gratify him in some other way; and had, for that purpose, given him the command of a confiderable body of troops, to reduce some places which still held out in the lately conquered provinces. Dara, who was jealous of Jumla's known attachment to Aurungzêbe, kept his family in the capital as the hostages of his faith. Jumla, pitching his camp in the neighbourhood of Aurungabad, was informed of Aurungzêbe's preparations for war. He fent him a message, informing him that the emperor was recovered, and had refumed the reins of government. The prince, aftonished at the coldness of Tumla, fent to demand a conference: but that lord, fearing the spies of Dara who were dispersed over the camp, refused to wait upon a man, who was arming against his sovereign.

Aurungzêbe penetrated into the cause of this Jumla cautious conduct. He knew that he was attached to his interest, and that it was only the sear of Dara's resentment against his family, prevented him from joining with alacrity in his own views. He therefore had recourse to art. Mahommed Mauzim, the second son of Aurungzêbe, was a great savourite with Jumla. That prince was sent to visit him with proper instructions from his father. Mauzim, who was then about seventeen years of age, possessed a part of Aurungzêbe's address. He waited upon Jumla in his tent, without any previous notice, and was received with great kindness and distinction. When night

A D 1658 Hig 1063 was coming on, Jumla put the prince in mind of the time; and Mauzim told him, that having waited upon him without either the permission or knowledge of his father, he was afraid of return ing without the cultomary honour of being at tended by the person to whom he had paid the Jumla, who was ashained of being defective in point of politeness, agreed to accompany Mauzim home When they came to the prince s apartment, Jumla fignified his intention of re turning, he was, however, perfuaded to enter Mauzim retired and his father appeared carnelly infifted, that Jumla, with the army under his command, should join in his designs upon the throne That lord excused himself, on account of his family, who were in the hands of Dara It was at length agreed, that the person of Jumla should be seized, and an order issued for confif cuting all his effects. 'I his expedient fecured him the refentment of both parties, and a door of reconciliation was left open, which ever fide should prevail. The troops foon after the imprisonment of their general joined the standard of Aurungzebe

Iarcbes om Au mgabad On the fivteenth of February, 1658, Aurung zebe marched from Aurungabad with twelve thou fand horfe, leaving his fecond son Mauzim with a sufficient force for the protection of the Decan, from whence he intended to derive his supplies for the war Nijabut Chan, descended in a direct line from Timur, commanded his vanguard and took the route of Brampour He himself followed with the main body, and arrived on the first of March at that place He remained at Brampour near a month, for an answer to the dispatches which he had sent to Guzerat to his brother His proposals to that prince were so obviously bypocritical, that only the open spirit of Morad.

Morâd, who, being full of honesty himself, suspected no guile in others, could be for a moment deceived. He professed in his letters, that he had always been his affectionate friend, that Dara, from his natural weakness, was incapable of holding the reins of government, besides that he was from principle indifferent about all religion, that Sufa, with abilities little superior to Dara, was a heretic, and by consequence unworthy of the crown. "As for me," continues Aurungzêbe, 'I have long fince dedicated mylell to the lervice of God. I defire only for that latety and tranquillity which fuits the fervency of my devotion. But I will, with my poor abilities, assist Morid to take postelfion of a sceptre, which the united wishes of the people of Hindostan have already placed in his hand. Morâd may then think of his faithful Aurungzêbe, and aslign him a quiet retreat, for passing the remainder of his life in the austerities of religion."

Morâd, who, with his splendid qualities, was His maself conceited and vain, ascribed Aurungzêbe's of Morad moderation to his own superior ment. He wrote back to his brother, that he was ready to join him with all his forces, and, for that purpofe, was preparing to march from Ahmedabád. thé twenty-second of March, Aurungzêbe having received the dispatches of Morâd, lest the city of Brampour, and took the route of Ugein, where the brothers had preconcerted to join their forces. Arriving on the banks of the Nirbidda, he was informed that the Maraja, Jesswint Singh, had, on the part of Dara, taken posscossion of Ugein, with seventy thousand horse. He was beyond measure astonished, that the enemy had not sent a part of his army to guard the paffage of the river, which might have stopt his progress. He, h) weigr, with his small force durst not cross it;

A D 1678 Hig 1069

and he encamped on the opposite banks in anxi 1648 ous expectation of the arrival of Morad 1068

The Maraja, instead of attacking Aurungzêbe with a force that promifed a certain victory, when he had advanced within ten miles of the at the Nir rebels, took possession of a woody hill, on the top of which there was an extensive plain. In this place he intrenched his army, and contented himself with detaching flying squadrons to awe the enemy from croffing the river The conduct of the Maraja who was personally brave, procceded in a great measure from his pride and ar rogance. He was heard to fay. That he waited for the junction of the brothers, that he might in one day triumph over two Imperial princes. Aurungzêbe owed his fafety to this unaccount able folly His small army, when he arrived on the banks of the Nirbidda was fo much fatigued with the march, and spent with the excessive heat of the weather, that he might be routed by an

inconfiderable force

A few days after Aurungzebe's arrival at the Nirbidda the van of Morad s army entered his camp When they were first feen, on a rising ground near the army of Aurungzebe, the ene my struck his tents, and advanced toward the banks of the river Aurungzebe dispatched a messenger to hasten Morad, who was still about fisteen miles distant He himself, in the mean tune refolved to take the prefent opportunity to pais the river, which by the late extreme drought had become fordable He placed, therefore, his artillery which was worked by fome Frenchmen in his fervice, on a rifing ground, and entered the river in columns, under his own fire. The Maraja, trusting to the height of the banks and his advanced guard, who were already engaged with the enemy, contented himfelf with drawing

in ed by Morad

1116

Opp fed

up his army in order of battle at a distance. Aurungzêbe, having forced the passage of the river, encamped on its bank; and the next day he was joined by Morâd, who had left his army on their march. The brothers, after a long conference, resolved to attack the enemy by the dawn of the morning; whilst orders were fent to the forces of Morad, who were not yet arrived, to hold themselves in readiness for action.

A D 1658. Hig

The Maraja, by his fcouts, being apprifed of April 22, the motions of the rebels, was ready to receive Maraja them. He drew up, before day-light, his army in order of battle, to be ready to accommodate his dispositions afterwards to the appearance of the enemy's line He accordingly began the action with the Mogul cavalry, but these were soon repulsed by the veteran troops of Aurungzêbe The Maraia, who forefaw the discomfiture of the Moguls, shewed behind them the front of thirty thousand of his native troops the Rajaputs, in whom he chiefly confided. Aurungzêbe, upon feeing this formidable body, drew back from the pursuit, and restored his line. The Maraja advanced with impetuofity, and the prince met him half-way The shock was extremely violent, and the rebels were on the point of giving way, when Morâd, with his troops, just arrived on the field, attacked the enemy in flank. The victory was fnatched from the hands of the Rajaputs: their prince disdained to fly. The wings were broken and ruined, but the centre, animated by the presence of their prince, stood its ground. Slaughter and danger increased every moment. Morad was irrefistible on the right flank, and Aurungzêbe, who had been on the point of treating, advanced again to the charge. Rajaputs behaved with their usual bravery; but they were furrounded on all fides. The action became became mixed and undiffinguished 1518 miliaken for foes, and foes for friend flie tainty would have suspended the swore ۋىي. made it fail every where About the

the fun, the field, covered with ten tho bodies on the fide of the enemy, was I rungy be and Morad. The Maraia. battle was over, drove his chariot, by y vado, oute round the arms of the vid when it was proposed to Aurungzebe th should be detached in pursuit of th " No, ' he replied, " let the wounded time to fly "

The bad fuccels of the Maraja proci M for the leh v " i wie of Aurungzube. That prince had his more from his own folly, than from th in the Imperial camp, who infinuated to Mahommedans, that should the Mara their religion would be at an end in In Moguls accordingly made but a faint i and the whole weight of the action fell The Maraia, after his de Raiaputs ashamed to appear at court He retreat own country, but his wife, a woman o

line spirit, disdained to receive a husbar vered with victory She shut the gatcastle against bim He in vain remonstr though unfuccessful, he had fought with ry of his ancestor, as appeared from ber of the flam " The flain, ' faid fh left leffwint without an excuse is no new thing among the Maraias, bi vive a defeat is new Descended from th adopted by marriage into their house, their glory in the hands of Jeffwint, an tarnished it with flight To be the mel the rum of his armies, to show to the

he fears death more than difgrace, is no

the employment of my husband. But I have no husband. It is an impostor that knocks at our gates. Jeffwint is no more. The blood of kings could not furvive his loss of same. Prepare the funeral pile! I will join in death my departed lord." To such a pitch of enthusiasm had this woman carried her ideas of valoui. She herself was the daughter of the late Rana, and Jeffwint was of the same family. He, however, prevailed upon her to open the gate of the castle, by promifing that he would levy a new army, and recover from Aurungzêbe the glory which he had lost to that prince.

ΑD

The princes, after their victory over the Mara-Aurungja, entered Ugein in triumph. Morâd, who zebe reloved battle as a pastime, was unwilling to stop in Ugein. that city, but Aurungzêbe convinced him that it was necessary to refresh the troops for a few days, after the fatigues of a long march, and the toils of an obstinate action. He at the same time informed him, that time should be given to their victory to work upon the fears of the enemy." Besides," faid Aurungzêbe, " there are thirty thousand men in the army of Dara, whom I intend to gain over to my interest before we shall again engage." The true cause of this delay was a want of information of the real state of the court of Agra. If Dara was the fovereign, Aurungzêbe had no doubt of carrying all before him, on account of the unpopularity of that prince among the nobility; but if the reins of government had reverted into the hands of Shaw Jehân, who was, in a manner, adored both by the army and the people, he was fure that even his own troops would defert him in a day of battle. He had fent privately expresses to his friends at Agra, and he waited for their return.

The

A 1)
1668
11ig 1068 Perp ex ty of the em peror

The news of the battle near the Nirbidda ar rived, in the mean time, at court Dara was en raged at the Moguls, from whose cowardice or perfidy the rebels derived their fuccess The em peror himself was perplexed beyond measure He was sensible of the determined resolution of his rebel fons he dreaded the violence of Dara He faw nothing but misfortune before him, and fome dreadful calamity hanging over himself and The eager preparations of Dara for another battle, alarmed him as much as the approach of the rebels A victory would make Dara master of the empire a defeat would throw himself into the hands of those whom he opposed. His mind flew from one resolution to another, and he could fix on none The prospect was gloomy before him, and feeing no point on which he could rest his hopes, he left all to chance

Preparations of Da

Dara, with the natural activity and vehemence of his temper, prepared, with redoubled vigour, for the field He passed like a slame through the capital, and kindled thoulands into an eagerness equal to his own When the first news of the defeat of the Maraia came to court. Dara fent an express to his fon Soliman, who befieged Suja in Mongeer He defired him to make the best terms which the urgency of the times would admit with Suja, and to return to Agra by forced marches. A negociation was opened accordingly with the befieged prince. His necessities made him liften, with eagerness, to a treaty Soliman, in the name of the emperor, reinstated him in the government of Bengal, after having exacted from him a folemn promise of taking no farther part in the war He himself marched night and day, to reinforce his father, and had he arrived in time, Aurungzêbe might have given his hopes to the wind Soliman was then in the twenty fixth fixth year of his age; graceful in his person, and vigorous in his mind. Nature seemed to have formed him for war. He was brave in action, fedate, and possessing himself in the greatest dangers. He was generous in his disposition, liberal in his fentiments, pleasing to his friends, humane to h s enemies. He possessed the fire and warmth of Dara without his weaknesses, the prudence of Aurungzêbe without his meanness and deceit.

1658 Hig

1068.

as Aurung-

The Imperial army, in the mean time, marched who out of Agra under the conduct of Dara The against emperor became more and more perplexed, matters approached to a decision. He knew Zebe and Morad. that the nobles loved not Dara · he knew that the best troops were absent with Solimân. One expedient only remained, and that, if followed, would have infured fuccess. He ordered the Imperial tent to be pitched without the walls; declaring, that he would take the field in person against the rebels. His friends saw an end to his troubles in this resolution. His own army to a man would die in defence of his power, and even the troops of Aurungzêbe and Morâd had openly declared, that they would not draw their swords against Shaw Jehan. The infatuation of Dara prevented his father's designs. He had recourse to intreaty, and when that failed, to commands. The emperor, whose intellects had been in some measure impaired by his illness, was, at first, shocked at the obstinacy of Dara. That prince, whose filial piety was even greater than his ambition, waited upon his father threw himself at his feet, and earne'lly requested that he would not endanger his health by taking the field, as, upon his life, the prosperity of the empire depended, in days of fo much trouble.

The emperor, having yielded to the intreaties of Charge gi-Dara conjured him, though bent on war, to avoid his father.

A D 1658 Hrg 1068. coming to action till the arrival of his fon The malignity of his fate prevailed also over this advice He faid not a word to his father, but his countenance expressed chagrin and discontent " I'hen go, my fon " faid Shaw Jehan, " but re turn not without victory to me Misfortune feems todarken the latter days of your father, add not to his grief by presenting yourself before him in your distress, lest he may be induced to say, That prudence, as well as fortune, were wanting to Dara" The prince had fearce parted with his father, when news arrived of the march of the rebels from the city of Ugein Dara placed himself at the head of the army, which consisted of one hundred thousand horse, with a thousand pieces of cannon. He advanced haltily to the banks of the river Chunbul, which is twenty miles from Agra A ridge of mountains, which extend themselves to Guzerat, advance into the plain country, along the Chunbul, to within twenty five miles of the river Jumna, and this pals Da ra occupied with strong lines, strengthened by redoubts, which were mounted with artillery

Arrung
y be t th ear of the Impe ala y
Jun s

Dara had not long remained behind his lines, when the princes, on the first of June, appeared on the opposite bank of the Chunbul, and pitched their camp within sight of the Imperial army Aurungzêbe reconnoited the situation of the ene my, but he was not to be forced. His army con sited not of forty thousand men and they were farigued with the heat of the weather and the length of their march. But there was no time to be lost. Solimân, covered with laurels, was approaching sast with the flower of the Imperial army, to support his sather's cause. No hopes presented themselves to Aurungzebe, and he be came, of a sudden sullen melancholy, and per plexed. To retreat was ruin to advance destruction. He was lost in suspence. Morad, with his usual love of arduous undertakings, was for forcing the lines, but a letter from Shaista, the fon of Asiph Jah, and who was third in command in the Imperial army, broke off that meafure, by presenting a better to the brothers. This treacherous lord informed Aurungzêbe, that to attempt the lines would be folly, and that the only means left him was to leave his camp standing to amuse Dara, and to march through the hills by a bye-road, which two chiefs, who were directed to attend him in the evening, would point out. The princes closed with the proposal. The guides joined them in the evening, and they decamped with the greatest filence, leaving their tents, baggage, and artillery under a strong guard, who were to amuse the enemy. The army moved about thirty miles that night; and the next day they were discovered by the scouts of Dara's or-Dara, in full march toward Agra.

hıs

A D

tle, June

Dara decamped from his lines with precipitation, 5 leaving the greater part of his cannon behind him. By a forced march he pushed between the enemy and the capital; and on the fourth of June, he presented himself before the rebels. morning of the fifth, the prince ordered the army to be formed in order of battle. Rustum Chan, an experienced general from Tartary, marshalled the field. The artillery was placed in the front, ioined together with chains to prevent the passage of the cavalry of the enemy. Behind the artillery stood a number of camels, mounted with small fwivels, which the riders of each camel, without lighting, could charge and discharge with ease. In the rear were drawn up the musqueteers in three lines; and the two wings were formed of the cavalry, armed with bows and arrows together with fabres One third of the cavalry formed the referve behind the lines Dara placed himself in the center, mounted on a losty elephant,

from

A D 1658 Hig 1068

48

from which he could command a view of the field The treacherous Shaifta took the com mand of the right wing, and that of the left was destined by Dara for Rustum That officer, who was acknowledged the most experienced com mander in Hindostan, was actually at the head of the army He bore the commission of captain general, and all orders were issued by him. He represented to Dara, before the action commenced, that he intended to place himself at the head of the referve in the rear, where he might direct the movements of the field, and iffue out his orders as the circumstances of affairs might require " My post," faid Dara, " is in the front of bat tle, and I expect that all my friends shall partake of my danger, if they wish to share the glory which I hope to obtain" The generous and in trepid spirit of Rustum was offended at this reflection. He answered with a stern countenance and a determined tone of voice, "The front of battle has been always my post, though I never contended for an empire, and if I wished to change it to-day, it was from an anxiety for the fortune of Dara" The prince was struck with the impropriety of his own conduct. He endea vouted to perfuade Rullum to remain at the heads of the referve, but he went beyond hearing, and placed himself in the front of the left wing

turung ebe

durungzebe, on the other hand, having marfhalled his army into order of battle, requefled of.
Morâd to take the command of the center He committed the left wing to his fon Mahomined, and he placed himfelf on the right Morâd was aftonished, and pleased at the ease with which Aurungzebe assigned to him the post of honour
But the crassy prince had two reasons for his conduct Morâd was haughty, he had assumed the Imperial titles, and though, out of a pretendedcomplassance to his father, he had laid them down,

down, he looked forward with undeviating ardour to the throne. It was not the business of Aurungzebe to ossend him at this critical juncture. But his other reason was equally prudent. Rustum commanded the left wing of the enemy; and he was the most renowned general of the times. He had passed many years in the service of the Tartars and Persians, being bred up to the field from his youth, in which he had almost eminently distinguished himself. He had been present in one hundred general actions; he was habituated to danger, and persect master of his own mind in the most desperate situations. Aurungzebe therefore could not trust the experience of Rustum, against the conduct of any but his own.

1659. Hip. 1.68.

AD.

Both lines began now to move from wing to The butte wing; and the artillery opened on both fides. below Rustum advanced, on the left, with a halty pace, directing the march of his troops by the motion of his fword. Autungzebe ordered a part of his artillery to point toward Rustum, and that general received a cannon-ball in his breaft, when he had advanced within five yards of the enemy. The whole wing flopt at the fall of Rustum: but Sitterfal, one of the chiefs of the Rajaputs, at the head of five thousand horse, fell in, sword in hand, with Aurungzêbe. Shaw Mahommed, who commanded under the prince, opposed the Rajaputs with great bravery. A sharp conflict ensued; and the Rajaputs began to file off, when their leader engaged personally with Shaw Mahommed. The Rajaputs strove to cover their chief, but in vain; he was cut down by the fabre of Mahommed. The whole wing fell into disorder, but did not fly; and a promiscuous flaughter covered the field with dead.

Dara, mounted on his elephant, in the mean Dira's time advanced with the centre. He was observed beavery.

A D 1658, Hig 1668 by his army to look over all the line, and they gathered courage from his intrepid demeanor part of the enemy's artillery was opposed to the very point where Dara advanced A heavy fire was kept up, and his squadron fell into a kind of disorder, but when he waved his hand for them to advance, they refumed their ranks, and follow ed him with ardour Before he could come to blows with the enemy, a fecond volley occasioned a second disorder He however flood up on his elephant, and, without any change in his coun tenance, called out with a loud voice to advance with foeed He himfelf, in the mean time, fell in with the first line of Morad He rushed through with his elephant, and opened a way for his horse, who, pressing into the heart of the enemy, commenced a great flaughter

Morad a

The whole centre under Morâd was broken, and the prince himfelf was covered with wounds He endeavoured to lead his troops again to the charge, but they were deaf to his commands He ordered his elephant to be driven among the thickest of the enemy, being determined to fall with his fortune, or, by a brave example, to re animate his flying troops with hopes of recovering the day His boldnels was attended with fuccels His fquadron feeing the enemy furrounding their prince, were ashamed of their terror, and poured around him Arib Dafe, an Indian chief, thrice strove to reach Morad with his sword, but he did not fucceed, on account of the height of the elephant He, however, cut the pillars which supported the roof of the Amari or castle, which falling upon the prince, incumbered him in fuch a manner, that he could not defend himself He however disengaged himself, and dealt death with his arrows on every fide. In the mean time Mahommed, the fon of Aurungzêbe, was fent by his father's orders from the left to the affiftance of Morâd He came up when the prince was in the greatest danger. Fresh spirit was given to the troops of Morâd, and Dara received a check.

١

1658

The battle now raged with redoubled fury. Dara, by The elephant of Morâd, rendered outrageous by an acciwounds, rushed forward through the columns of the enemy Mahommed, ashamed of being left behind, followed him with great ardour Dara did not retreat. He gave his orders with apparent composure But a cannon-ball having taken off the head of his foster-brother, who sat with him on the elephant, he was almost blinded with the blood. A rocket, at the same time, passing by his ear, finged his turban, a fecond followed, and having fluck in the front of the Amari, burft, and broke it all to pieces. His colour was feen then to change. The lord who drove the elephant observed an alteration in the prince; and, whether through personal fear, or for the sasety of his master, is uncertain, retreated a few paces. Dara reprimanded him with feverity, but the mischief was already done. His squadrons saw the retreat of the prince, and their spirit flagged. He however ordered the driver to turn his elephant toward the enemy, but that lord reprefented to him, that now, being marked out by the rebels, it were better for him to mount his horse, and pursue the fugitives, for that now very few remained on the field. He alighted; but there was no horse to be found. He fought for some time on foot. At length he mounted a horse whose rider had been killed.

Almost the whole of both armies had now left is defeatthe field. Not a thousand men remained with ed Dara, and fcarce one hundred horse with Aurungzêbe and Morâd. The latter however fought with increasing ardour. His young son, of about eight

SHAW JEHAN

CHAP VII

Reflections—Dara appears before bu father—Hu fight to Delhi—The army deferts Soliman Sheko —Shayla Chan condemned to death—Refewed— The confederate princes appear before Agra—Aururgzebe writes to his father—Lonference be tween him and the princefs Jehandra—His art ful conduct—By o stratagem feizes the citadel and the emperor—Deceives Morád—March.s with him in pursuit of Dara—Seizes and imprifons Mordd—Pursues Dara—Mounts the throne at Delhi—Reflections on his conducti—The news of his accession brought to Shaw Jehân—Character of that prince

1658. 11 g 106* Reflec THE decifive battle, which quashed for ever the hopes of Dara, and gave the crown of Hindoslan to Aurungzebe, was fought within fixteen miles of Agra The victor, assonified at a piece of good fortune which he did not expect, pursued not his enemies beyond the field. The fugitives on both sides had rallied in the rear of the small parties who continued the action, and presented a shew of firmness, without any inclination of renewing the combat. To an unconcerned specia

AD.

1558. Hig

for it would have been difficult to determine which party had prevailed. The flight on each fide was equal, and the field was left, by both armies, to the dead. But Dara was conquered in his own mind; he passed suddenly through the half-formed lines of his rallied army, and men, who wanted but an excuse for flight, relinquished their ground with precipitation. Aurungzêbe was first convinced of his victory by its consequences; but whether from policy or fear is uncertain, he forbore to advance towards Agra. He gave time to his troops to recover from their terror; as well as room to his enemies to increase their panic: besides, the affairs of his rival were not desperate. Should the emperor take the field in person, the rebel princes, notwithstanding the advantages which they had obtained, would have vanished from his presence. But his distemper had not left Shaw Jehân, and he was incumbered with the indolence of age.

The emperor had fat all day, in anxious expector Dara aptation, in the tower over that gate of the citadel fore his fawhich looked toward the field of battle. Parties ther of fugitives had often alarmed his fears; but the expresses from Dara, during the time of action, had as often restored his hopes. The prince at length came to the foot of the wall, with marks of his own defeat. To mention the result of the battle was superfluous, his appearance betrayed misfortune. "The rebels, I perceive, have prevailed," faid Shaw Jehân with a figh; "but Dara Shekô must have had some other cause than fear for his flight."—" Yes," replied the prince, "there is a cause. The traitor Shaista Chan! I have lost the empire, but let him not escape unpunished" The emperor bent his eyes to the ground, and for some time uttered not one word; at length suddenly starting up, he faid, " What means

256 A D. 1658 Hig 1068

means Dara to do?"--" To defend these walls," replied the prince "You deceive yourfelf," faid Shaw Jehan; " walls are no defence to those who have failed in the field " Having expressed himself in these words, he ordered the by standers to remove He then advised Dara to set out im mediately for Delhi He told him, That the governor of that city should have orders to supply him with all the public money in his possession, and that an express should be immediately dif natched to his fon Soliman, to march along the northern banks of the Ganges, and to join him in the province of Doab, which lies between that river and the Jumna

Dara, approving of this advice, retired to his own palace, and made preparations for his im mediate flight He loaded all his elephants and chariots with his women and flaves, and for want of beafts of burden, he imprudently left his trea fure behind About midnight, the unfortunate prince issued out of Agra mounted on horseback. accompanied by a few menial fervants. One of the pikemen who attended him, had the infolence to ride close by his fide, and to murmur in his ears concerning the lofs which he himfelf fuffained by fuch an abrupt departure. Dara was enraged at this fudden mark of his own fallen condition. " Slave! faid he, " murmur not at your fate. Behold me, who but yesterday commanded at mies, reduced thus low, and forget your own trivial misfortunes. Behold me, who am called great as Darius, alluding to his own name, obliged to fly by night, and be filent concern ing your fate. The pikeman was struck by the reproof He shrunk back, and the other servants wept One of them was fo much enraged that he prepared to chastise the slave, but Dara inter poling faid, " Forbear! the friends of the un fortunate

fortunate have a right to complain in their prefence."

Dara proceeded through night, and deceived his misfortunes by repeating some of the elegies of Hafiz, a famous poet of Shiraz. When he to Dellin had rode two miles from Agra, he heard the noise of horsemen approaching from behind. He flood and drew his fword, but they were two private foldiers, who, having perceived the prince passing through the gate of the city, took a resolution to join him. They told their business; and Dara was prevented from thanking them by his tears. He had not advanced many miles, when an officer, with forty troopers joined him; and by the dawn of the morning, feveral men of distinction came up with him, with three hundred horse. With this retinue he continued his rout to Delhi; and arrived in that city on the third day after his departure from Agra.

The emperor, anxious about Dara, fent to his Rufes palace soon after his departure. He understood forces that, in the confusion, he had neglected to carry along with him his treasure. He immediately ordered fifty-feven mules to be loaded with gold coin, and to be fent to his fon under the protection of a detachment of the guards. But a tribe of Hindoos, who have fince made a figure under the name of Jates, having intelligence of this treasure, defeated the party, and seized the money. This was a dreadful blow to Dara. Thirty lacks of the public money were only found in the possession of the governor of Delhi, and the merchants and bankers would fubscribe to no loan, in the present untoward posture of the prince's The threats of military execution at last enabled him to raife confiderable fums, for which he gave orders on the Imperial treasury. Soldiers flocked flocked round his standard; and he had, in a few days, the appearance of an army

A D 1658 Ilig

Au ung z be cor rupts

Aurungzebe, who flill remained encamned near the field of battle, was informed of every transaction in Agra by his force. The greatest lords, who looked upon him as the heir if not the actual possessor of the empire, endeavoured to gain his favour by Living him intelligence He found that all the hopes of Dara depended upon the army under the command of his fon. and he resolved to gain it over to his own views He fent letters to the Raia lov Singh, he wrote to Debere Chan, who were next in command to Soliman Sheko He exaggerated, if possible, the hopeless condition of Dara; he informed them. that the army of that prince had joined his flandard, that he lumfelf had fled unattended to Delhi that he could not escape, as orders had been distributed through all the provinces to feize hum, as a public enemy "Shaw Jehan,' con tinued Aurungzebe, " is rendered unfit for government by age and infirmities Your hopes. and even your fafety, must depend upon me, and as you value both, feize Soliman, and fend him to inv camp " of prince Soliman Joy Singh, who received the first letters from Aurungzebe, was perplexed. His fears stood against his adherence to Soliman, his honour rendered him averse to side with Aurungzebe. He went to the tent of Debere, and that lord placed the letters which he also had received, in his hands. To seize the prince was a measure of peril, from his known valour, to attempt to sed duce the army, whilst he remained at its head, dangerous. They followed the middle course as the lases. When the news of the defeat of Dara armed at the camp, about a day's march beyond Allahabâd, the prince called a council of war.

A D 1658 Hig. 1068.

He proposed to march straight to Delhi; they dissented, and plainly told him, that they would not stir from the camp till more certain advices arrived. The prince, anxious to join his father, was distressed beyond measure. He endeavoured to persuade them, but their measures had been taken. He applied to the army; they too were traitors, and disobeyed. Instead of being able to assist Dara, he became afraid of his own safety. He resolved to leave a camp where he had no authority. He, however, altered his opinion, and remained, but the principal officers, with their retinues, left the camp.

Shaista Chan, who had commanded the right Shaista wing of Dara's army in the late battle, betrayed demned to his trust, and retreated without coming to blows death. with the rebels. He returned to Agra; and a message was sent him by the emperor, commanding him to appear in the presence. His friends advised him not to obey; but his confidence was equal to his want of faith. He trusted in his own power; he was encouraged by the vicinity of the victorious princes. He went, and stood undaunted in the presence. The emperor, offended before at his treachery, was enraged at his impudence. "You villain," faid he, "you fon of a villain, how could you presume to betray my fon and me?" Shaista took fire at the reproach. "The name," he replied, "I confess, is not unsuitable to Asiph Jah; he invested Shaw Jehân with power, by delivering the heir of the crown into his hands? The emperor started from his throne, and drew his sword. He looked furiously around on the nobles, and cried, "Will none of you feize the traitor?" All were filent; the emperor repeated the fame words. Fowlad Chan stept forth, threw Shaista to the ground, and binding his hands behind him, asked Vol. III. Bb the

A D

the further pleasure of Shaw Jehân "Ihrow him headlong,' said he, "from the Imperial bastion" When they were dragging him to execution, Shaish cried out to the emperor, "Shail you, who are the vicegerent of God, break his laws, by shedding blood on the seventh day of the holy month of Ramzán? Shaw Jehîn nung down his head for a moment, and then ordered him to be kept bound till the next day

Refored

The friends of Shailta were, in the mean time, apprifed of his danger They gathered from all quarters and collected near ten thousand men. who came to the gate of the citadel, and peremptorily demanded him from the emperor Shaw Jehan continued obstinate during the night the morning, the force of the rebels had increas ed . and he perceived that they were resolved to come to extremities He fent for the prisoner. and obli ed him to write an order for them to disperse They saw through this piece of policy They refused to obey the commands of a man fubiect to another a power Scaling ladders were actually applied to the walls, and the emperor was obliged to comply with the demands of the infurgents, and to reftore Shaifta to his freedom

The princes appea be fore Agra

On the ninth of June, the confederate princes appeared with their army before the capital. The city was in no condition to fullain a flege, and the gates were left open. Aurungzebe, declining to enter Agra, pitched his tent in a garden with out the walls. His feh mes were not yet ripe for execution, and he affumed an appearance of moderation. Morad lay ill of his wounds, and, being unable to attend to business, a fair field was left for his brother. The emperor, when the van of the rebels appeared in fight, ordered the gates of the citadel, which was a place of great strength.

strength, to be shut. This resolution alarmed Aurungzêbe. To attack his father would be a measure of great imprudence. His health being re-established, his subjects still looked up to him as their only lawful fovereign. Aurungzêbe, therefore, refolved to substitute art in the place of force.

A D 1658 1068

When he arrived at the gate of the city he Aurung-fent a trusty messenger to his father. He ordered to his fahim to touch the ground in his name, before the ther emperor; and to fignify to him, that Aurungzêbe still retained for him the affection of a son, and the loyalty of a subject; that his grief for what had happened was exceedingly great; that he lamented the ambition and evil defigns of Dara, who had forced him to extremities; that he rejoiced extremely at the emperor's recovery from his indisposition; and that he himself remained without the city, in humble expectation of his commands. Shaw Jehân being no stranger to the dark, crafty, and intriguing disposition of Aurungzêbe, received his messenger with affected joy. He had long discovered his passion for reigning; and he resolved to meet deceit with duplicity. He, however, was not a match in art for his fon; and by endeavouring to intrap Aurungzêbe, he himself fell at last into the snare

Shaw Jehân, to expiscate the real designs of his The conrebellious sons, sent his eldest daughter Jehanara to visit them, upon their arrival at the gates of Agra. Aurungzêbe having owned the superiority of Morâd, the princess went first to his tent. Morâd was of a disposition that could neither conceal his hatred nor his love He knew that lehanâra was inviolably attached to the interests of his elder brother, and being at the same time fretful through the pain of his wounds, he treated her with difrespect, and even used harsh expres-B b 2 fions.

A D 1659 111g 1068 fions The haughty spirit of Jehanâra was im patient of insult. She called for her chair in her rage, and told him, that his brutality was equal to his crimes The behaviour of Morad to his fifter was inflantly carried to Aurungzêbe, by his fores He ran out of his tent, and stopt her chair "Will my fifter," he faid " leave the camp without enquiring concerning my health? My long absence, Jehanara, has, I fear, blotted me out of the memory of my relations Should you not deign yourself to honour me with your pre fence, it would have been kind to have fent to me one of your meanest flaves, to give me some ac counts of my father" Having flattered her pride with fuch expressions as these, he prevailed upon her to enter his tent, where she was treated with the highest respect and distinction of the princefs Jehanara

To gain the confidence of Jehanara, he pre tended the greatest remorfe for his own behaviour He told her, that his happinels in life depended upon his father a forgiveness of his errors "But why did I call them errors, Jehanara?' faid he, " they are crimes, though I might plead as an excuse, that I was deceived by designing men, but my folly in believing them, has thrown dif credit on my understanding, in my own eyes." His affeverations were accompanied with tears, and the princels was deceived. on ms I " stranger she replied, " to the sentiments of the emperor, on a subject which has caused so much of his forrow. He is most offended at Morad. who has added the name of Sovereign to his other crimes. He confiders Aurungzêbe as only mif led by mifrepresentation, Morad as an obstinate and determined rebel Defert him, therefore, and you may not only depend upon forgiveness, but upon all the favour an indulgent parent can beftow on a fon whom he loves ' Aurungzêbe's

A D.

1658. Hig 1069.

Aurungzabe's countenance appeared lightened up with joy, during the time which she employed in speaking But an affected darkness returned upon his features when she mentioned Morâd. "Dara's party," he then began, " is ruined; and and Au-Fortune has added to the friends of Morâd. The first is unpopular, on account of his passionate feverity among the nobility; the latter beloved, for the open honesty of his disposition and his unequalled valour. "As for me," continued Aurungzêbe, " I am what I seem, a man devoted to the service of God; a character little calculated to gain the favour of men. But should Dara appear to have friends to support my endeavours to regain the esteem of my father, I venture to assure Jehanâra, that I will succeed or perish in the attempt." He spoke these words with such an appearance of emphatic fincerity, that the princess was overjoyed. In the openness of her heart, she informed him of all the resources of her brother Dara; and she mentioned the names of his principal friends. Many who pretended to be in the interest of Aurungzêbe were of the number; though they had yielded for the present to the bias of fortune. Without any personal affection for Dara, they affected his cause from a principle of justice. "I am rejoiced, Jehanâra," said Aurungzêbe, "at the discovery you have made. No doubts now remain to perplex my mind. Go to my father, and tell him, that in two days he shall see Aurungzêbe at his feet."

Shaw Jehân, upon this occasion, forgot the Emperor natural cautiousness of his character. He looked Dara. upon his schemes as completed; and thought he faw Aurungzêbe already submitting to his clemency. In the fullness of his heart he sat down and wrote a letter to Dara He acquainted the prince, that the bad aspect of his fortune began to

THE HISTORY OF HINDOSTAN change "Aurungzebe," faid he, " is difgust

A D 1658 Illy 1063

261

ed with the infolence of Morad He is to abandon that haughty young man, and to throw him felf at my feet A foolish and inexperienced boy, who owed all his success to the abilities of his brother, niust sooi fall when deprived of his support. But we are not to depend upon the contrition of Aurungzebe When he shall enter the citadel, his person will be seized 1 lold yourself, therefore, in readness to march with all expedition to Agra 1 wo days more shall carry to you accounts of the sull completion of our designs." The emperor placed his letter in the hands of Nahirdil, one of his trusty slaves. He ordered him to set out for Delhi at midnight, with

His letter intercept ed. all expedition The impatience of the emperor proved fatal to his schemes Shaista Chan had his spies in the presence, and one of them informed him, that a letter had been written, and given in charge to He suspected that it was intended for Nahırdıl Dara and he occupied the road toward Delhi with some faithful friends. Nahirdil had scarce issued out of the gate of the city, when some horsemen surrounded and seized him brought to Shaifta, who perused the letter Ele vated with the discovery, he immediately went to the palace of Aurungzebe, for that prince had now taken up his residence in the city The slave was confined with the greatest secrecy The prince read the letter without emotion He had always doubted the emperor's fincerity, when he promised his forgiveness to a son who had ruined his armies in two battles. He however, profecuted his plan of deceit with indefatigable per To beliege his father in the citadel would be an unpopular if not a dangerous, mea fure. The reverence which the army still had for theu their aged fovereign, would prevent them from drawing their swords against him. But the citadel must be possessed, and the person of the father must be placed in the hands of his ambitious son, otherwise he may give his hopes to the wind

AD, 1658. 1948 1948

On the fifteenth of June, Aurungzêbe was to Aurunghave performed his promise of visiting his father schemes in the citadel The emperor, full of anxiety, looked forward to the appointed hour, in which he faw a period to his misfortunes. A letter from ' his fon was delivered into his hands, when he expected him in person. He told his father, that his crimes were of so deep a dye, that he could not divest himself of fear that the injured emperor would not forgive him . " However much defirous I am of being received into favour, I cannot risque my personal safety in the presence. The guilty are always timid Permit me, therefore, to receive the most convincing proofs of my fovereign's forgiveness; and let my son Mahommed, who reveres the person and authority of his grandfather, be admitted into the citadel with a guard for the protection of my person." Shaw Jehan, anxious for the execution of his own project, found, that without confenting to these proposals, it must be entirely frustrated. therefore returned for answer, that Mahommed, with a certain number of men, might come.

Mahommed, accordingly, having received the to ferzethe proper instructions from his father, entered the emperor. citadel, and disposed his party in different places. The emperor, in the mean time, had concealed a body of men in a court adjoining to the haram. The prince roaming about, lighted on these men. He complained to the emperor of an intention against his father's person, he therefore plainly told him, that till these men were removed, he would fend a messenger to Aurungzêbe to stop

A D 1658. Hig 1058 him from coming into the citadel Shaw Jehân, whether he put some considence in the promises of his son, or that he thought he could seize him by means of the women and cunuchs of the seraglio, is uncertain, but he removed the soldiers out of the fort, as a proof of his sincerity. It after wards appeared, that the emperor rested his hopes on a number of robust Tartar women in the haram, whom he had armed with daggers, and who, from the spirit of their country, were sit for an undertaking of boldness.

Skaw Johan taken prifoner

Mahommed, contrary to his expectations. found his party superior within the citadel however, concealed his intentions Every thing was fettled, and the emperor and his grandfon remained in filent expectation. News was at last brought, that Aurungzêbe had mounted his horse, and that the procession of his retinue was approach Shaw Jehan was elevated with hopes, but the crafty prince, as if struc with a fit of devotion, ordered his cavalcade to change their courfe, and to move toward the tomb of Akbar, where he intended to offer up his prayers to Heaven. When the emperor was informed of this circumstance. he started up from his throne in great trage. " Mahommed," faid he to the prince, " what means Aurungzêbe by this behaviour? Is he more anxious to appeale the spirit of his great ancestor for his crimes, than the offended maiel ty of his own father ?" Mahommed calmly Te plied, "My father had never any intention to visit the emperor" "What then brought Ma hommed hither?' retorted Shaw Jehan take charge of the citadel," Mahommed coolly rejoined The emperor finding himself betrayed and outwitted by his grandfon, bore him down with a torrent of opprobrious names The prince, feeing his paffion rifing beyond the bounds of reason.

reason, retired from the presence with the usual obeifance, and left his rage to subside at leisure.

The emperor, after the heat of his passion was over, began to reflect upon his deplorable condition. He accused his own weakness more than the emhis fortune, and he was assumed to have fallen pire into a snare which he himself had laid. Resentment and a defire of immediate revenge prevailed over every other passion of his soul. He sent again for Mahommed. The prince came, and found his grandfather with his hand upon the Coran, and his eyes raifed to the Imperial crown, which was suspended over his head. "You see, Mahommed," he faid, "these sacred objects, before an unfortunate old man I am overwhelmed with rage, worn out with age and difease. It is in your power, young man, to make me, for once, happy in my latter days. Release me from prison; and by these," pointing to the crown, and holding the Coran an his hand, "I folemnly fwear to make you emperor of the Moguls." The prince was filent; but various paffions flew alternately over his features. " And do you hesitate," begun Shaw Jehan, " to do an action, which will at once gain you the favour of Heaven and the empire of Hindostan? Are you afraid, that it shall be hereafter related to your dispraise, that you delivered an aged grandfather from prison and disgrace?" The prince hung down his head for a moment; then fuddenly starting, rushed out without uttering a word.

It is difficult to determine what motive induced to the fon the prince to decline the offer made to him by of Aurungzebe. Shaw Jehân. He was ambitious; nor was he remarkable for his filial piety. He probably doubted his grandfather's fincerity; or he did not chuse to trust to proposals imposed by necessity. Aurungzêbe,

A D 1658. H g 1068

Aurungzebe, however, escaped from imminent danger through the self denial of his son Had the emperor appeared in public at the head of his friends, Aurungzebe would shrink from before him, and the haughty Morad would fly The pobles who adhered to the interest of the brotheis, and even the common foldiers had reneat edly declared, that they would not draw their fwords against a prince under whose long and au forcious government their country had fo much flourished The first repulse received from Ma hommed, did not induce the emperor to relin outh his deligns. He fent to him a fecond time. but he refused to come to his presence. He had full the keys of the cuadel in his possession, and neither Aurungzêbe nor his son chose to use force to obtam them from him Two days passed in this suspence Shaw Jehan was obstinate, and Mahommed stood on his guard within the walls The first, however, despaired of gaining over the latter to his purpose, and, in the evening of the fecond day, he fent him the keys of the fortrefs, and defired him to acquaint his father, that he might now come, in full fecurity, to fee his im

Aurung zebe writer to th emper priloned fovereign
Aurungzebe excused himself in a letter. He complained of his father's intentions against him, under the mask of clemency and friendship, that when he pretended to forgive one son, he assisted another son with money, to take away his life in war. "If the emperor complains,' said Aurungzebe, "Dara is only to blame. He owes his minstriunes to the ambition and evil designs of a son unworthy of his favour. As for me,' continued the prince, "no injuries can alter my affections. Nature makes me wish well to my father and Heaven has imposed my regard for him upon me as a duty. But though I love the emperor, emperor, I also love my life; and I am determined not to trust it in the hands of even a father, till the influence of ill-designing persons has departed quite from his mind. Let him, in the mean while, pass his time in that screnc tranquillity which is suitable to his years, and when I shall have disabled Dara from doing surther harm to the empire, I myself will come and open the gates of the citadel." This letter was only intended to deceive the people. It was publicly read to the nobles; and it is even doubtful whether it was sent at all to the emperor.

A D

When the prince Mahommed took possession Deceives of the person of the emperor, with the citadel, Morad. his father, as has been already related, was paying his devotions at the shrine of the emperor Akbâr. When intelligence of his fon's fuccess was carried to him, he immediately waited upon Morâd in his palace; and told him all the circumstances of the affair That prince, who knew that he could have no hopes from his father, was much pleafed at hearing of his imprifonment Aurungzêbe, in the mean time, faluted him emperor, and faid: " Morâd had before the name, but he now has the power of a fovereign. My wishes," continued he, " are now completely accomplished I have contributed to raise a prince, worthy of the throne of our ancestors, and I have but one favour to ask for all the fatigue which I have undergone." "Speak your wishes," said Morâd, "and they shall be in-stantly granted." "This world," replied Aurungzêbe, " has already overwhelmed me too much with its cares. I long to throw the burden away; I am tired of the vain buftle and pageantry of life. Will, therefore, the emperor of the Moguls permit me to make a pilgrimage to Mecca? will he give me fome fmall allowance to enable advice. He marched in front from Agra, with a division of the army; and Morâd, having created his uncle Shaisia, captain-general of the Imperial forces, left that load in the government of Agra, and followed Aurungzêbe. The latter prince having arrived at Muttra, received intelligence, that Dara had taken the route of Lahore. He stopt and waited for the arrival of his brother; who joined him the next day. The latter had, on his march, been convinced by his friends, that his brother had defigns on his life; and selfpreservation, as well as ambition, rendered it neceffary for him to prevent the falling blow.

A D

1658

The day after Morâd's arrival at the camp near Miscar-Muttra, he invited his brother to an entertain-Aurungzêbe, who never had suspected the open temper of Morâd, accepted of the invi-When the brothers fat at dinner, Nazir Shabas, high-steward of the household, who was in the fecret, entered fuddenly, and whilpered in Morâd's ear, that now was the time to make a rent in a magnificent dress Aurungzêbe, whose eye could trace the thoughts in the features of the face, was alarmed at this mysterious whispering, as well as at the affected gaiety of his brother. He remained filent; and Morâd dispatched Shabas, with only defiring him to wait the fignal. rungzêbe was now convinced that there was a defign against his life. He complained suddenly of a violent pain in his bowels, and, rifing under a pretence of retiring, joined his guards, and returned to his own quarter of the camp.

Morâd ascribed his brother's departure to his ill- Morad ness, and entertained no idea that he had the least fuspicion of his own intentions. In three days he recovered of the pretended pain in his bowels. He received his brother's congratulations with every mark of esteem and affection; and the day after, he sent him

1658. H 11

this operation; and began to deal around A D. his blows. The lords were terrified, and the prince began to call aloud for his sword Aurungzêbe, who flood at the door of the tent, ~ thruit his head from behind the curtain, and faid, with a menacing voice, "He has no choice but death or submission, dispatch him if he resists." Morâd, hearing the voice of his biether, began to upbraid him, and lubmitted to his fate. Nazir Shabas, his principal Iriend and adviser, was at the fame inflant feized. He had been fitting under a canopy before the paymatter-general's tent; and at a figural given, the ropes of the four poles were at once cut; and before he could extricate himself, he was bound. The other lords who were attached to the prince, being fuirounded with armed men, were brought before Aurungzêbe, to whom they fwore allegiance A murmur ran through the camp but it was an ineffec-'tual found: and the army, as if but half wakened from a dream, fell fast asleep again.

The night was not far advanced when Morâd Sent priwas feized and bound. Before day-light appeared, Agra he and his favourite were mounted on an elephant, in a covered amari or castle, and sent off under an efcort to Agra. Fearing that some attempts might be made to rescue them, Aurungzêbe ordered three other elephants to be fent off before them, attended by guards to elude pursuers. The precaution was unnecessary. Mankind forlook Morâd with his fortune. In action, in the manly exercises of the field, he had many admirers; but the accomplishments of his mind acquired him but few friends; and even those whom he favoured with his generosity, were disgusted at his haughtiness. He fell by attempting to be artful. Had he followed, in his designs against his brother, the natural bias of his own intrepid mind, the people were divided, as long as two princes continued in the field. Aurungzêbe, with his caution, was rapid in his defigns. He knew how to use as well as how to gain a victory. His sufpicious temper faw peril riling from delay; and therefore, notwithstanding the folstitial rains were at their height, and the country deluged with water, he prepared to move toward Lahore with all his forces

A D

Apprehending that his not affuming the name Aurungof Emperor, would be confidered by mankind as "hounts a tacit acknowledgment of the injultice of his h proceedings, he relolved to exalt the Imperial throne. umbrella over his head. His affected felf denial upon former occasions, stood at present in the way of his defigns. He was ashamed to take upon himself an honour which, from motives of religion, he had pretended before to reject. His most intimate friends knew, however, the secret thoughts of his mind. They infinuated to the nobles, that Aurungzêbe, from declining so long to ascend the throne, seemed to have still an intention of retiring from the world, that, in his zeal for religion, he might be induced to leave his friends to the refentment of his enemies; that therefore it was the business of all to force upon him, in a manner, a power necessary to their own fafety. They waited upon him in a body. He seemed disappointed, and even offended at their proposal. At length he suffered himself to be persuaded. "You are," said he, "resolved to facrifice my love of retirement to your own ease. But be it so; God will, perhaps, give me that tranquillity upon the throne, which I hoped to find in a cell; and if less of my time shall be employed in prayer, more of it will be spent in good actions. I should only have an inclination for virtuous deeds in my retreat, but, as Cc

emperor

Vol. III.

as the labour of business to his brother. Aurungzêbe, to support his ambitious views, was obliged to have recourse to arts which stamp his character with meanness, whilst they prove the abilities of his mind.

A D

Morâd, with many commendable qualities, on the was also distinguished by disgusting weaknesses. Instead of that haughty pride which recommends itself in its very absurdities, he was pussed up with unmanly vanity. A stranger to his own merit in those things in which he excelled in the opinion of the world, he arrogated to himself praise in provinces for which nature had altogether rendered him unfit. With an open and generous disposition, he wished to be thought artful and fevere; and blind to his abilities in the field, he endeavoured to carry the palm in the cabinet. To mention to him the designs of his brother, was a fatire upon his penetration; to fuggest to him caution, was, in his eyes, an accusation of his courage. He looked not around him into the conduct of others; and he abhorred every enquiry into his own. Under the shadow of this careless and arrogant vanity in Morâd, his brother fabricated at leisure his own designs. But his excessive eagerness to heighten the deceit, was the means of its being discovered. Morâd himfelf faw through the veil of flattery which he had laid over his ambitious views; but the vanity, which at first induced him to give faith to Aurungzêbe, made him afterwards despise his infincerity. He fell at last a victim to his own arrogant folly.

Aurungzêbe, however, owed not altogether and rise his success either to his own hypocrisy, or to the weakness of his brother. Naturally averse to pomp and magnificence, he affected all his life that humble deportment which brings the prince near to the people. Without being virtuous from principle,

C c 2

any of his brothers, whom Fortune might place on the throne.

That specious appearance, which the actions of a man of religion must wear in the eyes of the world, facilitated his schemes. In his long march of Au rungzebe. from the Decan, his troops observed a most exact discipline. No ravages were committed; no injustice done. When he sat down with his army in a field of corn, he either paid the estimated value to the owners, or gave a receipt for it as a part of the revenue due to the crown. "Though I am forced," faid he, " into a war by the machinations of Dara, I cannot confider myself as in an enemy's country." When the people came to decide their differences before him, he remanded them to the officers of the empire. "Fortune," he was heard to fay, " may change the prince, but the fundamental laws of the state must not be changed. Should I fail in my present enterprise," continued he to the petitioners, " my judgment would not avail you, nay, it would do you harm with the conquerors. But if I shall succeed in my undertakings, I promise to acquiesce in the determinations of the Imperial judges." These moderate sentiments contributed to reconcile the minds of the people to his government; and even induced them to ascribe the most wicked of his actions to necessity.

When the news of his having mounted the Intellithrone arrived at Agra, the governor filled every gence corner of the city with public demonstrations of joy. The people were rather struck with surprize, than moved with gladness. They, however, observed that cautious silence which suits the subjects of despotism. The noise of the artillery on the walls of the citadel, faluted the old emperor's ears, and rouzed him from the melancholy into which he had been plunged by misfortunes.

1658.

his grandfather. The emperor, flarting from his reverse at the name of Mahommed, replied to the messenger, " If he comes as an enemy, I have no power to prevent him. if as a friend, I have now no crown to bestow;" alluding to his offer to Mahommed, when that prince leized the citadel. The mellenger told him, That Mahommed wished only to be admitted to communicate to the emperor the reasons which induced his father to mount the throne. "Fathers," replied Shaw Jehán, " have been dethroned by their fons, but to infult the misfortunes of a parent, was left for Aurungzebe. What reason but his ambition has the rebel for affirming the empire? To listen to his excules, would be to acknowledge the justice of his conduct, by shewing, by my weakness, that I could no longer wield the sceptre which he has struck from my hand."—Mahommed retired.

Though the power of Shaw Jehan had, in a Regeargreat measure, terminated with the sickness which ons rouzed his fons to arms, his reign may be faid to have continued till Aurungzêbe mounted the throne near Delhi. He held the sceptre of India thirty folar years, five months and two days; and when he was dethroned, he had arrived at the fixty-feventh year of his age. The means by which Shaw Jehan obtained the empire of the Moguls, were not more justifiable than those which he so much blamed in Aurungzêbe. He rebelled against his father, and he permitted his relations to be facrificed to his fears. When he had fecured to himself the undisturbed possession of the empire, he became an excellent and a humane, as well as an able prince During his long reign, we hear of no private assassinations, no public executions, no arbitrary injustice, no oppression. Rebellion, which generally rifes from tyranny, was unknown; univerfal

A D. 1859 The 1-68 A D 1658. Ilig 1068

universal peace was established on the undersating justice and clemency of the emperor His government was vigorous without feverity, impartial, dignified, and fudden in its determinations. He received complaints with well weighed cauti on, and never passed judgment till both parties were heard. His pervading eye travelled to the most distant corners of his empire. He traced oppression to its most secret retreats, and, though a lover of money, no fum could protect offenders from his justice. These and robbery were, by his prudent regulations, eradicated from his extensive empire The governors of the provinces were directed by an edict, to pay out of their private fortunes, the loller of the subject in that way. which were afcertained upon oath in a court of justice. The fentence of the judge was a warrant for the money upon the Subas, which they were forced immediately to pay, otherwise they were, upon complaint to the emperor, turned out of their governments, and feverely fined

on the

Shaw lehan was handsome in his person, ac tive in all the manly exercises, affable and agreeable in his convertation. He did not, like his father, descend too much from the dignity of a prince, nor involve himfelf in an obscure distance and referve. Warm in his conflitution, he loved the company of women; though the charms of the daughter of Afiph, the mother of almost all his children, kept policilion of his affections during her life. His learning was fuch as was common among the princes of the house of Ti mur, a thorough knowledge of the Arabian and Perfian languages, the arts of writing and speak ing with elegance and propriety, the fludy of hiltory, of the Coran, of the laws and canons of his prede ceffors, of the art of government, financiering, and of the ancient ulages of the empire. Though echofed reign

A A.

1658 Hig 1068.

eclipsed by the extraordinary abilities of Mohâbet in war, he was a good general, and an excellent foldier. His reputation was fo high in that respect, that he not only kept his own dominions in peace at home, but even made extensive conquests abroad. Rapid in all his measures, he crushed rebellion before it deserved the name; for to suspect it in any man, was with him to be prepared. A lover of pleasure, without being its flave, he never neglected business for sensuality; and industry, wealth and commerce flourished under the certain protection and vigilance of his government. Had he not fallen in some measure from the state of reason and sensibility, by the rage of that cruel disorder which he inherited from his father, he might have descended from the throne to his grave, and have crowned his latter days with that lustre which had covered his reign. But his mind was weakened by difease; and his age was devoted to melancholy and mifery.

Shaw Jehân was, upon the whole, a great, and and cha-if we draw a verl over his accession to the throne, Shaw Jea good prince. But we must ascribe his cruelty in han a great measure to necessity, and the manners of his country. Ambition, among the princes of the East, is joined with the stronger passion of fear. Self-preservation drives them on to desperate measures; submission will not avail, and they must owe their lives to their valour. The throne itself is no fecurity to the reigning prince, in a country where the fuccession is not fixed by acknowledged and established rules. Revolution and change present themselves to his imagination; till affassination steps in, and effectually relieves him from his terrors. Shaw Jehân was not naturally cruel; but he loved his own life better than the lives of his relations. To murder, or to be murdered, was the alternative offered to him by fortune. throne or a grave terminated his prospects on either

AURUNGZEBE,

CHAP. I.

Reflections—Misfortunes of Solimân Shekô—Hist flight to Serinagûr—Distress, irresolution, and flight of Dara—He quits the Suttuluz—the Beat —and Lahore—Aurungzêbe returns—Preparations and march of Suja—Approach of Aurungzêbe—The battle of Kidgwâ—Defeat and flight of Suja—Unaccountable conduct of the Marâja—His flight—Aurungzêbe arrives at Agra—Writes to his father.

HE confinement of the emperor, and the feizure of the person of Morâd, opened a fair sield for the ambition of Aurungzêbe. To disguise any longer his serious designs on the empire, would, from the improbability of the thing, be imprudent. He however covered his love of power with professions of necessity; and still lamented the occasion which had burdened his head with a crown. This specious conduct, though too obvious in its design to deceive, derived an advantage from its modest appearance; and men forgot his deviations from virtue, in the opinion that he was assumed of his crimes. Having subdued the passion of vanity before he gave the

A D. 1658 Hig. 1068.

ŗ

ing cause. He decamped, but his evil stars prevailed. He changed his courle, and directed his march to Lahore.

A D. 1658. Hig

The undecifive measures of Soliman were known to his troops. They began to despise the deserted authority of one who could not persevere in any plan. All discipline became relaxed The independence of the foldier role with his contempt of his general Regularity was lost in licentiousness, confusion, rapine and insolence prevailed; and the whole army, instead of obeying the prince, placed a merit in their not deferting his cause. That intrepidity and firmness which was necessary to the occasion, no longer remained in Solimân. His standard had been left by those whom he thought his best friends, and a melancholy distrust prevailed in his mind. To correct the licence of the foldiery, was to lose their support. He permitted them, with a vain hope of conciliating their affections, to ravage the country at large. But when they had loaded themselves with spoil, they deferted in whole squadrons, to secure their wealth at home, and to avoid the doubtful chance of war.

Destitute of all authority, the prince moved by his aralong, fullen and filent, at the head of an army converted into a mob of banditti. He issued out no orders, under a certainty of their not being obeyed, and he even looked with indifference on the gradual decline in the number of his followers. Every morning presented to his eyes, at a distance, whole squadrons that had quitted his camp in the night. There only remained at last four thousand miserable wretches, who had suffered themselves to be robbed of their booty. Fear, and not attachment, kept these round the standard of Solimân. Their rapine had converted the whole country into an enemy, and there was no longer noise. One day, as the prince wandered from his party, he entered a narrow valley formed by one of the flicams which fall headlong from the impaffable mountains that environ Scrinagûi. In 🥆 the centre of the valley there flood a mound almost covered with trees; through the branches of which appeared undistinctly what seemed an Indian pagod. The flicam, divided into two, furiounded the mound, and appeared to have worn away the foundations of the rock, on which the building flood; which circumflance rendered it inaccessible on every side. Soliman, pleased with this romantic scene, rode forward, and found that what he had mistaken for a temple, was a house of pleasure belonging to the Raja. Thither that prince often retired, with a few attendants, to enjoy the company of some Cashiniian women of exquifite beauty. Some of these were walking on the terrace when Soliman approached. He was struck with their persons; but he instantly retired.

When he returned to the refidence of the Raja, in Securihe mentioned his adventure to that prince. His con- gurntenance was fuddenly overcast, and he remained for some time filent. He at length said, " All my dominions have I given up to Solimân, yet he has intruded upon one little valley which I releaved for myfelf." Solimân excufed his conduct by his ignorance; but though the Raja pretended to be fatisfied, there appeared from that day forward a manifest change in his behaviour. He became cold and distant; and he was discontented and agitated when the fugitive prince came before him. Jealoufy, however, was not the cause of this alteration. Aurungzêbe had applied to him, through his emissaries; and the honour of that prince contended with his avarice Soliman became uneafy at the doubtful gloom which hung

ΛD

A D 1658 Ille 106% on his countenance. He encamped, with his few followers, at some distance from the Raja's residence, and he began to watch narrowly the conduct of a prince, whom he still called his protector and friend

Irre oluti

When Soliman entered the mountains of Se rinagur, he dispatched a messenger with the news of his misfortunes to his father Dara prince was encamped, with a confiderable army. on the banks of the Suttuluz When he receiv ed the letters of his fon, he shut himself up in his tent and gave way to melancholy reflections on his own misfortunes. The imprisonment of his father was an event, which, as it was expected, did not furorize him, but the defertion of the victorion army under his fon was a fevere stroke to his deciming fortunes He even had conceived hopes from the presence of Soliman, whose acti vity and fame in war-might revive the drooping foirits of his party But he was thut up within impervious mountains, and the enemy had oc cupied all the passes. Dara was left to his own relources and they failed, in the distressed fitua tion of his mind. He reflected on the past with repret, he looked forward to the future with Agitated by various passions, he could fix upon no determined expedient to extricate him felf from his misfortune and a panic began to feize his troops from the irresolute undecisiveness of his conduct of Dard

Aurungzêbe, who had his sples in the camp of Dara, was no stranger to the situation of his mind lo add to his panic, he marched from harnal on the sifteenth of August, and directed his course toward Lahore. Dara, who had remained irresolute on the banks of the Suttuluz, decamped, upon the news of the enemy's approach, with precipitation The advanced guard of Aurungzêbe passed the river without opposition; and Dara fat down with his army behind the Bea, on the road to Lahore, to which city he himself soon after retired, leaving the troops under the conduct of Daood Chan, an able and experienced officer. Dara had great refources in the provinces behind Lahore. The governors had full remained faithful to the old emperor; the revenues of the preceding year had not been paid; and the prince found a confiderable fum in the Imperial treatury at Lahore. He foon raifed twenty thousand borte and his activity had begun tochangethe aspect of lessaffans. But he had hitherto been unfuccefull and he judged of the future by the pall. He was diffurned by the news of the approach of a part of the army of Aurungzêbe, who, having constructed a bridge on the Suttuluz, were on full march to the Bea.

A D. 1658

Hip.

1068

Daood, whom Dara had left at the head of the He retroops on the Bea, had lined the banks with ar-from the tillery, and thrown up entrenchments and re-Bea doubts, with a firm affurance of stopping the progress of the enemy. The ramy seaton was now come on, and he was under no apprchenfions of not being able to keep the enemy for five months at bay. The northern provinces might, in the mean time, furnish Dara with an army of hardy foldiers. Mohâbet, who commanded in Cabul, was in his interest, and he rivalled his predecesfor of the same name in his abilities in war. But the evil genius of Dara prevailed. He fent orders to Daôod to quit his post. That officer was astonished: he sent a remonstrance against the measure to the prince, and the jealous mind of Dara suspected his fidelity. Positive orders were fent: Daôod reluctantly obeyed The prince, finding himself wrong in his suspicions, repented of his conduct. He flew into a violent passion against the accusers of Dasod, and he ordered that officer back to his post. It was now too late. The advanced guard of the enemy had crossed the Bea, and Aurungzebe, with the main body, arrived on the Suttuluz on the twen to fish of Auruns.

Helitates about giv ing battle

Dara, reflecting on the folly of his past con duct, and the pressure of the present time, was thrown into the utmost consternation Jehân, who commanded the enemy, had been reinforced by a body of troops and a train of ar tillery from the main body Daood advised the prince to give battle, to confirm the courage of his troops by the defeat of a force to much inferior in point of numbers. The prince was oblimate He alleged, that though his army was more nu merous than the enemy, they were not equal to them in discipline, that, suddenly gathered toge ther, they had not been habituated to danger: and that to engage the rebels, for fo he affected to call the abettors of Aurungzêbe, would be to haften the completion of their wishes, by giving them an easy victory " But, Dacod " conti nued he, " I am not only unfortunate, but weak Had I followed your advice, and kept possession of the Suttuluz and Bea, I might have at least fuspended, for some months, the fate of the em But I, who have been fo often deceived by my brothers, am become distrustful of my friends " and flies f m La hore. Daood endeavoured to comfort the prince, by observing, that though the reputation of keeping a victorious army at bay during the rainy season, might contribute to change the face of affairs, yet still there were hopes. That to remain at Lahore without obtaining a victory, would be as improper as it appeared impossible, that still they had rivers which might be desended against the whole force of Aurungzebe, and that if the prince should be pleased

A D.

1658 Hig

1068

pleased to blot all unworthy suspicions from his mind, he himself would undertake to give him fufficient time to collect a force in the provinces beyond the Indus. Dara embraced him with tears, and began to retreat. The aimy, discouraged at the apparent irrefolution of their commander, began to fear for themselves. lost all confidence in the abilities of the prince, they saw nothing before them but distress to him, and ruin to themselves. They deserted in whole fquadrons; and the unfortunate Dara faw his numbers hourly diminishing as he advanced toward Moultan. The van of the enemy under Chan Jehân hung close on the heels of the fugitive, and his friends throughout the empire gave all their hopes to the wind.

Aurungzêbe arriving on the Suttuluz, was in- Several formed of the flight of Dara. His apprehensions fubmit from that quarter vanished, and he encamped for ten days on the banks of the river, to refresh his army. The Maraja, who had given the first battle to Aurungzêbe, near the city of Ugein, thinking the affairs of Dara desperate, came to the camp with a tender of his allegiance. A number of the nobility, who had hitherto remained firm to the old emperor, hastened to the court of the new, and prostrated themselves at the soot of the throne. Aurungzêbe received them with unconcern, and told them that the season of forgiveness was past. "When Fortune," faid he, "hung doubtful over my arms, you either abetted my enemies, or waited in security for the decision of Fate concerning the empire. These," pointing to his nobles, " ferved me in my distress. I reward them with my confidence, but I grant you, in pardoning your lives, a greater favour than those I conferred on them. Necessity gives me your obedience: let your generosity convince me that you are frage. My enemies have difficulted the

A D 1658 111g 1068 treasures of the empire, and I, who hope long to manage its affairs, will not impoverish it by heavy exactions I our wealth is great Justice, which in affairs of state follows fortune, gives me a right to the whole, but my modera tion only claims a part? They paid large sums to the treasury, and a general indemnity passed, under the seals of the empire.

to Au

The haughty fourit of the Maraia revolted at the indienity of a cold reception. He however had cone too far to recede. Naturally averse to the fubile character of Aurungzebe, he had actu ally performed the promife which he had made to his high forrited wife after his defeat lected an army, and was about to purfue Au rungzêbe, when the misfortunes of Dara began The lofs of the battle near Agra staggered his allegiance, he became more irresolute after the imprisonment of Shaw Johan, and the flight of Dara to Lahore threw him at the feet of the new emperor He told Aurungzebe. That being of a religion which inculcated the belief of a Providence as superintending over human affairs. he was now under no doubts concerning the fide on which the gods had declared themselves were therefore, continued he, a kind of impiety to oppose him whom Heaven has placed on the throne. Aurungzêbe pleafantly replied, ' I am g'ad to owe to the religion what I hoped not from the love of Jeffwint Singh '

la lar

the love of Jesswint Singh'

The visier Meer Jumla, who at the beginning of the rebellion had submitted to a political imprisonment in the Decan, seeing the affairs of Au continuance of his double conduct, broke his seeing the analysis of Au continuance of his double conduct, broke his seeing the analysis of the new emperor received him with every mark of honour and affection. He presented him with elephants, elephants, horses, riches, dresses, and arms; but of his whole fortune, which, to keep up appearances, had been confiscated, he only returned about fifty thousand roupees. "In serving the state," \ faid Aurungzêbe, "I have expended your foitune; but you, in scrving it again, may acquire another." Jumla made no reply, but feemed fatisfied with his escape from the critical situation in which he had been plunged by the civil war. A field foon presented itself to his abilities, and his fortune was amply restored by the unabating favour of his fovereign.

111g

Intelligence arriving in the Imperial camp that AurungDara had taken the route of Moultan, Aurungmarches zêbe crossed the Suttuluz on the fifth of Septem- to Moulber. He advanced with rapid marches toward tan that city, wishing to put an end to the war in the north. Chan Jehan, who commanded the vanguard, arriving in Moultan, the unfortunate prince fled toward Bicker, and the mountains beyond the Indus In vain had it been remonstrated to him by his followers, that he ought to have taken the route of Cabul. Mohâbet, who had been always averse to Aurungzêbe, was at the head of a disciplined army in that province. Aids might be drawn from the western Tartary; there was even a prospect of Persia's espousing the cause of Dara. Soldiers of fortune, men adapted by their manners and climate for the field, would flock to his flandard. But Fortune had forfaken Dara, and she was followed by Prudence. Aurungzêbe, when he first heard of the course of his brother's flight, cried out, in an ecstacy of joy, "That the war was at an end" He detached eight thousand horse, under the conduct of Meer Baba, after the fugitive, and moved his camp on his return toward Agia.

Many

Many causes concurred in making Aurung zebe anxious to return to Agra The force left in that city was fmall, and Shaifts, who com manded there, was no great foldier The troops. his return though filent, had not yet reconciled their minds to the force used against the person of Morad, and they were, in some measure, shocked at the emperor's breach of faith to a friend as well as a brother Shaw Jehan, though closely confined, had his emissaries and friends every where. Whis pers concerning the unworthy usage of that great prince were carried round, and heard with atten Many of the nobles, raifed by his favour, respected him still for what he had been and the empire, in general, which had flourished under his government, lamented the cloud which had fettled on the latter end of a life of renown. The Maraia was full his friend Proud and haughty beyond measure, he could not forget his defeat by Aurungzêbe, and he was chagrined at the cold reception which that prince had lately given to his proffered allegiance Joy Singh, who had in a manner betrayed Soliman, thought also that he was not well requited for his fervices He was full attached to Shaw Jehan whose open and manly behaviour upon every occasion he compared with advantage to the cold duplicity of his ion

Prepura trons

Suja, who first appeared in arms against Dara, faw now a more dangerous enemy in another The lofs which he had fultained against Soliman was foon recovered in the 11ch and populous kingdom of Bengal He faw a new cloud forming which was to burft upon him, and he prepared himself against the storm He collected an army with his usual activity, and was on the point of taking the route of Agra, to relieve his father from confinement To deceive Aurung zêbe, he had congratulated that prince on his mounting mounting the throne at Delhi; he owned his title, and only solicited for a continuance of his government over Bengal. The emperor was not to be deceived. He faw the views of mankind in their fituation and character, and took professions of friendship from rivals for mere sounds. however had behaved with his usual civility to the messenger of Suja. He pretended to be anxious about knowing the state of his health, and he made a minute inquiry concerning his children and family. " As for a new commission to my brother," faid he, " it is at once unnecessary and improper. I myself am but my father's vicegerent in the empire; and I derive my whole power from those insirmities which have rendered the emperor unfit for the business of the state." This answer, though not satisfactory, amused Suja, and furnished an opportunity for Aurungzêbe to break the power of Dara, and to establish his own authority.

Suja, at length, threw off the mask; from a of Suja. subject to Aurungzêbe, he became his competitor for the empire. He begun his march with a numerous army, accustoming them to the manœuvies of the field as he moved. His brother, who expected the storm, was not surprised at its approach. He remained but four days at Moultân. His son Mahommed was made governor of that province; that of Punjab was conferred on Chillulla. He outstripped his army in expedition; and on the twenty-fourth of October he entered Lahore. He arrived at Delhi on the twentyfirst of November, and notwithstanding the presfure of his affairs in the fouth, he celebrated his birth-day in that city, having entered the fortyfirst year of his age. The splendid and numerous appearance of the nobility on that occasion convinced Aurungzêbe, who always made judicious observations

A D 1658 Hig 1068 A D 1658 Hig 1069. observations on the behaviour of mankind, that he was firmly established on the throne which he had usurped. The nobles most remarkable for their penetration, were the first to pay their respects they saw the abilities of the reigning prince, they were no strangers to the inferiority of his brothers, and they considered Fortune as only another name for Prudence Dadod, who had adhered hitherto to Dara, forsook that prince when he took, contrary to his advice, the route of Bicker. He threw himself at the seet of Aurungzebe, who, knowing his abilities, received him with distinction, and raised him to the rank of six thousand horse.

Preparations of Au ung

During the few days which Aurungzêbe passed at Delhi, he informed himself minutely of the force and refources of Suia. That prince was more formidable than the emperor had imagined To infure fuccess, he ordered his fon Mahommed to join him with the army from Moultan, and he resolved to avail himself of the great parts of That lord had been fent, foon after his arrival at court, to fettle the affairs of Chandeilla and Guzerat, and he was ordered to return with fome of the veteran troops stationed on the fouth ern frontiers of the empire The emperor, in the mean time, having arrived at Agra, rein forced the garrison of that city under Shaista. being apprehensive of an invasion under prince Soliman, from the mountains of Sermagur himself took immediately the field, and moved flowly down the Jumna, in hourly expectations of reinforcements from the north and well.

Sule on full march. Suja, in the mean time, with a numerous army, was in full march toward the capital He arrived at Allahabâd, and having remained a few days in the environs of that place, he renewed his march, and encamped his army, in a strong position, at a place

A D

1659 Hie.

rosq.

a place called Kidgwâ, about thirty miles from Allahabâd. Distrustful of the discipline of his army, he entrenched himfelf, and waited for the arrival of Aurungzêbe, whom he wished to engage with an advantage which might supply the inferiority of his troops, in point of courage and hardiness. But Aurungzebe studiously protract-His march was defignedly flow, till ed the time. he was joined by his fon Mahoinmed with the troops of the north. He then moved forward with great expedition, Mahommed commanding the van, confishing of five thousand chosen horse. Suja was assonished at this sudden vigour in his brother's measures; he began to fortily his camp, and to make dispositions for receiving the enemy with warmth.

The prince Mahommed, naturally full of fire, Fortifies exceeded his orders. He pressed onward with the van, eager for a fight of the enemy, and when he presented himself before Suja, the emperor, with the army and artillery, was forty miles in the He rode along the lines of the enemy, and, with unpardonable rafhness, seemed to provoke them to battle. Suja, however, for what cause is uncertain, took no advantage of his temerity. The prince at length encamped his finall army; and dispatched a messenger with his observations on the position and strength of the enemy. rungzêbe was offended at the rashness of his son. He was, however, gentle in his reproof. "When you shall possess the empire, Mahommed," said he, " you must protect it with more caution monarch ought to be a general rather than a partizan, and few forget folly in valour." haughty spirit of the prince was impatient of rebuke. Active, gallant, and fiery, he despised the flow dictates of Prudence; and would rather

1619-11 g owe his fame to his fword, than to political

The Imperial standard came in sight on the thirteenth of January, 1600, and Aurungzêbe Acruse she offers encamped his army, leaving an extensive plain. very fit for a battle, between him and the lines of Sura He drew up his army, on the morning of the fifteenth, in two lines, advancing his artillery some paces in the front About twelve o'clock the cannon began to open on both fides Sura had placed his artillery on a rifing ground, and hatteries were well ferved. He fcoured the enemy's lines, and Aurungzebe, who durft not attack the trenches, was obliged to return with some loss to his camp. Suiz took no advantage of the retreat of his brother tired within his lines, and imprudently neglected to keep possession of the rising ground on the right, from which his artillery had played with fuch advantage on the enemy Meer Jumla, who had arrived a few days before from the Decan, observed the negligence of Suja He represented the advantage which Fortune had offered to Aurungzêbe, and that prince ordered him to take possession of the hill in the night Before morn ing appeared, Jumla threw up a redoubt on the place and lined it with cannon, which were covered with a strong party of spearmen

The battle begins

wered with a firong party of spearmen.

When day light appeared, Jumla ordered his battery on the hill to open. The tents of Suja were in the range of the shot, and the prince was obliged immediately to strike them, and to move his quarters to the lest. Aurungzebe, who perceived the commotion in the enemy's camp, on account of the unexpected fire from the battery, thought this a proper opportunity to make a general assault. His army were already formed; and he ordered his elephants to advance with all expedition

1659 Hig.

1069

expedition to tread down the entrenchments. A strong body of cavalry sustained the charge. The defendants, already in confusion, made but a faint refistance. The elephants foon levelled the entrenchment, and the horse poured into the Flight, confusion, and flaughter prevail-Aurungzêbe, mounted on a lofty elephant, faw the appearance of victory on every fide. pushed forward into the centre, to render complete the advantage which he had already obtain-But Fortune took a sudden change; and inevitable ruin feemed to overwhelm him and his affairs

The Maraja, Jeffwint Singh, having made his Treachery peace with Aurungzêbe, had joined that prince of the with his native troops. His defeat at Ugein remained still fresh in his mind, and he longed to recover the laurels which he had lost in that unfortunate field. He had received orders to advance with his Rajaputs; and he even made a shew of attacking the enemy. But when he saw the emperor entering their camp, he fuddenly turned, and fled with all his forces. Moguls, however, followed not his example. Aurungzêbe carried forward on his elephant the Imperial standard, and they were assumed to leave it to the enemy. Jesswint, disappointed in his aim of drawing his party to flight by his own, fell suddenly on the rear of the line. He feized upon the baggage, and put fervants and women to the fword, without either distinction or mercy The noise of the flaughter behind was carried to the front, which was engaged with Suja in the centre of his camp. Some fled to fave their wives, and, cowards, wanting only an example, they were followed by thousands. lines began to thin apace, the attack was fuftained

A D 1659-11 g. 1059

t on of

Sula

tained with less vigour, and the enemy acquired courage

Aurungzebe exhibited upon the occasion, that resolute sirmness which always rules above mis To fly was certain ruin, to remain, an almost certain death. He sat alost on his elephant, in full possession of his own mind, and he feemed not to know that any difaster had hapnened in the rear The enemy, who had been tumulfuoully hurrying out of the camp, returned with vigour to the charge upon the fudden change in the face of affairs Suia, with an undaunted countenance, led the attack, flanding castle, upon an enormous elephant eve fell upon his brother, he ordered his driver to direct the furious animal that way. One of the principal officers of Aurungzube, who was also mounted on an elephant, perceiving the in tention of Suja, rushed in before the prince. He was overthrown in the first shock, but the ele phant of Suia suffered so much in the concussion. that the animal flood trembling through every joint, having loft all fense of command, and almost the power of motion. The disappointed prince feemed enraged at his fortune, but the elephant of one of his nobles advanced against that of the emperor, and in the first shock, the latter animal fell upon his knees, and it was with great difficulty he recovered himfelf rungzêbe had one foot out of the callle, ready to The crown of India hovered on the resolution of a moment. Meer Jumla was near. " Stop," faid he, turning sternly to Aurungzebe, " you descend from the throne. The emperor, who was now composed, seemed to fmile at the reproof Whilft the animals con tinued to engage, the markiman, who fat behind him, that the adversary a driver, but the enraged elephant elephant continued, notwithstanding, to fight. Aurungzêbe was now in imminent danger, when he was delivered from destruction by the resolution of his driver. He threw hanfelf dexteroufly on the neck of the other elephant, and carried him off, whilft his own place was supplied by one of the officers who fat behind the caffle. Another elephant, in the mean time, advanced against Aurungzêbe, but he had the good fortune to shoot the driver with his own hand.

A D

1069

The emperor now found that his own elephant, and of Aurungfrom the many shocks which he had received, zebe, was much weakened and dispirited. He began to be afraid that he could not even keep the animal in the field. To alight would be equal to flight itself. The elephant began to turn, and Aurungzêbe, whose resolution never sailed him in desperate situations, ordered the chains, which are always ready for binding him, to be locked round his feet. The emperor remained immoveable amidst the enemy; a thousand shot were aimed at him, a thousand arrows fell into the castle, but being in complete armour, he remained unhurt. Some of the nobles observing this daring behaviour in their prince, rushed forward to his rescue. They bore all before them in this last effort, and Suja, in the moment of victory, was beginning to give way. His elephant, disabled by the first shock, was not to be moved forward. Aliverdi, one of his friends, came with a horse; and Suja, in an evil hour, descended from his The fame conduct had ruined Dara. The elephant returning to the rear; with an empty castle, the army thought that the prince was flain; and they began to fly on every fide.

Aurungzêbe, who owed his victory to his own who obintrepidity, was in no condition to pursue the tains the victory. enemy. Night was now coming on; and he lay

A D 1659-111g 1069on the field under arms During the action, the Maraja had defeated the party left to defend the baggage, and loading camels with the booty. fent them off, under an escort He himself still hovered round the rear The proximity of the Imperial tents to the line, had hitherto protected them from being plundered by the Rajaputs. Night coming on, the Maraja advanced, and, about an hour after it was dark, fell upon the tents of Mahommed, who had remained with his father on the field A few, who defended the quarter of the prince, were cut off to a man. and the Rajaputs advanced to the Imperial tents, and feized upon every thing valuable within the fquare, putting every one that opposed them to the fword The night became a fcene of horror. confusion, and death Aurungzebe was not to be moved from the field, but he detached a part of the army to oppose the Maraja. When day appeared, the troops of Suja were no more to be feen, and the emperor, now convinced of his victory, turned his arms upon the Maraja That prince stood his ground A bloody battle en fued. The Rajaputs retreated, but they carried their booty away

Suj pur fed by Mahommed Suja fied with so much precipitation in the night, that he left all his tents, equipage, and artillery, on the field His army deferted him, and he even deferted his army He changed his clothes, he threw off every mark of distinction, and hurried forward to Patnalike a private man. He seared no enemy, but he was afraid of his friends When Fortune had forsaken him, he hoped not to retain their faith, for to deliver him to Aurungzebe would not only procure their fasty, but advance their interest. The sun was scarce up when Aurungzebe detached ten thou sand horse under his son Mahommed in pursuit of his brother. The enemy were fo much dissipated, that few were flain. The instructions of prince were to follow Suja. He arrived at Patna, and the unfortunate prince fled to Mongeer, hoping to derive from walls that fafety which he could not command in the field His courage, however, forfook him not in his distress. He had still resources in his own active mind; and the whole province of Bengal was devoted to his interest, from the strict justice and mildness of his government.

ΑD

1659 Hig.

1069

After the flight of the Maraja and the depar- Aurungture of Mahommed, the emperor called together greet to the nobility and principal officers of his army. his nobles He had marked, from his elephant, the particular behaviour of each. He punished some for cowardice; others he promoted for valour. His reproofs were strong and pointed, the praise he bestowed manly and just. He, at the same time, made a long speech from the throne. He assumed no merit to himself, he even gave up that of his army, and attributed his fuccess to Providence. He involved Heaven in his quarrel with his brothers; and made it the partner of his own guilt. This religious oration was received with bursts of applause. Mankind are in all ages and nations fuperstitious; and the bare profession of sanctity hides the blackest crimes from their Aurungzêbe, however, did not forget his temporal affairs in his devotion. Anxious for the reduction of Bengal, and for an end of the war with Suja, he detached a large body of horse under Meer Jumla, to reinforce Mahommed, whilst he himself took the route of the capital.

The Maraja, in the mean time, with his booty, A false readvanced to the walls of Agra. News of the port carridefeat of Aurungzêbe had already filled that ca- Agra. pital with furprize. The appearance of the Ra-fituation of affairs, would not read the letter. He gave it back to the messenger; and said, " If my son means to insult me, to know it would but add to my missortunes; if he treats me with affection and respect, why does he permit me to languish within these walls?"

7

A. D. 1659., Hig 1069.

Vol. III.

,Ec

AURUNG

AURUNGZEBE

CHAPI

Dara's flight to Bicker—He crosses the desert—Gains the governor of Guzerat—Marches toward Agra—Fortistes binsself at Asinere—Deceived—attacked—and totally deseated by Au
rungzebe—His unbeard of missortimes—Distress in the desert—Arrival at Tatta—Throws him self urder the protection of Jihon—Death of the Sultana—Throws himself kinder the Protection of Jihon—Death of the Sultana—Dara betrayed—Carried with ignoming through Delhi—Consined
at Chizerabád—Assassinated—Residenios

1659 11 x 1069. Dara filea to Bicker DARA having fled from Mouitan took the route of Bicker, beyond the Indus The Imperablits were close at his heels. His army fell off gradually in his flight. His affairs were deferrate, and their attachment gave way to perfonal fafety. Four thousand fill adhered to their colours, with which number. Dara encamped near Bicker, having garrifoned the place, and fub mitted it to the command-of a faithful friend. He had fearce pitched his tents, when the enemy came in fight. Though worn-out with fatigue, he was obliged to fly. He found boats by accident, and croffed the Indus with all his followers.

1659 Hig

1069

On the opposite shore stood the strong fortress of Sicar. Struck with the hard fate of Dara, the governor opened the gates. But it was not the business of the prince to shut himself up within walls, which at best could only protract misfortune. He reinforced the garrifon with a part of his troops; and left fome valuable effects under the protection of the governor.

Difincumbered, he betook himself to the open Meditates field, before he had even thought of the quarter to Persia, which he should direct his course. He vandered away in a melancholy mood. His faithful adherents, for only those whose attachment to his person overcame their own scars were now in his train, followed filently the path of a mafter whom they loved Having marched a few miles, the prince came to the place where the road parted into two; the one leading to Tatta, the other toward the Persian province of Chorassan. Starting from his reverse, he flood for some time irrefolute. On the one fide there was apparent rum; on the other, a certainty of personal fafety. But glory was blended with disgrace in the first; in the latter there was nothing but obfcurity and dishonour. When he weighed these things in his mind, the chariots, in which were his women, arrived His perplexity increased. The defart toward Persia was extensive and unhospitable, on the fide of India, his own misfortunes must overwhelm his family. He could not decide, and a melancholy filence prevailed

The favourite Sultana, feeing the undecifive but changes ness of Dara, at length put an end to his doubts. his course "Can the first of the race of Timui," she said, "he- to Tatta. sitate in this moment of distress? There is danger, but there may be also a throné on one side; but a frightful folitude, and the cold reception given around.

 \mathbb{E}_{e2}

A D

1659 Hig

1069

Timur, who had, often from views of conquest, penetrated into their almost inaccessible country. When perfuation failed, Dara endeavoured to work upon the pride of Jam. He proposed an alliance between his fon Sipper Shekô, the constant attendant of his missortunes, and the daughter of the Raja. The match did not take place. The few Mogul nobles who adhered to him, were so much dissatisfied with the proposal, on account of its inequality, that it was laid aside; and Dara proceeded to Ahmedabâd.

Shaw Nawaz, whose two daughters were mar- and arrives ried to Aurungzêbe and Morâd, had been lest by in Guzethe latter in the government of Guzerat, and kept rathis residence in Ahmedabâd. When Morâd was feized, Aurungzêbe fent a new commission to Shaw Nawaz, which that lord received, and governed his province in the name of the new emperor. He prepared to oppose Daia with all his forces. The match was unequal, and the prince, hemmed in with missortunes on every fide, began to despair. He, however, resolved to carry no longer round the empire a life obnoxious to mifery. He advanced with his few attendants; and, as the last resort, wrote a letter to the younger daughter of Shaw Nawaz, who was the wife of Morâd, and had been left with her father when the prince marched toward Agra. He recounted his own misfortunes, and compared them with those of her husband. "The enemy of both is one," faid he: " if the memory of the unfortunate Morâd still lives in the breast of his wife, she will persuade her father to favour Dara, who is oppressed by the same untoward fate !"

The princess, who had mouined incessantly for Gains over the misfortunes of her lord, whom she loved to the goverdistraction, burst into a slood of tears at the reception of the letter. She grasped at the fliadow

He delayed, that he might augment his forces; and lost the golden opportunity of icstoring his affairs by an act of boldness and intrepidity. Suja was, in the mean time, defeated; and Aurungzebe turned his whole force toward the storm which was brewing in the West.

AD. 1659. Hig 1069

The desertion of the Maraja had spread news Marches of the defeat and death of Aurungzebe to every toward Agra. corner of the empire. The agreeable intelligence He instantly marched toward came to Dara. Agra, to feize the capital before the arrival of Suja, who was faid to have conquered. In three days, the unfortunate prince was undeceived. Letters from different quarters brought him the particulars of the action, and of the complete victory obtained by his greatest foe. He was again thrown into perplexity. To proceed with so small a force was imprudent; to retreat, ruinous to his reputation. He had built his last hopes on his army; to retire, was to lofe them by defertion. Many Europeans were in his camp. He had gained them by large promifes; and they naturally loved that impartiality which he shewed indiferiminately to men of merit of all nations. His artillery was upon the best footing; and he was not destitute of able engineers. His soldiers, for the most part consisting of the troops of the empire stationed on the frontiers, were habituated to action. But they were too few in number; and their leader was destined for misfortune.

The Maraja, after plundering the Imperial Turns tocamp, declared his intentions of marching to Gu-dominions zerat with the spoil. Dara halted to take him up of the by his way. But the Indian had no ferious intentions of affifting effectually any branch of the house of Timur. An enthusiast in his own religion, he confidered all Mahommedans as his natural enemies. He abetted none of the princes through tor of the war, and to neward you for your neutrality, the government of Guzerat shall be added to that of your hereditary dominions."

1659. Hig

The letter had the intended effect on the Maraja. He preferred the proffered advantage to Dira. the gratitude of Dara, whose fortunes wore such a doubtful aspect. He broke off his correspondence with that prince, at the very time that he was buoyed up with the hopes of the junction of a great army with his own forces. A stranger to the motive of the Hindoo, he fent his fon Sipper Shekô to endeavour to prevail upon him to throw off his inactivity. The young prince was received at his capital with distinction and hospitality. He was, however, disappointed in his views. The Maraja would give no fatisfactory answer; and the prince returned to his father, who was greatly disconcerted by this new misfortune. He, however, resolved to hesitate no longer with his sate. He decamped, and marched in a direct line for Agra, and arrived at Ajmere, about eight days journey from that capital.

In the neighbourhood of Ajmere, the high-Dara for-road to the capital passes between two steep hills, each of which forms the point of an impassable ridge of mountains, which stretch far into the country on both fides, and separate the kingdom of Guzerat from the rest of Hindostan. Dava halted with his army in this pass. His high opinion of the European mode of war, which he imbibed from the English, French and Poituguese in his fervice, had rendered that prince fond of entrenchments. He had considered the appearance of fecurity, more than the movements of the human mind for armies often take entrenchments in no other light than as a proof of the superiority of the enemy. He threw up lines from hill to hill in

Hi Hi Yes his front, and strengthened them with artillery Aurungzebe, in the mean time, marched with an army to slop his progress, and arrived with great expedition in the neighbourhood of Ajmere When he came in fight of the entrenchments, he ordered his army to encamp, and he himself rode out to reconnourse the enemy

lım fint Ajece ε

Nothing could equal his aftonishment when he viewed, through a spy glass, the position of his The strength of the works was inconinstead of a common entrenchment cewable the prince had fortified himfelf with a ftrong rairpire, defended by bastions, a deep ditch and a double row of palifadoes, which extended fix miles acrofs a valley. Aurungzebe was per plexed beyond measure. He knew not how to An affault was evidently impracticable, to do nothing would derogate from that high opinion which he had already established in the minds of the people Every day would add to Dara's in fluence and party, and mankind, who always fide with the unfortunate, would attribute to ability what was the gift of chance. He called a council of the nobles. They differed in their opinions, much time wa spent in argument without coming to a decifive measure. They at last agreed upon an expedient. They knew that the spirit of Dara was impatient of insult, and they advised the emperor to draw out his forces, and to offer battle and to other battle.

Auru p z im offers ba the

In compliance with the advice of his nobles, he formed his line on the 23d of March 1659, and advanced with his artillery with n cannon shot of the camp. Dara continued within his lines, and Aurungsche began to fortify himself under the enemy s fire. He continued the work the whole night, and covered his men before day light appeared, notwithstanding his brother had falled thrice.

1659

Hig.

1069

thrice during that time. The fun was fcarce 11sen, when Debere, and some other nobles, 1sfued out of the camp, and advanced on full speed with five thousand hoise near the lines, hoping, by insulting him, to draw Daia from his lines. They paid dear for their temerity. The aitillery of the enemy being well ferved, galled the affailants fo much, that they retreated in disorder, and were glad to shelter themselves behind their own lines. These things remained in this doubtful fituation for feveral days. The army of Dara, having the country in their rear open, were in no want of provisions, and were, therefore, under no necessity of retreating, and it was impossible, without a long fiege, to overcome their almost impregnable lines.

Fortune, who never forsook Aurungzêbe, re-Hisstratalieved his anxiety upon this occasion. A petty gem Indian prince, who commanded three thousand of his native infantry in the Imperial army, informed himself of a narrow and steep path, by which men, accustomed to climb, might ascend the mountain on the right of Daia's lines. He communicated his information to the emperor, who was overloyed at the discovery. He made large promises to the Raja, should he gain, with a party, the fummit of the mountain, without alarming the enemy. Should he be fo fortunate as to fucceed in the attempt, he was ordered to make a fignal to the emperor from that fide of the mountain which was covered from Dara. When night came on, he marched with his troops. Having encountered many difficulties, he ascended the mountain, and the appointed fignal was ready to be shewn by the dawn of day.

Aurungzêbe never rested his hopes upon the to deceive fuccess of a fingle scheme. He had, during the night, planned the ruin of his brother's affairs, flaves of Aurungzebe. But now Fortune has returned to the threshold which leads to the presence of Dara. The accession of his faithful servants to his power, though not necessary to his affairs, will bring them to a more speedy conclusion. When, therefore, day-light shall appear, let the gate of the camp be opened to receive us, that we may have an opportunity of regaining, by our merit, the savour, of which we have been deprived by necessity. As soon as the sun shall arise, we look for admittance into the camp, with all our followers and silends."

This letter was thrown into the lines, by a Succeeds horseman on full speed. It was immediately carried to the prince; and with that credulity which is inherent in a fincere mind, he implicitly believed every thing which the letter contained. Shaw Nawaz in vain remonstrated to him, in the strongest terms, that there was danger in confiding in their sincerity. Dara was always averse to advice, and now he was rendered blind by the hopes of gaining such powerful chiefs to his party. He was obstinate, and determined to risque all on the faith of men, who had, a few months before, betrayed his fon He gave positive orders, that in the morning, that gate of the camp which looked toward the enemy should be thrown open, to receive the expected fugitives. He, at the same time, issued directions to all the officers, that care should be taken not to fire upon them as they advanced. Shaw Nawaz was highly diffatisfied, Mahommed Sherif, who commanded the forces, was astonished. The orders were peremptory, and they must be obeyed. They, however, resolved to sland upon their guard, and when morning came, they posted themselves, with several squadrons, without the lines.

A D. 1659 Hig 1069

The pressure of his missortunes at length awakened Dara from a melancholy reverse, in which he had flraved from the place where his camp had flood. He returned in manifest diffice to the order, and seemed to question every one with desert. his eyes, about the means of moving to fome place of lifety. A few bealts of burden were collected by his fervants, and the robbers, who had deferted and plundered his camp, had left to him the two elephants which he had brought from Amere. On these he placed all the essects which had eleaped the ravages of the Mahrattors; and a few oven found in a neighbouring field, dragged flowly away in covered carriages his women. The prince himfelf, with his fon Cipper Sheko, attended them on horseback, with an illmounted retinue of two or three hundred fervants and faithful adherents. He turned his face to the frightfal folitudes in which he had fuffered fo much before; but the parched deferts, which firetched themselves from Guzerat to the Indus, were less unhospitable to Dara than a brother's hands.

The prince foon airived in the territories of His great Raja Jám, whose hospitality alleviated his distress. He again applied to that chief for his aid, but he was deaf to the request. Dara promised largely, should Fortune again favour his cause; but she had taken her flight to return no more. -Jâm was too prudent to throw his own fate into the scale of the prince He became cold and reserved; and scemed, by his manner, to wish for the departure of his unfortunate guelt. He was again forced to encounter the hardsnips of the desert. The heat of the season had added to the natural sterility of these dreadful solitudes. There was no water to be found, not a blade of grass-to be feen. The air feemed, in some measure, on fire. $\mathbf{F} \mathbf{f}$ Vol. III.

A D.

1659. Hig

The active spirit of the emperor, was not, in the mean time, idle. So long as Dara lives, he must totter on his throne. He knew the route which his unfortunate brother had taken; but his troops would not purfue the fugitive through fuch a perilous way. He hoped that the hard-ships of the desert might prevent him from 1mbruing his hands in blood; but Dara must perish; and Aurungzêbe was resolved to be provided against every event of Fortune. He ordered some troops to march down along the Indus from Moultân; and the news of their approach came a few days after the arrival of Dara. The generous chiefs, who from compassion had resolved to fupport his cause, being not yet prepared to receive the enemy, advised him to fly into Persia, the frontiers of which were within four days march of the place at which he then resided.

He prepared for his slight; but Nadîra Bâna, Prepares the favourite Sultana, was dying. Spent with to Hy to fly to fatigue, overwhelmed with fickness, and worn out with misfortune, she was altogether incapable of the journey; and he could not leave her behind. She knew his fituation, and requested earnestly that they should move away. "Death," faid she, " will soon relieve the daughter of Purvez from her misfortunes; but let her not add to those of her lord" She could not prevail upon him to march whilst she was in such a situation; and he had, besides, placed great hopes in the friendship of Jihon Chan, a neighbouring chief of great power. Jihon had been twice faved from death by the interest of Dara. Shaw Jehân, who was an enemy to oppression, had ordered him to be, at two different times, profecuted for murder and treason, before the chief justice of the empire. That judge, upon the clearest proofs, condemned him twice to death; and, at the request of Dara, he Ff2 nificent robe, and threw the Imperial turban on the ground: then clothing himself in a mean habit, he lay down by his departed confort on the bed. In the evening one of his faithful fervants joined him with fifty horse. He was overjoyed at his arrival, and, starting up, took him in his arms, and laid, " My fituation, Gal Mahommed," for that was the officer's name, " is not without refource. Nadira, having forfaken the devoted Dara, has met with a part of that good fortune which was due to her virtues. You must, with your fifty horse, escort the body to Lahore, to the sepulchre of her great ancestors. rungzêbe himfelf will not refuse a grave to the family of Dara." The body was accordingly embalmed; and, being placed in a magnificent herse, was escorted to Lahore.

A D.

1659.

1069

Dara had not remained many days at the He is beresidence of Jihon, when intelligence was receiv- trayed by ed, that Chan Jehân, one of the principal generals of his brother, was advancing from Moultân, and that his van was already arrived in the neighbourhood. Dara resolved to make his escape into Persia. He called his servants together, and he took leave of Jihon. When he had proceeded about a mile on his way, he discovered Ithon coming after him, with about a thousand horse, on full speed. He imagined, that Jihon designed to escort him with these troops to Persia. He rode back by way of doing him honour; and, when he was about addressing his thanks to the treacherous chief, he was fuddenly furrounded " Villain!" said Daia, " and disarmed. for this I twice faved your life from the refentment of my father, when the elephants were standing over you waiting for orders to crush you death? But Justice will be satisfied, Heaven has revenged your crimes upon my head fome, declaring for fending him by another route to the castle of Gualiar; some, that he should be carried through the city, to convince mankind that he was fallen for ever. Many advised against a measure that might be full of danger from the humanity of the people; a few argued, that fuch conduct would degrade the dignityof the family of Timur. Others maintained, to whose opinion the emperor himself seemed to lean, that it was necessary he should pass through the capital, to astonish mankind with the absolute power and inyincible fortune of Aurungzêbe.

He

1659.

1060

The unfortunate prince, accordingly, accom-Carried panied by his son, entered Delhi on an elephant. with igno-This, fays a certain writer, was none of the fine through elephants of Ceylon and Pegu, which they were Delhi wont to ride with golden harness, embroidered covers, and magnificent canopies, to defend them from the fun. No, It was an old animal, dirty and lean, with a tattered cover, a pitiful feat, and the castle open on all sides to the winds. The splendid ornaments of his person were now vanished, like his good fortune. A dirty dress of coarse linen scarce covered his body from the weather; and his wretched turban was wrapt round with a scarf made of Cashmire wool. face, which formerly commanded respect with the manly regularity of its features, was now parched and shrivelled by being long exposed to the heat; and a few straggling locks, which appeared from his turban, presented a grey colour unsuitable to his years. In this wretched situation he entered Delhi; and, when the mob who crowded to the gates knew that it was Dara, they burst into loud complaints, and shed a slood of The streets were rendered almost impassable by the number of spectators; the shops were full of persons of all ages and degrees. The elephant

320 AD.

A D 1659 11 g 1669 elephant moved flowly, and the probless he made was marked to those who were distant by the advancing murmur among the people. Nothing was heard around but loud complaints against lortune, and curses on Aurungzebe. But none had the boldness to offer to rescue the unfortunate prince, though slightly guarded. I hey were quite unmanned by their forrow.

Confined in an igh bo ring village.

After wandering over the features of Dara, the eyes of the people fell on his fon opposed his innocence, his youth, his graceful person, his hopes and his quality, to the fate which impended over his head, and all were dif folved in grief The infectious forrow flew over the whole city, even the poorest people forfook their worl, and retired to fecret corners to weep Dara retained his dignity upon this trying He uttered not one word, but a fet tled melancholy feemed to dwell on his face unfortunate young prince was ready frequently to weep, being foftened by the complaints of the people, but his father checked him with a stern look, and he endeavoured to conceal his tears Dara, having been thus led through the princi pal streets of Delhi, was conducted to Chizerabad, a village four miles without the walls. He was locked up, with his fon in a mean apartment, in which he remained for fome days in hourly expectation of his death. Here he amused himself with writing instructions for his fon Soliman, having concealed an ink standish and some paper in one of the folds of his garment His anxiety to know the intentions of Aurungzêbe, some times broke in upon his melancholy amufements He appeared through the window to the guards, but they knew nothing of what passed at court He then enquired concerning an old devotee, who had formerly lived in a cell near the foot of the Imperial

Imperial garden at Delhi. One of the foldiers knew the old man, and the prince gave a billet to be carried to him, requelling some intelligence. "But even he, pcihaps," he faid, with a figh, " may have changed with the current of the times."

A D. 10/9

The traitor Jihon, in the mean time, made his the traiappearance at court, to claim the reward of his tor Jihon flain by the treachery. Aurungzêbe dignified him with a people title, and enriched him with prefents. Passing through the city of Delhi, he was pointed out to the mob, who, falling upon him near the gate which leads to I ahore, killed feven of his attendants. He himself escaped, but the country people rose upon him every where. They hunted him from place to place, till at length he met with his deleits, and was flain when he had almost reached the boundaries of his own government. The zeal of the people, however, proved fatal to Dara. The emperor, hearing of the tumult near the gate of Lahore, ordered the chief magistrate of the city, with his officers, to go to the place, and enquire into the cause of the disturbance. The mob fell upon the judge and his attendants. They fled to the palace, and the whole city was in an uproar.

Aurungzêbe, in dread of a general revolt, cal-Diffuib-led a council of his nobles. He had determined neces at Delhi, before to fend his brother to the fortress of Gualiâr, but now he was afraid of a rescue by the way. The minds of the people were strangely Their imprecations against his cruelty reached him in the midst of his guards; and he began, for the first time, to shew symptoms of political fear. He asked the advice of his lords. The majority seemed to be for sparing the life of Dara; and for sending him, under a strong guard, to the usual pusion of the Imperial family. Au-rungzêbe,

1/59 Hire 10/9

rungzêbe though not faussied, was about to vield to their opinion, when one Hakim, a Per sian by birth, with a design to gain the favour of the emperor, insisted that Dara should be put to death, as an apostate from the faith of Mahommed. The emperor pretended to be startled, and sud, "The thing is determined. I might have forgiven injuries done to inyself but those against religion. I cannot forgive." He immediately or dered a warrant to be issued to Nazir and Seis, two sierce Atgan chiefs, which impowered them to take off Dara that very night.

maften the

On the eleventh of September, about mid night, the unfortunate prince was alarmed with the noise of arms coming through the passage which led to his apartment. He flarted up, and knew immediately that his death approached He fearce had awakened his fon, who lay affeen on the carpet at his feet, when the affaffins burst open the door Dara seized a knife, which he had concealed to mend the reed with which he wrote. He flood in a corner of the room. The murderers did not immediately attack him. They ordered his fon to remove to the adjoining apart ment, but he clung round his father's knees Two of the affassins seized him, to force him away, when Dara, feeing Nazir standing at the door, begged to be indulged a few moments to take leave of his fon He fell upon his neck, and faid, " My dear fon, this separation is more af flicting than that between foul and body, which I am this moment to fuffer But should HE spare you-live. Heaven may preserve you to revenge my death, for his crimes shall not pass unpu nished I leave you to the protection of God My son, remember me.' A tear half started from his eye, when they were dragging the youth to the adjoining room He, however, re fumed fumed his wonted dignity and courage. "I beg one other favour, Nazir " he faid, " much time has not been lost by the last." He wrote a billet, and defined that it should be delivered to Aurungzêbe. But he took it back, and tore it, faying, " I have not been accustomed to ask favours of my enemies. He that muideis the father can have no compassion on the son "He then raised up his eyes in filence, and the assassins feemed to have forgot their office.

1069

During this time of dreadful suspence, the son, who is aswho lay bound in the next room, listened, expect- fashinated ing every moment to hear his father's dying groans. The affassins, in the mean time, urged on by Nazir, seized Dara by the hands and seet, and throwing him on the ground, prepared to firangle him. Deeming this an infamous death, he, with an effort, difincumbered his hand, and stabbed, with his pen-knife, one of the villains to the heart. The others, terrified, fled back, but as he was rifing from the floor, they fell upon him with their fwords. His fon, hearing the noise, though his hands were bound, burst open the door, and entered, when the murderers were fevering his father's head from his body. Nazir had the humanity to push back the youth into the other apartment, till this horrid operation was performed. The head of Dara was carried to Aurungzêbe, and the unfortunate young prince was left, during the remaining part of the night, flut up with his father's body. Next morning he was fent privately under a guard, to the castle of Gualiar.

Thus fell the unhappy Dara Shekô; a prince Reflecti-whose virtues deserved a better fate. But he was ons born to distress, and his imprudence often affisted the malignity of his fortune. Though destitute of the address which is necessary to gain mankind

16 9 111g 10'9 in general, he was much beloved by his family and domellies, and he was the darling of his father, who was often heard to fay. That all his other children were not half to dear to him as Dara This predilection in his favour was the fource of the misfortunes of both. The other princes envied the influence of Dara, and all their differences with, and every disappointment which they experienced from, their father, was laid to the account of their brother, who possessed all his confidence and effecin. Dara was certain ly realous of his brothers, whom he faw invested with too much power in their respective provinces. and his opposing their measures at court was the natural consequence of his fears. This mutual animofity being once kindled, all the princes looked forward to the death of their father with terror The feeds of civil war were long fown before they appeared, and the illness of the emperor was the figual to begin the charge, from the four corners of his dominions Dara had the post of advantage, but he was not a match in abilities to Aurungzêbe on his

Nazir, before day light appeared, was admit ted into the citadel to the emperor. That prince had remained all night in anxious expectation. Many of the nobles had expressed their high disfatisfaction at the measure of putting Dara to death, and he was assaud that the resolution, be fore it took effect, might be communicated to the people and army. He saw that he was supported only by his own abilities and the venality of his followers. The unbussed, by either interest or fear, looked with horror on the crimes which his ambition had already committed. They were disjusted at his cruelty to his father, and his injustice to his brothers, and they, wird indignation, saw hypocrify, and the worst kind

AURUNGZŁBE.

CHAP III

War against Suja—He is driven from Mongeer—and Raja Mabil—The prince Mahommed deferts to Suja—A muliny in the army—Quelled by the wher—Battle of Tanda—Artifice of Aurung
zehe—Mahommed leaves Suja—His impriforment and character—Suja driven from Bengal—His flight through the mountains of Tippera—Arrival at Arracan—Perfidy, avarice, and cruelty of the Raja—Musfortunes—resolution—bravery—and murder of Suja—Deplorable fate of his fa mily—Reslections

Hig 1069 R Hedi The fears of the emperor from the most for midable of his rivals, were extinguished with the life of Dara. The filence which accompanies the decisions of despotism, is an effectual prevention of tumult and confusion. The people, for some days, were strangers to the death of the prince, and his prior missfortunes had even lessened the regret, which his murder might have otherwise created in the minds of mankind. Misery had risen to its height, and the worst period it could have was in some degree fortunate. The conduct of the emperor contributed to obliterate his crimes. With an appearance of humanity and benevolence.

11 5

him from his post without bloodshed. The ridge of mountains to the right of the Ganges are. in their fertile valleys, possessed by petty, but inde pendent princes Jumla found means to draw thefe over to his party and they shewed to him a passage through their country, by which he could turn the rear of Suja Il wing, by way of blind. lest a considerable part of the army to fall down in the common route, along the river, he him felf, accompanied by the prince, entered the mountains and was heard of by Suja in his rear, when he expected to be attacked in front decamped with precipitation, but he arrived in the environs of Raja Mahil some days before Jum la iffued from the mountains. He fortified him felf in his camp and the vifier, who could make no impression without artillery, marched toward the left, to join the army coming down along the Ganges

Atk hinhs lie

The whole army having joined, the Imperial ist presented themselves before the lines of Suja The visier opened upon him with his artillery. and made feveral unfoccefsful affaults. During fix days he was repulled with flaughter, but Su ia durft not trust the effeminate natives of Ben gal in the open field against the Tartars of the north, who composed the greater part of the Im perial army Jumla played incessantly with his artillery upon the fortification which being on ly made up of hurdles and loofe fandy foil were foon ruined Sura's post becoming untenable he decamped under the favour of night, and Jumla afraid of an ambush, though be was apprised of the retreat of the enemy durst not fol low him The rainy feafon commenced on the very night of Suja s flight and the Imperialifts were constrained to remain inactive for some months in the neighbourhood of Raja Mahil

Suja,

Suja, with his army, croffing the Ganges, took the route of Tanda, and, during the mactivity of the Imperialits, strengthened himself with troops from the Lower Bengal. He also drew Suji re-, from that quarter a great train of artillery, which treats was wrought by Portuguese and other Europeans, who were fettled in that country. Suja, being attached to no system of religion, was favourable to all. He promifed to build churches for the Christians, should be succeed in his views on the the empire; and the missionaries and fathers entered with zeal into his cause. The assairs of the prince began to wear a better aspect. His effeminate troops acquired confidence from a wellferved artillery; and even Aurungzêbe, who confided much in the abilities of Junia, was not without anxiety. An event happened about this time which raifed the hopes of Suja, and added to the fears of his brother.

The prince Mahommed, who, in conjunction The with Jumla, commanded the Imperial army, prince had, before the civil war, conceived a passion for med one of the daughters of Suja. Overtures of marriage had been made and accepted; but the confummation of the nuptials had been broken off by the troubles which disturbed the times. seemed even to-have forgot his betrothed wife-in his activity in the field; but the princess, moved by the misfortunes of her father, wrote with her own hand a very moving letter to Mahommed. She lamented her unhappy fate, in feeing the prince whom she loved, armed against her father. She expressed her passion and unfortunate condition, in terms which found their way to his heart. His former affections were rekindled in all their fury; and, in the elevation of his mind, he refolved to defert his father's cause.

The

Vol. III.

G g

A D 1509. High 10'9 goes over to Sul

The vifier, upon affairs of fome importance, was, in the mean time, at fome distance from the army, which lay at Rais Mahil The opportu nity was favourable for the late adopted scheme of Mahommed. He opened the affair to fome of his friends he complained of his father s coldness, and even of his ineratitude, to a fonto whom, as having feized the person of Shaw lehan, he owed the empire He gave many in flances of his own fervices, many of the unjust ; returns made by Aurungzebe, and concluded by declaring his fixed resolution to join Sula. They endeavoured to diffuade him from fo rash an action, but he had taken his resolution, and he would listen to no argument. He asked them. Whether they would follow his fortunes? they replied. " We are the fervants of Mahommed. and if the prince will to night join Suiz, he is fo much beloved by the army, that the whole will go over to him by the dawn of day '. vague assurances, the prince quitted the camp that evening with a fmall retinue. He embarked in a boat on the Ganges, and the troops thought that he had only gone on a party of pleasure

Jumla perplexed;

Some of the pretended friends of Mahom med wrote letters, containing an account of the defertion of the prince, to the vilier. That lord was struck with astonishment at the folly and madness of the deed. He thought it impossible, that, without having fecured the army, he could desert his father's cause He was perplexed with anxiety and doubt, he expected every moment to hear, that the troops were in full march to Tanda, and he was afraid to join them, with a defign of restoring them to their duty, lest he should be carried prisoner to the enemy He, however, after some hesitation, resolved to dis charge the part of a good officer He fet out express express for the camp, where he arrived next day. He found things in the utmost confusion, but not in such a desperate situation as he had expected. A great part of the aimy was mutinous, and beginning to plunder the tents of those who continued in their duty. These had taken arms in defence of their property; so that blood-shed must soon have ensued. The country, on every fide of the camp, was covered with whole fquadrons that fled from the flame of diffension which had been kindled. Tumult, commotion, and disorder reigned every where when the visier entered the camp.

llig 1069

The appearance of that lord, who was 1e-queits spected for his great qualities by all, soon silenced the storm. He mounted an elephant in the centre of the camp, and spoke after this manner to the army, who crowded tumultuously round him: "You are no strangers, my fellow-foldiers, to the flight of the prince Mahommed, and to his having preferred the love of the daughter of Suja to his allegiance to his fovereign and father. Intoxicated by the fame to which your valour had raised him, he has long been presumptuous in his hopes Ambition brought him to the edge of the precipice over which he has, been thrown by love. But in abandoning you, he has abandoned his own fortune; and, after the first transports are over, regret, and a consciousness of folly, will only remain. Suja has perhaps pledged his faith to support the infatuated prince against his father, he may have even promifed the throne of India as a reward for his treachery. But how can Suja perform his promise? We have seen his hostile standards—but we have seen them only to be feized Bengal abounds with men, with provisions, with wealth; but valour is not the growth of that soil. The armies of Aurungzêbe G g 2

lilg ictg are numerous; like you they are drawn from the north, and he is bunfelf as invincible in the field as he is wife and decilive in the cabinet

" But should we even suppose that Fortune, which has hitherto been fo favourable to Aurungzebe, should desert him in another field. would Mahommed reign? Would Suja, expe rienced in the arts of government, and ambitious as he is of power, place the sceptre of India in the hands of a boy? Would he submit to the authority of the fon of a younger brother, to the tool of his own defigns? The impossibility is glaring and obvious Return, therefore, my fel low foldiers, to your duty You can conquer without Mahommed Fortune has not followed him to the enemy Your valour can command her every where He has embraced his own ruin, but why would we share in his adverse fate? Bengal lies open before you' the enemy are just not totally broken. They are not obtects of terror, but of plunder you may acquire wealth without trouble, and glory without toil "

the ar-

This speech of the visier had the intended ef fest Every species of disorder and tumult subfided in a moment. The troops defired to be led to the enemy; and Jumla did not permit their ardor to cool d'He immediately began to throw a bridge of boats across the mer The work was finished in three days, and he passed the Ganges with his whole army Mahommed, in the mean time, having arrived at landa, was received with every mark of respect by Suja. The nuptials were celebrated with the utmost magnificence and pomp, and the fullivity was scarce over, when certain news arrived of the near approach of the Impetial army under Junia Suja imite diately issued out with all his forces from Tanda He posted higiself in an advantageous ground, and waited for the enemy, with a determined resolution to risk all on the issue of a battle.

Mahommed, who was naturally full of confidence and boldness, did not despair of bringing Deserts over the greatest part of the army of Jumla to Suja his own side. He erected his standard in the front of Suja's camp; and when that prince drew out his forces in order of battle, he placed himfelf in the centie of the first line. Jumla, confcious of the superiority of his own troops in point of valour, was glad to find the enemy in the open field. He formed his line, and ordered a column of horse to fall immediately upon Mahommed. That prince vainly supposed, when the enemy advanced, that they were determined to defert Jumla. But he was foon convinced of his error by the warmth of their attack. He behaved with his usual bravery, but the esseminate natives of Bengal were not to be kept to their colours. They fled; and he was carried along with their flight. The utmost efforts of Suja proved also inessectual. His troops gave way on all sides; and he himself was the last who quitted the field. A great flaughter was made in the pursuit, and Tanda opened her gates to the conqueror. The princes fled to Dacca in the utmost distress, leaving the eldest son of Suja dead on the field: but Jumla, remaining for some time in Tanda to fettle the affairs of the now almost conquered province, gave them some respite, which they employed in levying a new army.

The news of the flight of Mahommed arriving in the mean time at Delhi, Aurungzêbe conclud-Artifice of ed that the whole army in Bengal had gone over Aurung-to Suja. He immediately marched from the capital with a great force. He took, with incredible expedition, the route of Bengal. He however

344

A D 1619 111g 1069

ever had not advanced far from Delhi, when in telligence of the success of his arms in the battle of Tanda met him on his way, and he forthwith returned to the capital. He there had recourse to his usual policy. He wrote a letter to his son, as if in answer to one received, and he contrived matters so, that it should be intercepted by Suja That prince, having perused the letter, placed it in the hands of Mahommed, who swore by the Prophet that he had never once written to his satter since the battle of hidgwa. The letter was conceived in terms like these to Septra o 11 hom med

" lo our beloved fon Mahommed, whose happiness and safety are joined with our life. It was with regret and forrow that we parted with our fon, when his valour became necessary to carry on the war against Suja We hoped, from the love we bear to our first born, to be gratified foon with his return . and that he would have brought the enemy captive to our prefence in the space of a month, to relieve our mind from anxiety and But feven months passed away, without the completion of the wishes of Aurungzebe. flead of adhering to your duty, Mahommed, you betrayed your father, and threw a blot on your own fame. The imiles of a woman have overcome Honour is forgot in the brightness of her beauty, and he who was defined to rule the empire of the Moguls, has himfelf become a flave. But as Mahommed feems to repent of his folly, we forget his crimes. He has called the name of God to vouch for his fincerity, and our parental affection returns. He has already our forgueness, but the execution of what he propoles is the only means to regain our favour The letter made an impression on the mind of Suia, which all the protestations of Mahommed

from Suja

could

could not remove. He became filent and difcontented. He had an affection for the prince, and he was more enraged at being disappointed in the judgment which he had formed, than at the supposed treachery. Having continued three days in this agitation of mind, he at last sent for the prince. He told him, in the presence of his council, that after all the struggles of affection with suspicion, the latter had prevailed; that he could no longer behold Mahommed with an eye of friendship, should he even swear to his innocence in the holy temple of Mecca; that the bond of union and confidence which had lately subsisted between them was broken; and that, instead of a son and a friend, he beheld him in the light of an enemy. "It is therefore necessary for the peace of both," continued Sula, " that Mahommed should depart. Let him take away his wife, with all the wealth and jewels which belong to her rank. The treasures of Suja are open, he may take whatever he pleases. Go.—Aurungzêbe should thank me for sending away his fon, before he has committed a crime."

Mahommed, on this folemn occasion, could He is district refrain from tears. He felt the injustice of that the reproach, he admired the magnanimity of prince, Suja; he pitied his missortunes. But his own condition was equally deplorable. He knew the stern rigour of his father; who never trusted any man twice. He knew that his difficulty of forgiving was equal to his caution. The prospect was gloomy on either side. Distrust and misery were with Suja, and a prison was the least punishment to be expected from Aurungzêbe. He took leave, the next day, of his father-in-law. That prince presented his daughter with jewels, plate, and money to a great amount;

A D 1659, Hig 1069

nd

A D 1659 1liv 1069 and the unfortunate pair purfued their journey to

Mahommed, accompanied by his fpoule the drughter of Sun, moved flowly toward the camp of lumba His incluicholy encreased as he ad tanced, but whither could be fly? No part of the vall empire of India was impervious to the nims of Aurunezche, and he was not poffeffed of the means of eleaning beyond the limits of lis fathers nower. He was even affinited to they limfelf among troops whom he had de ferred kerret jucceeded to folly, and he france could reflect with prince on the naft, though the fair cause of his misfortunes still kent her dominion over his mind Having approached within a few miles of the Imperialifts, he fent to appounce his arrival to the rifier. That my rufler haftened to receive him with all the honours due to his rank. A foundron with drawn fwords formed around his tent, but they were his I copers rather than guards Jumla, the very next day, received a packet from court, which contained orders to fend Mahommed, should be fall into his hands, under a strong escort to Delhi The officer who commanded the party was ordered to obey the commands of the prince. but he, at the fame time, received inftructions to watch his motions, and to prevent his escape When he arrived at Agra, he was confined in the citadel, from whence he was foon after fent to Cualiar, where he remained a prisoner to his death and mpri foed Mahommed, though brave and enterprizing like his father, was deflitute of his policy and art Precipitate, full of fire, and inconfiderate, he was more fitted for acting the part of a partizan than of a general, and was therefore less adapted for war than for battle Haughty in his temper,

A D

1650. Hig

1070

temper, yet eafy in his address; an enemy to cruelty, and an absolute stranger to sear. He was daring and active on occasions of danger, but he knew his merit, and he was felf-conceited He ascribed to his own decisive and haughty. valour the whole success of his father, and he had been often known to fay, that he placed Aurungzêbe on the throne when he might have poffessed it himself. Naturally open and generous, he despised the duplicity of his father, disdained power that must be preserved by art. His free conversations upon these subjects estranged from him the affections of his father, who feems to have confessed this merit by his Had Mahommed accepted the offer of own fears. Shaw Jehân, when he seized that prince, he had courage and activity sufficient to keep possession of the throne of the Moguls But he neglected the golden opportunity, and shewed his love of fway, when he was not possessed of any rational means to acquire the empire. His misfortunes however were greater than his folly. He passed feven years in a melancholy prison at Gualiar, till death put a period to his misery.

Jumla, having settled the affairs of the western Suja Bengal, marched with his army toward Dacca. Suja was in no condition to meet him in the sield, and to attempt to hold out any place against so great a soice, would be to ensure, by protracting, his own sate. His resources were now gone. He had but little money, and he could have no army. Men soresaw his inevitable ruin, and they shunned his presence. His appearance to the sew troops who had remained near him, was even more terrible than the sight of an enemy. They could not extricate him from missortune, and they pitted his, sate. He however still retained the dignity of his own soul.

He

A D.
1660.
11 g
1670

He was always chearful, and full of hopes, his activity prevented the irl fomeness of thought. When the news of the approach of the Imperivability arrived he called together his few friends. He acquainted them with his resolution of flying beyond the limits of an empire, in which he had now nothing to expect but misfortunes, and he asked them, Whether they preferred certain mifery with their former lord, to an uncertain pardon from a new master?

driven fom Ben-Lal

Io the feeling and generous, misfortune fe cures friends They all declared their resolution to follow Suja to whatever part of the world he should take his flight. With fifteen hundred horse he directed his march from Dacca toward the frontiers of Affam Jumla was close at his heels but Suja, having croffed the Baramputre, which running through the kingdom of Affam, fulls into Bengal, entered the mountains of Rang amati Through almost impervious woods, over abrupt rocks, across deep valleys and headlong torrents, he continued his flight toward Arracan Having made a circuit of near five hundred miles through the wild mountains of Tippera, he en tered Arracan with a diminished retinue The hardships which he fustained in the march were forgot in the hospitality of the prince of the country, who received him with the distinction due to his rank

t Le ref ge in Arracan Jumla lost fight of the fugitive when he en tered the mountains beyond the Baramputre. He turned his arms against Cogebâr, and reduced that country, with the neighbouring valleys which in terfect the hills of kokapagi. But Suja, though beyond the reach of Jumla's arms, was not be jond his policy. The place of his retreat was known, and threatening letters from the viser, whose fame had passed the mountains of Arracan, raised.

raised terrors in the mind of the Raja. He thought himself unsafe in his natural fastness, and a fudden coolness to Suja appeared in his behaviour. The wealth of his unfortunate guest became also an object for his avarice. Naturally ungenerous, he determined to take advantage of miffortune, but he must do it with caution, for fear of opposing the current of the public opinion. He sent a message to Suja, requiring him to depart from his dominions. The impossibility of the thing was not admitted as an excuse Monfoons laged on the coast, the hills behind were impassable, and covered with storms. The violence of the feafon joined issue with the unrelenting fate of Suja. The unfeeling prince was obstinate. He issued his commands, because he knew they could not be obeyed. Suja fent his fon to request a respite for a few days. He was accordingly indulged with a few days; but they only brought accumulated distress.

Many of the adherents of the prince had been His unlost in his march, many, foreseeing his inevitable common fate, deserted him after his arrival at Arracân. Of fifteen hundred only forty remained; and these were men of some rank, who were resolved to die with their benefactor and lord. The Sultana, the mother of his children, had been for fome time dead · his fecond wife, three daughters, and two fors, composed his family. The few days granted by the Raja were now expired; Suja knew of no resource. To ask a longer indulgence was in vain; he perceived the intentions of the prince of Arracan, and he expected in filence his fate. A message in the mean time came from the Raja, demanding in marriage the daughter of Suja. " My misfortunes," faid the prince, " were not complete, without this infult. Go tell your master, that the race of Timur,

A D 1660 Hig 1070

A D

1560. Hig

1070

mination of his council, resolved to execute his own defigns. The unfortunate prince, with his family and his forty friends, were apprifed of his intentions. They were encamped on a narrow plain which lay between a precipice and a river, which, issuing from Arracân, falls into the country of Pegû. At either end of the plain a pass was formed between the rock and the river. Suja, with twenty of his men, possessed himself of one; and his fon with the rest, stood in the other in arms. They faw the Raja's troops advancing; and Suja, with a fmile on his countenance, addressed his few friends:

"The battle we are about to fight is unequal; His resobut, in our present situation, the issue must be lution, fortunate. We contend not now for empire; nor even for life, but for honour. It is not fitting that Suja should die, without having his arms in his hands: to submit tamely to affaffination, is beneath the dignity of his family and former But your case, my friends, is not yet fo desperate. You have no wealth to be seized; Aurungzêbe has not placed a price upon your heads. Though the Raja is destitute of generofity, it is not in human nature to be wantonly cruel. You may escape with your lives, and leave me to my fate. There is one, however, who must remain with Suja. My son is involved with me in my adverse fortune, his crime is in his blood. To spare his life, would deprive the Raja of half his reward from Aurungzêbe for procuring my death "

His friends were filent, but they burst into tears. bravery, They took their posts, and prepared themselves to receive with their Iwords the troops of the Raja. The unfortunate women remained in their tent, in dreadful suspence; till rouzed by the clashing of arms, they rushed forth with dishevelled hair.

The

The men behaved with that elevated courage which is ruled by misfortune in the extreme They twice repulfed the enemy, who, afraid of their fwords, began to gall them with ar rows from a diffance. The greatest part of the friends of Suja were at length either flain of wounded ... He himfelf still flood undaunted, and defended the pals against the cowardly troops of They durft not approach hand to hand, and their missive weapons slew wide of their aim The officer who commanded the party, fent in the mean time fome of his foldiers to the top of the precipice, to roll down stones on the prince and his gallant friends. One fell on the froulder of Suja and he funk down, being flun ned with the prin. The enemy took advantage of his fall They rushed forward, disarmed and bound him

n uruer

He was hurried into a canoe which lay ready on the aver The officer told him, that his orders were to fend him down the stream to Pegu Two of his friends threw themselves into the canoe, as they were pulling it away from the bank The wife and the daughters of Suja, with eries which reached heaven, threw themselves headlong into the river. They were, however, brought ashore by the soldiers, and carried away, together with the fon of Suja, who was wounded, to the Raja's palace. The prince, fad and defolate, beheld their diffres, and, in his for row, heeded not his own approaching fate. They had now rowed to the middle of the fiream . but his eves were turned toward the shore. The rowers according to their instructions from the cruel Raja, drew a large plug from the bottom of the canoe, and throwing themselves into the river, were taken up by another canoe which had followed them for that purpose The canoe was instantly instantly filled with water. The unfortunate prince and his two friends betook themselves to fwimming. They followed the other canoe; but she hastened to the shore. The river was broad; and at last, worn out with fatigue, Suja resigned himself to death. His two faithful friends at the fame instant disappeared in the stream.

A D 1660 Hig 1070

Piâra Bani, the favourite, the only wife of Su-Deplora-ja, was so famed for her wit and beauty, that his family many fongs in her praise are still fung in Bengal. The gracefullness of her person had even become proverbial. When the Raja came to wait upon her in the haram, she attempted to stab him with a dagger which she had concealed. She, however, was disarmed; and perceiving that she was destined for the arms of the murderer of her lord, in the madness of grief, rage and despair, she disfigured her beautiful face with her own hands, and at last found with sad difficulty a cruel death, by dashing her head against a stone. The three daughters of Suja still remained; two of them found means by poison to put an end to their grief. The third was married to the Raja; but she did not long survive what she reckoned an indelible difgrace on the family of Ti-The fon of Sula, who had defended himfelf to the last, was at length overpowered, by means of stones rolled down upon him from the rock. He was carried to the Raja; and foon after, with his infant brother, fell a victim, by a cruel death, to the jealoufy of that prince.

Such was the melancholy end of Suja, and of Reflectiall his family; a prince not less unfortunate than on Dara, though of better abilities to oppose his fate. He was bold and intrepid in action, and far from being destitute of addiess. His personal courage was great; and he was even a stranger to political fear. Had he, at the commencement of the war, been possessed of troops equal in valour to those of his brother, we might probably have the misfortunes of Aurungzehe, and not those of Suia, to relate But the esseminate na tives of Bengil failed him in all his efforts Personal courage in a general assumes the appearance of fear with a cowardly army Sura prevailed, the merit was his own, when he failed, it was the fault of his army No prince was ever more beloved than Sura. he never did a cruel, never an inhumane, action during his life. Misfortune, and even death itself, could not deprive him of all his friends, and though his fate was not known in Hindoftan for fome years after his death, when it was heard, it filled every eye with tears

A D (665 Hilk

A D.

1660 Hig.

AURUNGZEBE

CHAP. IV.

Prudent administration of Aurungzêbe-Observations on his condu?-His behaviour toward his fecond Son-Solimân Shekê betrayed by the Raja of Serinagur—He flies—is taken—brought to Delhi—and imprisoned—An embassy from Persia—Shaw Alium declared heir-apparent—A famine—Wise and humane conduct of the emperor-War in the Decan-Aurungzêbe falls sick—Distractions at Delhi-Intrigues of Shaw Allum-Recovery of the emperor—He demands the daughter of Dara—and the Imperial jewels from Shaw Jehan—but is refused—His art to appease his tather—Promotions.

HE war with Suja, which was carried on in the extremity of the empire, neither disturbed the repole of Aurungzêbe, nor diverted his attention from the civil affairs of the state Impartial and decisive in his measures, he was even Ressectiacknowledged to be a good prince, by those who recognized not his right to the throne, and men began to wonder, how he, who was so just, could be fo cruel. The people suffered little by the civil war. The damage done by the marching and counter-marching of armies, was paid Ηh Vol. III. out

356

.... Hie 10.0

out of the public treasury. An exact discipline had been observed by all parties, for the rivals for the crown of Hindostan, though in the field against one another, could not persuade them selves that they were in an enemy's country The prince who prevailed in a province, extended not the number of treason to those who supnorted a competitor with their fwords, and, what is fearce credible, not one man beyond the family of Timur, was either affaffinated in pri vate, or flain by the hands of public justice. during a civil war, fo long, fo bloody, and fo va rious in its events

Prodent admin fication.

The emperor accustomed to business, in his long government of various provinces, was well acquainted with the whole detail of public affairs Nothing was fo minute as to escape his notice. He knew that the power and consequence of the prince depended upon the prosperity and happi ness of the people, and he was even from sel fish views an enemy to oppression, and an encourager of agriculture and commercial industry He established a perfect security of property over all his dominions. The forms of justice were made less intricate, and more expeditious than under former reigns To corrupt a judge was rendered for the first time a crime. The fees paid in the courts of judicature were afcertained with accuracy and precision, and a delay in the execution of justice, subjected the judge to the payment of the loss sustained by the party ag grieved of An rungzebe.

The course of appeals from inferior to superior courts was uninterrupted and free, but to prevent a wanton exertion of this privilege, appellant was feverely fined, when his complaint against a judgment was found frivolous and ill The distributers of public justice, when

A D 1660

Hig.

1070

their decrees were reversed, could not always screen themselves under a pretended error in judgment. Should the matter appear clear, they were turned out of their offices, as fwayed by partiality or bribery. Aurungzêbe, soon after his accession to the throne, established a precedent of this kind. An appeal came before him in the presence of the nobles. The decision had been unjust. He sent for the judge, and told him in public, " This matter is clear and obvious; if you have no abilities to perceive it in that light, you are unfit for your place, as a weak man; if you luffered yourfelf to be overcome by presents, you are an unjust man, and therefore unworthy of your office." Having thus reprimanded the judge, he divested him of his em-ployment, and dismissed him with ignominy from his presence

But this is the fair fide of the character of Au-Observational Pungzêbe. Dark and determined in his policy, conduct he broke through every restraint to accomplish his designs. He pointed in a direct line to the goal of ambition; and he cared not by what means he removed whatever object obstructed his way. He either believed that morality was inconfistent with the great tract of government, or, he acted as if he believed it; and he sometimes descended into a vicious meanness, which threw discredit on his abilities, as well as upon his honesty. He held the cloke of religion between his actions and the vulgar, and impioufly thanked the Divinity for a success which he owed to his own wickedness. When he was murdering and perfecuting his brothers and their families, he was building a magnificent mosque at Delhi, as an offering to God for his affistance to him in the civil wars. He acted as high priest at the consecration, of this temple, and made a practice of H h 2

Hier 1070

eandust of

attending divine fervice there, in the humble dtell of a Fakier But when he lifted one hand to the Divinity, he, with the other, figned warrants for the affallination of his relations

During the civil wars which convulled the emhis second pire, all remained quiet in the Decan The pru dent management of Mahommed Mauzim, the fecond fon of Aurungzebe, prevented the lately conquered provinces from thaking off the voke-That prince, with a great share of his father's abilities, exceeded him if possible in coolness and He knew the stern realousy of the emperor, and he rather affected the humility of a flave, than the manly confidence of a fon was no stranger to the facility with which his father could facrifice every thing to his own fe curity: and he looked upon him as an enemy who watched his motions, more than in the light of a patent who would grant indulgences for errors He knew that the best means for preventing the fulnicions of Aurungzêbe, was to copy his own art. He affected to love bulinels, he was hum ble and felf-denied in his professions, destitute of prefumption, and full of devotion

(ulpedled

Aurungzebe, whose penetrating eye faw some defign lurking in fectet behind the conduct of Mauzim, infinuated to that prince, that to reign was a delicate fituation; that fovereigns must be redlous even of their own shadows; and, as for himself, he was resolved never to become a facts fice to the ambition of a fon Mauzim knew the intention of the speech, but he seemed not to un derstandit; and he redoubled his attention to those arts which had already, in a great measure, lolled alleep the watchful lulpicions of his fa He remitted the revenue to the capital, He practifed, with great regularity and precition in his expences, the teconomy and frugality

AD.

1661. Hig

1071 which his father loved. In appearance, and even perhaps from constitution, an enemy to effeminate pleasures, without vanity enough for pomp and magnificence, his court seemed like the cell of a hermit, who grudged to others the indulgences for which he had no taste himself. All this art, however, prevailed not with Aurungzebe to continue him in his viceroyship of the Decan. He knew, from his own experience, how dangerous it is to continue the government of a rich province long in the hands of a prince of abilities. He, therefore, recalled Mauzim to court, and gave his high office to Shaista Chan.

The attention of Aurungzêbe turned from Expedient Bengal to another quarter, upon receiving cer-agunst Soluman tain intelligence of the flight of Suja to Arraçan.

Soliman still remained inclosed in the mountains of Serinagur, under the protection of the Raja. The emperor 'did not think himself firmly fixed on the throne, whilst any of the family of Dara remained out of his hands. He applied through Joy Singh, who, from being of the same religion with the Raja, had great influence over him, to the prince of Serinagur. He tempted his avarice, and he wrought upon his fears. The Raja, being averse to be thought dishonourable, hesitated contrary to the bias of his passions. He, however, connived at an invasion of his country to reconcile his people, by an appearance of neceffity, to the delivering up of the prince. troops who entered his country with pretended hostilities, carried to him the price set upon the head of Solimân.

The unfortunate youth, being apprized of his Seized, danger, fled over the frightful mountains which Leparate Serinagur from Tibet. Three friends accompanied him in this impracticable attempt. The sides of these mountains are covered with impervious impervious foreits, the haunts of beafts of prey, on their top dwells a perpetual form Rapid ri vers and impallable torrents occupy the vallies, except where, some brulhwood here and there hides dangerous and; venomous fnakes then the rainy feafon; and milt and darknefe covered the defert with additional horror unhappy fugitives, not daring to trult any guide. lost their way, When they thought themselves on the borders of Tibet, they were again within , fight of Sermagur , Worn out with fatigue, they took shelter under, a rock, where they were dif covered by a shepherd, who gave them refresh ment, but at the same time informed the Raja of what he had seen. That chief sent his son with a party to feize Soliman The prince was alleep when they arrived in fight, but he was rouzed by one of his three friends who kept the watch They took to their arms The young Raja plied them with arrows from a distance, and two of He himfelf the prince's companions were flain was wounded 'He fell under this unequal mode of attack, and was brought bound into the prefence of the Raja and fent to Delhi.

1661 Hig 1071

That prince began to excule his breach of hospitality by public necessity. He diminished the independence of his own situation, and magnified the power of Aurungzébe. In seize an unfortunate sugnivé, said Solmán, "is a crime, but it is aggravated by the insult of making an apology, for what Heaven and mankind abhor. Take your reward for my life, it alleviates the missortunes of my situation, that now I owe you nothing for the friendship which you exhibited upon my arrival in your dominions." He turned his eyes in silience to the ground, and, without a murmur, permitted himself to be carried prisoner to Delhi. The emperor assetted

AD.

to be displeased, that the unhappy prince had fallen into his hands. To leave him at large was impossible; and even the walls of aprifon were not a sufficient security, against the designs which the disaffected might form in his favour. He ordered him to be brought into the hall of audience, in the presence of all the nobles; even the chief ladies of the haram were indulged with a fight of a young prince, as famous for his exploits, as for his misfortunes.

When he had entered the outer-gate of the pa-Brought lace, the chains were struck off from his feet; before the but the fetters of gold were left upon his hands. emperor The whole court were struck with the stately gracefulness of his person; they were touched with grief at his melancholy fate. Many of the nobles could not refrain from tears; the ladies of the haram weeped aloud behind the screens. Even the heart of Aurungzébe began to relent; and a placid anxiety seemed to wander over his face. Solimân remained silent, with his eyes fixed on the ground. "Fear nothing, Solimân Shekô," faid the emperor; " I am not cruel, but cautious. Your father fell as a man destitute of all religion; but you shall be treated well" The prince bowed his head; and then raised his hands as high as his fetters would permit, according to the custom in the Imperial presence. He then addressed himself to the emperor. my death is necessary for the safety of Aurungzêbe, let me presently die, for I am reconciled to my fate. But let me not linger in prison, to languish away by degrees, by the means of draughts, which deprive the mind of reason, when they enfeeble the body." This alluded to an infusion of poppy, which the imprisoned princes were forced to drink in Gualiar. It emaciated

to be displeased, that the unhappy prince had fallen into his hands. To leave him at large was impossible; and even the walls of aprifon were not a sufficient security, against the defigns which the disaffected might form in his favour. He ordered him to be brought into the hall of audience, in the presence of all the nobles; even the chief ladies of the haram were indulged with a fight of a young prince, as famous for his exploits, as for his misfortunes.

When he had entered the outer-gate of the pa-Brought lace, the chains were struck off from his feet; before the but the fetters of gold were left upon his hands. emperor. The whole court were struck with the stately gracefulness of his person; they were touched with grief at his melancholy fate. Many of the nobles could not refrain from tears; the ladies of the haram weeped aloud behind the screens. Even the heart of Aurungzêbe began to relent; and a placed anxiety feemed to wander over his face. Solimân remained filent, with his eyes fixed on the ground. "Fear nothing, Solimân Shekô," faid the emperor; " I am not cruel, but cautious. Your father fell as a man destitute of all religion; but you shall be treated well" The prince bowed his head; and then raised his hands as high as his fetters would permit, according to the custom in the Imperial presence. He then addressed himself to the emperor. my death is necessary for the safety of Aurungzêbe, let me presently die, for I am reconciled to my fate. But let me not linger in prison, to languish away by degrees, by the means of draughts, which deprive the mind of reason, when they enfeeble the body." This alluded to an infusion of poppy, which the imprisoned princes were forced to drink in Gualiar. It emaciated rendered him an object of terror to the provident mind of Aurungzebe. That monarch had refolved to keep him always a close prisoner in Gualiar: he, however, allowed him a household, and the company of women. This humane treatment had raised the hopes of the prince of being speedily released. He wrote to his father penitential letters; but they produced no answer. Mahommed, in the vigour of his own mind, had a crime which could not be forgiven. Mauzim, the second son, took advantage of his brother's misfortune. He redoubled his attention to his father's orders; and seemed to obey with so much humility, that he eradicated all fears of wishing to command from his suspicious mind. To cut off the hopes of Mahommed, as well as to secure the affections of Mauzim, the latter was publicly declared heir of the empire, and his name changed to that of Shaw Allum, or, King of the World. A fon was foon after born to that prince; and his birth was celebrated with uncommon fplendour and festivity.

1661. Hig.

In the midst of this public joy, the news of a Adreadsu dreadful calamity was received at court. A pro-famine digious famine, occasioned by the uncommon drought of the feason which burnt up the harvest, prevailed in different parts of India. The emperor exerted himself with a humanity unsuitable to his behaviour toward his own family, to alleviate the distress of his subjects. He remitted the taxes that were due; he employed those already collected in the purchase of corn, which was distributed among the poorer fort. He even expended immense sums out of the treasury, in conveying grain by land as well as by water into the interior provinces, from Bengal and the countries which lie on the five branches of the Indus, as having fuffered less on account of the great

,

A D Hie 1071

great rivers by which they are watered. The grain fo conveyed was purchased, at any price, with the public money, and it was re fold at a very moderate rate. The poorer fort were furnhed. at fixed places, with a certain quantity, without any confideration whatever The activity of the emperor, and his wife regulations, carried relief through every corner of his dominions Whole provinces were delivered from impending destruc tion and many millions of lives were faved

35 Clam an i huma runezaba.

This humane attention to the fafety of his Jubanthuma nitrof Au jects obliterated from their minds all objections to his former conduct. He even began to be virtu our The ambition which made him wade through blood to the throne, inclined him to the pursuit of fame, which can only be acquired by virtue.
"No man," observes a Persian author, " is a tyrant for the fake of evil Passion perverts the judgment, a wrong judgment begets opposition, and opposition is the cause of cruelty, bloodshed. and civil war When all opposition is conquered, the fword of vengeance is sheathed, and the de strover of mankind becomes the guardian of the human species Such are the reflections of a writer, who published the history of Aurungzêbe in the heart of his court and that they were just, appears from his having the boldness to make To alleviate the calamity which had fall len on the people, was the principal, if not the fole, business of the emperor during the third year of his reign A favourable feafon succeeded to his care, and the empire foon wore its former face of prosperity

A war on

In the month of September of the year 1661, the news of the breaking out of a war on the frontiers of the Decan, was brought to Aurungzêbe. The Imperial governor, Shaista Chan, ir ritated at the depredatory incursions of the subjects of Sewâji, prince of Côkin, or Concan, on the coast of Malabar, led an army into his country. Sewaji, unable to cope with the Imperialists in the field, retired into the heart of his dominions to levy troops; and left his frontier towns exposed. They fell, one by one, before the power of Shaisla, and that lord at length sat down before Chagna, one of the principal places, both for confequence and strength, in the province of Côkin. It was fituated on a high rock, fleep and inaccessible on every side. The utmost efforts of Shaista were baffled He 'had made breaches in the parapet, on the edge of the lock, but he could not ascend with an assault. When he attempted to apply scaling ladders, the befieged rolled down huge stones upon him, and crushed whole squadrons of his troops. To raise the fiege, would bring difgrace; to take the place, seemed now impossible.

A D.

1662

1072

Shaista, in the mean time, fell upon an inge-conflos nious contrivance, which produced the defired Malabar. effect. A hill rose, at some distance from the fort; from the top of which, every thing which passed within the walls could be feen through a fpy-glass. The captain-general stood frequently on this hill to reconnoitre the place. He observed that, at a certain hour every day, the garrison was supplied with ammunition from a magazine in the center of the fort. He had no mortars in his train; it having been found impossible to carry them across the immense ridge of mountains which separate the Decan from Malabar. He, however, fell upon an effectual expedient. The wind blowing fresh from the hill upon the town, he let fly a paper-kite, which concealed a blind match, at the very instant that the garrison was supplying themselves with powder from the magazine. He permitted it to drop in the midst; by an accident

A D 1662 Hig 1072 accident the match fell upon some powder which happened to be strewed around. The fire communicated with the magazine, and the whole went off with a dreadful explosion, which shook the country, threw down the greatest part of the fort, and buried the most of the garrison in the ruins. The Moguls ascended in the consusion, and those who had escaped the shock, fell by the sword.

The Ma

The emperor was fo much pleafed with the expedition of Shailta into Malabar, that he refolved to reinforce him to complete the conquest The Maraja, who, for his defertion of Dara, had been placed in the government of Guzerat, was ordered to march to join Shaista with twenty thousand horse. That prince, fond of the activity and tumult of expedition, obeyed the Imperial mandate without helitation arrived in the camp before the news march had reached the captain general naturally haughty and violent, he disapproved of Shailta's mode of carrying on the war tended that he was fent to affift him with his counsel as well as with his arms, and was refolved, if he did not alter his plan, to complete the conquest of Cokin with his own troops Shaista would relinquish no part of his He commanded him, upon his allegiance, to obey The Maraja was provoked beyond mea fure, at a treatment To humiliating to his pride He thwarted privately the measures of the captain general, and that lord began to exercise over him all the rigour of authority to rein force the army The Maraja, whose honour was not proof against his more wident passions, formed a plot against Shaisa s life. The nobles of the first rank are permitted, by the patent of their creation, to shave, smoong their other marks of dignity, a band

1663.

1073.

a band of music, consisting of drums, sifes, trumpets, cymbals, and other warlike instruments. These have an apartment over the gates of their palaces in cities, in the camp a tent near that of their lord is assigned to them; where they relieve one another, and play, when not prohibited, night and day. The Maraja, under a pretence that the captain-general was much pleafed with their music, sent them one night a present of sive hundred roupees, in their master's name; and commanded them to continue to play till next morning. They accordingly struck up after supper; and made a prodigious noise. Shaista, not averse to music, took no notice of this uncommon attention in his band.

When the camp became filent toward midnight, His plot to the Maraja, who, having a correspondence with affassinate Sewân, had admitted a small party of the enemy into the camp, ordered them to steal, unperceived, into the quarter of the captain-general. They, accordingly, passed the guards, and, cutting their way through the screens which furrounded the tents of Shaista, entered that in which he flept. They fearched in the dark for his bed. He awakened. Alarmed at their whispering, he started and seized a lance, which was the first weapon that met his hand. He, at that instant, received a blow with a sword, which cut off three of his fingers, and obliged him to drop the lance. He called out aloud to the guards; but the noise of the music drowned his voice. He groped for the weapon; and with it defended his head from their swords. His son, who slept in the next tent, alarmed by the noise, rushed in with a lighted torch in his hand. The father and fon fell then upon the affassins. Murderers are always cowards. They fled, but the fon of Shaista expired of the wounds which he received in the conflict.

the cup-

conflict, and the father himfelf recovered with much difficulty

The Maraia, in the mean time, came, in feeming conflernation, to the quarter of the general He lamented the accident, and con descended to take the command of the army till he should recover. The officers suspected the prince of the affaffination, but he had cut off the channels which could carry home a proof Silence prevailed over the camp; and, though Shaifta was not flain, the Maraja pollefled every advantage which he had expected from the mur der Aurungzebe, from his perfect knowledge of the disposition of the Maraia, was satisfied of his guilt. It would not, however, be either prudent or effectual to order him to appear to answer for his crimes in the presence he knew that his boldness was equal to his wickedness He therefore, suppressed his resentment, and drew a veil on his defigns, to lull the prince into fecurity. He affected to lament the accident which had befallen to his general, but he rejoiced that the management of the war had come into fuch able hands

When the affairs of Aurungzêbe wore the most promising aspect, he was near losing, by his own death, the empire which he had acquired by the muider of his relations. On the twenty sist of May he fell into a fever. His distemper was so vio lent, that he was almost deprived of his reason. His tongue was seized with a palfy, he lost his speech, and all desparred of his recovery. The people were silent, and looked forward for a sudden revolution. Intrigues for the empire commenced. The lords met in private in their palaces, the court, the haram, were full of schemes. It was already whispered abroad, that he was actually dead. Some regretted him as an able prince, fame

1661. Hig 1074

fome as a great general; many were of opinion, that Heaven had interfered in punishing his injustice to his relations. His fister the princess Roshinara, who had possessed his considence, was thought to conceal his death till her own plans for the succession of his younger son to the throne should be ripe for execution.

Uncertain and improbable rumous were, in Consternathe mean time, circulated, and swallowed with tion of the avidity by the people. Their affections for the old emperor being still entire, they created fictions to flatter their wishes. The Maraja, they faid, was in full march to release him from confinement. Mohâbet, ever averse to Aurungzêbe, was on his way with an army for the same purpose, from Cabul; and had already passed Lahore. The people of Agra, they affirmed, were actuated by tumult and commotion; the garrison of the citadel was mutinous, and Etabar, who commanded in the place, waited only for the news of the death of the new emperor to open the gates to his ancient lord. Though it was impossible that these sictions could have any probable foundation, from the shortness of the time, they were received with implicit faith by a credulous multitude. The very shopkeepers and artizans neglected their business for news. They gathered together in groups; and one continued whisper of important and incredible events flew over all the streets of Delhi.

The prince Shaw Allum was not, in the mean Shaw Altime, idle. He fecretly waited upon many of lum in-the nobility, and folicited their interest, with the throne. large promises of gratitude and advantage, in the event of his father's demise. Roshinara, who was best acquainted with the intentions of the emperor, infinuated, that the fuccession was to fall on Akbâr, as yet but a boy. Both parties averied.

A D 1664 Hig 1054 averred, however, in public, that at prefent there was no occasion for a new prince Aurungzebe himself, they faid, only managed the empire during the debility of mind which his illness had brought upon Shaw Jehan That monarch, commued they being now recovered, will refume the reins of government, and dispose of the succession in favour of any of his posterity whom he shall think worthy of the throne of the Moguls The peo ple already believed themselves under the government of the old emperor The nobility en tertained no resolution of that kind. Their acquiescence under Aurungzebe, had rendered them afraid of the restoration of his father knew that the Maraja and Mohabet, who still professed themselves the friends of the latter. would, in the event of his enlargement carry all before them, and feared the violence of the first, as much as they dreaded the abilities of the fecond

Anxiety

Etabâr, who commanded the citadel of Agra, feemed now to have the fate of the empire in his Fo open the gates to Shaw Jeban was to involve all in confusion, though it might be expected, that from the attachment of the people to their ancient fovereign, tumult and commotion would foon subfide Aurungzêb,, in the short intervals of his eac flive pain, applied his mind to business He gathered the senie of the people from the dark anxiety which covered the features He called his fon Shaw Allum of his attendants before him. He defired him to keep himfelf in readinels in case of his death, to ride post to Agra, and to take the merit of releating Shaw ' Your only hopes of empire, and even the fafety of your person," faid he, pend upon the gratitude of your grandlather

Let not, therefore, any other person deprive you of that advantage." He then called for pen and ink, and wrote to Etabâr, to keep a strict watch upon the emperor: "As my death is not certain," said Aurungzêbe, "let not your fears persuade you to trust to the gratitude of any man."

A.D 1664 Hig !

The anxiety shewn by the emperor on the oc. of Auccasion, convinced mankind that he thought his own recovery doubtful. The lords quitted the palace, and each began to prepare against the worst events. He sent, on the fifth day, a summons to all the nobility to come to the hall of audience. He ordered himself to be carried into the assembly, and he requested them, from his bed, to prevent tumults and commotions "A lion," faid he, alluding to his father, " is chained up; 'and it is not your interest to permit him to break loofe. He is exasperated by real injuries, and he fancies more than he feels." He then called for the great feal of the empire, which he had intrusted to the princess Roshinara. He ordered it to be fealed up in a filken bag, with his private fignet, and to be placed by his fide. His exertion to speak to the nobles threw him into a fwoon. They thought him dead. A murmur flew around. He, however, recovered himself; and ordering Joy Singh and some of the principal lords to approach, he took them by the hand. Day after day he was thus brought into the pre fence of the nobility. All intrigues ceased at the hopes of his recovery. On the tenth day of his illness, the fever began to leave him, and on the thiteenth, though weak, he was apparently out of The from that was gathering, fubfided at once. A ferene calm fucceeded; and people wondered why their minds had been agi-Vol. III.

A D 1664 Hig 1074

tated and discomposed, by the hopes and fears of revolution and change.

The fickness of Aurungzêbe was productive of a discovery of importance, to a monarch of his realous and provident disposition. He found that Shaw Allum, whom he had defigned for his fuc ceffor in the throne, had shewn more eagerness in forwarding the schemes of his own ambition, than anxiety for the recovery of his father He alfo found, from the reception given to the folicitations of the prince by the nobility, that his influence was too inconfiderable to fecure to him the un disturbed possession of the empire His pride was hurr by the first, his prudence penetrated into the cause of the second He had long thought the felf-denial of his fon to be a cloke for some deep-laid defign, and an accident had convinced him of the truth of what he had suspected before The mother of Shaw Allum was only the daugh ter of a petty Raja. Aurungzebe had, on ac count of her beauty, taken her to wrie, but the meannels of her birth had left a kind of difgrace on her fon in the eyes of the nobles, who re The emperor, therefore, in his youngest son, found a remedy against the objections of the nobility to Shaw Allum That prince was born to Aurungzebe by the daughter of Shaw Nawaz, of the Imperial house of Sefi. The Persian nobility, who were numerous in the fervice of the empire, discovered a great attachment to Akbar, and even the Moguls preferred him, on account of the purity of his blood, to his brother affections of the emperor were also in his favour and he now ferroufly endeavoured to pave his way to the fuccession ob eiti ebasen When the family of Data had, with the unfor tunate prince, fallen into the hands of Au rungzêbe,

A D 1664 Hig

1074

lungzebe, that monarch had, at the request of his father and the princess Jehanara, delivered over the only daughter of Dara into their hands. She remained in the prison at Agia with her grandfather. Aurungzêbe, upon his recovery, wrote a letter, full of professions of regard, to his father; and he concluded it with a formal demand of the daughter of Dara, for his fon Akbâr; hoping, by that connection, to fecure the influence of the young prince among the nobles. The fierce spirit of Shaw Jehan took fire; Jehanâra's indignation arose. They rejected the proposition with disdain; and the old emperor returned for answer, That the insolence of Aurungzêbe was equal to his crimes. The young princess, was in the mean time, alarmed. She feared force, where intreaty had not prevailed. She concealed a dagger in her bosom, and declared, that she would suffer death a hundred times over, before she would give her hand to the son of her father's murderer. Shaw Jehân did not fail to acquaint Aurungzêbe of her resolution, in her own words; and that prince, with his usual prudence, desisted from his design. He even took no notice of the harshness of his father's letter. He wrote to him, soon after, for some of the Imperial jewels, to adorn his throne. "Let him govern with more justice," said Shaw Jehân; " for equity and clemency are the only jewels that can adorn a throne. I am weary of his avarice. Let me hear no more of precious stones. The hammers are ready which will crush them to dust, when he importunes me for them again."

Aurungzêbe received the reproaches of his fa- on his 1mther with his wonted coolness. He even wrote prisoned father, back to Agra, that " to offend the emperor was far from being the intention of his dutiful T 1 2 fervant.

1664 111g 1074 fervant Let Shaw Jehan keep his jewels," faid he, " nay more, let him command all those of Aurungzebe His amusements constitute a part of the happiness of his son" The old emperor was firuck with this conduct. He knew it to be feigned, but the power of his fon to inforce his requests gave value to his moderation. He ac cordingly fent to him a present of jewels, with a part of the enligns of Imperial dignity, to the value of two hundred and fifty thousand pounds He accompanied them with a short letter "Take thefe, which I am destined to wear no more Your fortune has prevailed -But your moderation has more power than your fortune over Shaw Iehan Wear them with dignity, and make some amends to your family for their mil fortunes, by your own renown ' Aurungzêbe burst into tears upon the occasion, and he was thought fincere The spoils of Suja were, on the same day, presented at the foot of his throne His fears being now removed, there was room left for humanity He ordered them from his fight, and then retired, in a melancholy mood, from the hall of audience

Shaw Al lum feat to the Decans During these transactions at court, Shaw Al lum was commissioned by his father to take the command of the Imperial army in the Decan; Shaista being rendered unfit for that charge by the wounds which he had received from the affalius, armed against him by the Maraja. The forwardness of the prince in making a party during his father's illness, adhered to the mind of Aurungzebe; but he concealed his senuments on that subject. There, however, subsisted a cool ness, which the accurate observers of human na ture could plainly perceive, in the conduct of the emperor, and his abridging the power and revenue of his son, when he appointed him to the

A D

156A Hig

the government of the Decan, shewed that he distrusted his loyalty. Men, who are willing to suppose that Aurungzêbe sacrificed every other passion to ambition, affirm, that he became even careless about the life of his fon, and they relate a flory to support the justice of the observation. A hon issuing from a forest not far distant from Delhi, did a great deal of mischief in the open country. The emperor, in an affembly of the nobles, coolly ordered his fon to bring him the skin of the lion; without permitting him to make the necessary preparations for this dangerous species of hunting. Shaw Allum, whose courage was equal to his refervedness and moderation, cheerfully obeyed; and when the master of the huntimen proposed to provide him with nets, he said: "No; Aurungzêbe, when at my age, feared not to attack any beast of prey, without formal preparations." He succeeded in his attempt; and brought the lion's skin to his father.

The arrival of the prince in the Decan super- and Mofeded the Maraja, who, during the illness of Sha-habet to ista, commanded the army. He requested to be permitted to return to his government of Guzerat; but it had been conferred upon Mohâbet. This lord, during the troubles which convulfed the empire, remained quiet in his government of the city and province of Cabul. He retained his loyalty to Shaw Jehan; and executed the duties of his office in the name of that prince. After the death of Dara, and the flight of Suja beyond the limits of the empire, he saw an end to all the hopes of the restoration of his ancient lord. He, therefore, began to listen to the proposals of Aurungzêbe That prince informed him, that instead of his being offended at his attachment to his ancient lord, he was much pleased with

A D 1664. Hig 1074 The hopes of novelty had subsided in the minds of the people, and the precision with which government was carried on, lest room for neither their hopes nor their fears. The superficial judges of things however blamed the emperor for quitting the centre of his dominions, whilst his father remained a prisoner in his own capital Aurungzêbe judged of the future by the past, the nobles were tired of revolution and war, and the vulgar are seldom mutinous or troublesome, where no glaring oppression exists

llis pro

About the middle of December 1644, the em peror, after a tedious preparation for his proprefs. left Delhi, and moved toward Lahore, at which city he arrived, by flow marches, at the end of fe ven weeks. The army which accompanied him in this tour, confilled of near fifty thousand men, exclusive of the retinues of his nobles, and the necessary followers of the camp The heavy bag gage and artillery kept the common highway. but the emperor himself deviated often into the country, to enjoy the diversion of hunting princels Rochinara, fond of pomp and magnifi cence, was indulged in her favourite passion by the fplendor of her cavalcade The emperor, who in a great measure owed his success to the intelligence which she had from time to time transmitted to him from the haram, shewed him felf grateful Her jealouly of the influence of Jehanara over her father first attached her to the interests of Aurungzêbe, and the partiality shewn by her fifter to Data, naturally threw Rochinara into the scale of his foe. Her abilities rendered her fit for politics and intrigue, and the warmth of her conflitution, which the could not confecrate to pleasure, adapted her for business and achion

١

The progress of the prince did not obstruct the necessary business of the state. Attended by all his officers, the decisions of each department were carried from the camp to every corner of to Cash-the empire. Expresses stood ready on horseback mire at every stage; and the Imperial mandates were dispatched to the various provinces as soon as they were fealed in the tent of audience. nobles, as was customary in the capital, attended daily the presence; and appeals were discussed every morning as regularly as when the emperor remained at Delhi. The petitioners followed the court, and a small allowance from the public treasury was assigned to them, as a compensation for their additional expence in attending the Imperial camp. In this manner Aulungzêbe arrived at Cashmire. The beauty, the cool and salubrious air of that country, induced him to relax his mind for a flort time from business. He wandered over that charming valley, after a variety of pleasures; and he foon recovered that vigour of constitution which his attention to public butiness, as well as his late fickness, had greatly impaired.

The universal peace which had encouraged the Disturbemperor to undertake his progress to Cashmire, ances was not of long continuance. Disturbances broke out in the kingdom of Guzerat. The Rajas of the mountains, thinking the tribute which they paid to the empire too high, rebelled. Singh was chosen chief of the confederacy. They joined their forces, and issuing from their narrow valleys, presented a considerable army in the open country. Cuttub, a general of experience, was ordered against them with the troops, stationed in the adjacent provinces. He arrived before the rebels, and encamped in their presence. Both armies entrenched themselves, and watched the motions

1664

A D

A D 1865
11ig 1075
the king

Aurungzêbe, who was unwilling to discover his icalouly to a man whom he efteemed as well as feared, acquiesced in the proposals of lumba. He, however, resolved to point out to that lord an enemy, which might divert him from any deligns he might have to fortify himfelf in the rich and firong kingdom of Bengal against the empire. An army inured to war were devoted to lumla, and his ambition was not greater than his ability to gratify it in the highest line. To the north of Bengal lies the rich province of Assam, which discharges the great river Baram putre into the branch of the Ganges which paffes by Dacca The king of Affam, falling down this river in his fleet of boats, had, during the civil wars, not only ravaged the lower Bengal, but appropriated to himfelf what part of that country lies between the Ganges at Dacca the mountains which environ Affam and wealth made him an object of glory as well as of plunder, and Jumla received an imperial mandate to march against him with his army of Allam.

Jumla having filed off his troops by fquadrons toward Dacea, joined them at that city, and, embarking them on the Baramputre, moved up into the country which the king of Affam had long subjected to depredation. No enemy appear ed in the field They had withdrawn to the fortreft of Azo, which the king had built on the fide of the mountains which looks toward Bengal lumla invested the place, and forced the garrifon to furrender at discretion, then entering the mountains of Affam, defeated the king in a pitched battle, and belieged him in his capital of Kirganu. The vanguished prince was foon oblig ed to leave the city, with all its wealth, to the mercy of the enemy, and to take refuge, with a few adherents, in the mountains of Lassa. In many many naval conflicts on the river and great lakes, through which it flowed, Jumla came off victorious; and the small forts on the banks fell successively into his hands.

A D. 1665 Hig. 1075

Thus far success attended the arms of Jumla. Retreat, But the rainy feason came on with unusual violence, and covered the valley which forms the province of Aslâm, with water. There was no room left for retreating, none for advancing beyond Kirganu. The mountains around were involved in tempest, and, besides, were full of soes. The king, upon the approach of the Imperialists, removed the grain to the hills; and the cattle were driven away. Distress, in every form, attacked the army of Jumla They had wealth, but they were destitute of provisions, and of every thing necessary for supporting them in the country till the return of the fair feafon. To remain was impossible: to retreat almost impracticable. The king had destroyed the roads in the passes of the mountains; and he harasted the march of the Imperialists with incessant skirmishes. Tumla, in the mean time, conducted his measures with his wonted abilities and prudence; and cairied back his army, covered with glory, and load-

Expresses carried the news of the success of death, Jumla to the emperor. He acquainted Aurungzebe that he had opened a passage, which, in another season, might lead his arms to the borders of China. Elated with this prospect of extending his conquests, he began to levy forces, and dispatched orders to Jumla to be in readiness for the sield by the return of the season. But the death of that general put an end to this wild design. Upon his arrival at Azo, a dreadful sickness prevailed in the army, and he himself fell a victim

ed with wealth, into the territory near the entrance of the mountains from Bengal.

AD.

1665 Hig

1075

fought with the fury of fanatics, but when the idea of supernatural and was dispelled from the minds of the Imperialists, the Fakiers were not a match for their swords. It was not a battle, but a confused carnage a few owed their lives to the mercy of Sujait, the rest met the death which they deserved. Aurungzebe, when he received Sujait, after his victory, could not help fmiling at the ridicule thrown upon his arms, by the opposition of an old woman at the head of a naked army of mendicants. "I find," faid he, " that too much religion among the vulgar, is as dangerous as too little in a monarch." The emperor, upon this occasion, acted the part of a great prince, who turns the passions and superstitions of mankind, to the accomplishment of his own defigns. It was more easy to counteract the power, than to explode the doctrine of witchcraft.

fords few materials for history. Had not the rage peace. of conquest inslamed mankind, ancient times would have paned away in filence, and unknown. Æras are marked by battles, by the rife of flates, the fall of empires, and the evils of human life Years of tranquillity being distinguished by no striking object, are soon lost to the fight. The mind Jelights only in the relation of transactions which contribute to information, or awaken its tender passio is. We wish to live in a peaceable age, but we read with most pleasure the history of times abounding with revolutions and important events. A general tranquillity now prevailed over the empire of Hindoltan. Aurungzêbe, pleased with the salubrious air of Cashmire, continued long in that romantic country. Nothing marks the annals of that period, but a few changes in the departments of the court, and in the governments of provinces; which, though of

K k

Vol. III.

explode the doctrine of witchcraft.

The feafon of peace and public happiness af Angunfome fome importance to the natives of India, would 1664 furnish no amusement in Europe

ling 1075 Death of the prince Mahom

In the seventh year of the emperor s reign, his fon the prince Mahommed died in prison in the castle of Gualiar Impatient under his confinement, his health had been long upon the decline, and grief at last put an end to misfortune which the passions of youth had begun His favourite wife, the daughter of Suja, was the companion of his melancholy, and the pined away with for row, as being the cause of the unhappy fate of her lord Mahommed had long supported his fpirits with the hopes that his father would relent, but the fickness of the emperor, during which he had named another prince to the throne, confirmed him that his crime was not to be forgiven Mahommed, though violent in the nobler passions of the human mind, was in his private character generous, friendly and humane loved battle for its dangers, he despised glory which was not purchased with peril. He was even disappointed when an enemy fled, and was heard to fay, That to purfue fugitives was only the bulinels of a coward But he was unfit for the cabinet, and rather a good partizan, than a great general in the field. He had boldness to execute any undertaking, but he wanted pru dence to plan. Had his warm disposition been tempered by length of years he might have made a splendid figure. But he was overset by the passions of youth, before experience had post ed his mind

War nith Qe # 2

The war with Sewaii the prince of Cokin, on the coast of Malabar, which had been for some time discontinued broke out this year with redoubled violence The attempt of the Maraja upon the life of Shaifta, though no proof could be carried home to that prince had induced Au rungzêbe

A D

Biff

rungzêbe to recal him with all his native forces. He would no longer trust his assars in the hands of a man, whose violent passions could not spare the life of a person with whom he lived in the habits of friendship. A truce, rather than a folid peace, had been patched up with the enemy, but their love of depredation overcame their public faith. The prince of Cokin made incuifions into the Decan, and compluits of his hoftilities were carried to Aurungzobe. Under the joint command of the Raja, Joy Singh and Dilêre, a confiderable force was fent against the enemy. He fled before them, and they entered his country at his heels. The strong holds of his dominions toon fell into the hands of the Imperialists. Sewaji and his fon furrendered themlelves to Joy Singh, and fent them under an efcort to Delhi; to which city the emperor was now returned, after his long absence in the north.

The emperor Shaw Jehan, after an impiison- Death of ment of seven years, ten months and ten days, Shan Jedied at Agra on the second of February, 1666. The fame disorder which had lost to him the empire, was the cause of his death. He languished under it for fifteen days, and expired in the arms of his daughter Jehanara, his faithful friend and companion in his confinement. Though Aurungzsbe had kept him with all imaginable caution in the citadel of Agra, he was always treated with distinction, tenderness and respect The ensigns of his former dignity remained to him, he had still his palace, and his garden of plcasure No diminution had been made in the number of his domestics. He retained all his women, fingers, dancers and fervants of every kind The animals, in which he formerly delighted, were brought regularly into his presence. He was gratified with the fight of

A D 16% Hig 1076 of fine horses, wild beasts, and birds of prey But he long continued melancholy, nothing could make a recompence for his loss of power. He for several years could not bear to hear the name of Aurungzebe, without breaking forth into rage, and, even till his death, none durst mention his son as emperor of Hindostan.

Anerdore

They had endeavoured to conceal from him the death of Dara, but he knew it from the tears of Jehanara The particulars of the me lancholy fate of his favourite fon, made fuch an impression on his mind, that, absent in the violence of his passion, he took his sword, and rushed to the gate of the palace. But it was shut, and reminded him of his lost condition Though the rebellion of Suja had enraged him against that prince, he lost his wrath in the fuperior crimes of Aurungzêbe. He heard with eagerness every turn of fortune in Bengal, and when the flight of Suja from that kingdom reached his ears, he abitained from eating for two days He, however, comforted himself with the hopes of his return, and, eager for the re venge of his wrongs upon Aurungzêbe, he attended with joy and farisfaction to the vague re ports which were propagated concerning the appearance of his fon, in various provinces of the empire Accounts of the death of Suja came the year before his father's death. He burft into a flood of tears " Alas! faid he, " could not the Raja of Arracan leave one fon to Suja to re venge his grandfather?'

of his

Aurungzebe, whether from pity or defign is uncertain, took various means to footh the me lanchol; of his father, and to reconcile him to his own usurpation. To express his tenderness for him, was infult, he therefore flattered his pride. He affected to consult him on all important affairs. He wrote him letters requesting his advice.

advice; declaring that he reckoned himself only his vicegerent in the empire. These artful expressions, and the absence of every appearance of restraint on his conduct, made at last an impression upon his mind. But Aurungzebe, building too much upon the success of his art, had almost, by his demand of the daughter of Dara for his son, ruined all the progress which he had made. His apology for what his father called an infult, obliterated his indiference; and his abstraining from some upon the occasion, was esteemed by Shaw Jehān a savour, which his pride forbade him to own.

Shaw Jehan, brought up in the principles of private his father and grandfather, was delittute of all life religion in his youth. He had often been present when Jehangire, who delighted in disputes on abstrufe subjects, called before him Indian Brahmins, Christian priests, and Mahominedan Mullas, to argue for their respective biths. Johangire, who, with his want of credulity on the Subject of religion, was weak in his understanding, was always swayed by the last who spoke. The Mahommedan, who claimed the pre-cminence of being first heard, came always off with the worst; and the emperor, observing no order of time with regard to the Christian and Indian, was alternately swayed by both. The Mulla saw the disadvantage of his dignity; and, being defignedly late in his appearance, one day he was heard after the priest. Jehangire was perplexed for whom he should give his opinion. He asked the advice of Shaw Jehân, and that prince archly replied, "That he too was at a loss for whom to decide. But as each have established the credit of their fystems," faid he, " with a relation of miracles, let them both be put to that test. Let each take the book of his faith under his arm:

A D. 1666 Hig 1076 A D 1666 Hig 1076. let a fire be kindled round him, and the religion of him who shall remain undurt, shall be mine." The Mulla looked pale at the decision, and declared against this mode of proving his faith the priest knew the humane temper of the emperor, and offered himself for the pile. They were both dismissed But the missoriunes of Shaw Jeh'in rendered him devout in his latter days. The Corin was perpetually read in his presence; and Mullas, who relieved one another by turns were always in waiting.

Gifcf

The corperor, when first he heard of his fa ther sillings, ordered his fon Shaw Allum to fet out with all expedition to Agra "You have done no mury " faid he " to my father . and he may blef you with his dying breath But as for me, I will not wound him with my presence, lest rage might haften death before his time ' The prince rode post to Agra, but Shaw Jehan had ex nired two days before his arrival. His body was deposited in the tomb of his favourite wife. Mumaza Zemâni, with funeral folemnities ra ther decent than magnificent When the news of the death of his father was carried to Aurungzebe, he exhibited all the symptoms of unaffected grief He inflaurly fet off for Agra, and, when he arrived in that city, he fent a melfage to the princels Jehanara to requelt the favour of being admitted into her presence The requests of an emperor are commands She had already provided for an interview, and the received him with the utmost magnificence. presenting him with a large golden bason, in which were contained all the jewels of Shaw Jehan This magnificent offering, together with the polite dexterity of the princels in excusing her own former conduct, wrought so much on Aurung zbee, that he received her into his confidence. which which she ever after shared in common with her sister Rochinâra.

1075

A D

The most remarkable transaction of the ensuing year, was the escape of the Raja Sewâji from 🖵 Delhi, and his flight through by-roads and de-Strugge conduct, ferts to his own country. The turbulent disposition of that prince, and his depredatory incursions into the Imperial dominions in the Decan, brought upon him the arms of Aurungzêbe, under the conduct of Joy Singh and Dilere. Unfortunate in several battles, he shut himself up in his principal fortress, and being reduced to extremities, he threw himself upon the mercy of the enemy; and was carried, as has been already related, to Delhi. Upon his arrival, he was ordered into the presence, and commanded by the usher to make the usual obeisance to the emperor. He refused to obey; and looking fcornfully upon Aurungzêbe, exhibited every mark of complete contempt of his person. The emperor was much offended at the haughty demeanor of the captive, and he ordered him to be instantly carried away from his fight.

The principal ladies of the haram, and, among and flight them, the daughter of Aurungzêbe, saw from behind a curtain, the behaviour of Sewân. She was struck with the handsomeness of his person, and she admired his pride and haughty deportment. The intrepidity of the man became the fubject of much conversation. Some of the nobles interceded in his behalf; and the princess was warm in her folicitations, at the feet of her father. "Though I despise pomp," said Aurungzêbe, "I will have those honours which the refractory presume to refuse. Power depends upon ceremony and state, as upon abilities and strength of mind. But to please a daughter whom I love, I will indulge Sewaji with an abatement of fome of that obersance, which conquered princes owe to the emperor of the Moguls" A message was sent by the princess, in the warmth of her zeal, and the Raja, without being con fulted upon the measure, was again introduced

A D Hig 1076

394

of Sewali

into the hall of audience. When he entered, the usher approached, and commanded him to pay the usual obessance at the fbot of the throne "I was born a prince," faid he, "and I know not how to act the part of a flave" "But the vanquished," replied Aurungzebe, " lose all their rights with their fortune The fword has made Sewan my fervant; and I am refolved to relinquish nothing of what the fword has given" The Raja turn ed his back upon the throne, the emperor was enraged. He was about to iffue his commands against Sewaji, when that prince spoke thus, with a haughty tone of voice " Give me your daughter in marriage, and I will honour you us her father but fortune cannot deprive me of my dignity of mind, which nothing shall ex-tinguish but death The wrath of the emperor fubfided at a request which he reckoned ri diculous and abfurd He ordered him as a mad man from his presence, and gave him in charge to Fowlad, the director general of the Imperial camp". He was closely confined in that officer's house, but he found means to escape, after some months, in the disguise of a man, who was admitted into his apartment with a balket of flowers

The Ma raj duf contented.

The war with Sewan proved fatal to the Ma raia's influence with Aurungzêbe Naturally paffionate deceitful and imperious, he confider ed every order from the emperor, an injury He had been gratified with the government of Guzerat, for deferting the cause of the unfortu nate Dara When the three years of his fubaship were expired, he received an Imperial mandate to repair, with the army stationed in his province, to the assistance of Shaista against Sewaji. On the way, it is faid, he entered into a correpondence with that prince; being enraged to find, that the rich kingdom of Guzerat had been submitted to the government of Mohâbet. It was from Sewâji, that the Maraja received the affassins, by whose means he had attempted to affassinate Shaista He, however, covered his crime with fo much art, that mankind in general believed, that it was only a party of the enemy, who had the boldness to surprise the general in his tent; attributing to the known intrepidity of Sewaji, what actually proceeded from the address of Jesswint Singh. The emperor, who expected no good from any army commanded by two officers who disagreed in their opinions, recalled them both, as has been already related, and patched up a temporary peace with the enemy. Shaista, disfigured and maimed with his wounds, returned to court; but the Maraja retired in difgust to his hereditary dominions.

A D.

1666.

Shaista, at once, as a reward for his services, Shaista and a compensation for his missfortunes, was vernor of raised to the government of Bengal, which had Bengal been managed by deputy ever fince the death of Jumla the affairs of the province stood in need of his presence. The death of Jumla had encouraged the prince of Arracân to invade the eastern division of Bengal. He possessed himself of all the country along the coast, to the Ganges; and maintained at Chittagong some Portuguese banditti, as a barrier against the empire of the Moguls. These robbers, under the protection of the invader, spread their ravages far and wide. They scoured the coast with their piratical vessels; and extended their depredations through all the branches of the Ganges. The complaints 11/56 11/1 10-6 of the oppressed province were carried to the throne; and Shaisla was not only commissioned to extirpate the pirates, but even to penetrate with his arms into Arracin. A generous regret for Sug joined issue with an attention to the public benefit, in the mind of Aurungzèbe. The cruelty exercised against the unfortunate prince was not less an object of revenge, than the protection associated to public robbers.

Tales the 10 id findsep.

Shailla, upon his arrival in the province, fent a fleet and three thousand land forces, under the command of Hassen Beg, against the Raja of Armon The fleet failed from Dacca, and falling down the great river, furnrifed the forts of Jugdea and Allumgire Nagur, which the Raja had formerly dismembered from Bengal Ship ping his land forces on board his fleet, he fet fail for the island of Sindien, which lies on the coast of Chittagong The enemy possessed in this island several strong holds, into which they retir ed. and defended themselves with great bravery The Mogul however, in the space of a few weeks. reduced Sindien, and took part of the fleet of Ar racan Haffen s force being too small to act upon the continent with any profpect of fuccels, Shaifta had, by this time, affembled ten thou fand horse and foot at Dacca, with the command of which he invested his fon Ameid Chan wrote in the mean time a letter to the Portuguele, who were fettled at Chittagong, making them advantageous offers, should they join his arms, or even remain in a state of neutrality, and threatening them with destruction, should they aid the enemy

Gaineo er the Portuguele.

The letter had the intended effect upon the Portuguese, who began to fear the threatened storm. They immediately entered into a negociation with Hassen Beg. The Raja of Arracan was apprised

AD.

1666 Hig

1076.

apprifed of their intentions, by one of their own party, who betrayed their fecret. He prepared to take ample vengeance by putting them all to the fword The Portuguese, in this critical situation, ran to their boats in the night, and fet fail for the island of Sindiep, where they were well received by Haffen. He ordered them, foon after, to proceed to Bengal. Shaifta, upon their arrival, adhered to his former promise, and gave them houses and lands. He engaged many of them in his service; and he took advantage of their experience in naval affairs, by joining them, with their armed veffels, to the proposed expedition against Arracân.

Every thing being prepared for the invasion, Invades Ameid, with his fleet, consisting of about five Chitagong. hundred fail, and a confiderable body of horse and foot, departed from Dacca in the beginning of the fair feason; and, in the space of fix days, crossed the river Phenny, which divides Chittagong from Bengal. The troops of Arracân made a shew of opposition; but they fled to the capital of the province, which was about fifty miles distant. They shut themselves up in the fort. Ameid purfued them without delay. The fleet failed along the coast, in fight of the army, between the island of Sindiep and the shore. When it had reached Comorea, the fleet of Arracân, confisting of about three hundred Ghorâbs and armed boats, made its appearance. A smart engagement enfued, in which the enemy were repulsed, with a confiderable loss of men, and thirty-fix of their veffels. Being reinforced the next day, they prepared to renew the fight. Ameid, fearing the defeat of his fleet, ordered it to hawl in close to the shore, and, having detached a thousand musqueteers, with some great guns,

A D guns, from his army, posted them among the

C pital of Chitta Chitta gong ta ken and the province to duced

The enemy, encouraged by the retreat of the Moguls from the open fea, purfued them with great eagerness, and began the attack within musuet that of the land The Mogula defended themselves with resolution The enemy preffed on furroufly, and began to board their boats The whole fleet would have certainly been de flroyed, had not the detachment upon the shore advanced to the water's edge, keeping up such a fire upon the enemy, with guns and small arms, as obliged them to put off to fea were, however, disabled in such a manner as not to escape, and they were so much discou raged, that they fled up the river, and fecured themselves behind the fort Ameid, without delay, laid fiege to the place. The enemy loft their courage with their success. They behaved in a dastardly manner The town was very firong, and well supplied with artillery, stores and provisions They, however, all evacuated it, excepting fifty men, who remained with the governor. and furrendered at discretion The fugitives were purfued, and two thouland being furrounded on a neighbouring mountain, were taken and fold for flaves Ameid found twelve hundred and twenty three pieces of cannon in the place, and a prodigious quantity of stores. He named the town Istamabad, and annexed the whole province to the kingdom of Bengal

1

AURUNGZEBE,

CHAP. VI.

Origin of the quarrel with Persia-Conduct of Shaw Abás-Aurungzébe endeavours to appease him-He prepares for was -Writes a letter to the visier -which is intercepted-The emperor suspects the Persian nobles—A proclamation—A threatened—Consternation at Delhi—The princess Jehanára ariwes from Agra to appease the Perfians—The visier exculpates himself—The Persian nobility received into favour—March of the emperor-Death and character of Shaw Abas-Peace with Persia—Revolt of the prince Shaw Allum—He returns to his duty—War with the Afgans-Magnificent reception of the king of Bucharia.

HE emperor having, by his address, as well as by his crimes, extricated himself from domestic hostilities, was fuddenly involved in a foreign The Persians, who with a preposterous negligence, had remained quiet during the civil The origin diffensions in India, shewed a disposition to attack Aurungzêbe, after his fortune and conduct had firmly established him on the throne. various

A D 1666

Hig

1076

1666 ling 1076

various reasons had induced Shaw Abas the Se cond, who, with no mean abilities, held then the scepter of l ersia, to avoid coming to extremi ties with the house of l'imur, when all its The unfuccefsful expe branches were in arms ditions against the unconquered tribes along the Indian ocean, had drained his treafury, and Mo habet, who remained in a state of neutrality in the northern provinces of Hindostan, kept an army of veterans in the field. The other passions of Abas were more violent than his ampition He feemed more anxious to preferve his dignity at home, than to purchase fame by his arms abroad, and, had not his pride been wounded by an accident more than from any defign, on the fide of Au ungzebe, that monarch might have enjoyed in tranquillity an empire which he had acquired by blood

of the

The death of Dara and the flight of Suja hav ing given stability to the power of Aurungzebe in the eyes of the princes of the north, he had received, in the fourth year of his reign congra tulatory embassies from lartary and Persia return the compliment to Shaw Abas, Firbiet Chan, a man of high dignity, was fent ambassa dor from the court of Delhi to Ispahan He was received with the ceremony and respect which was due to the representative of so great a prince as the emperor of Hindolan Ilis credentials were read in the hall of audience, in the pre fence of the nobility, and the few prefents, which the suddenness of his departure from his court had permitted him to bring along with him to Abas were accepted with condescension and exprellions of fatisfaction Tirbiet wrote an ac count of Lis reception to Delhi, and the empe for ordered magnificent prefents to be prepared, and fent, under an efcort, to Persia.

The

The care of furnishing the presents is vested in an office which bears some resemblance to our chancery, having the power of ingroffing patents, and of judging of their legality before they pass the seal of the empire. Some presents had been, quarrel at the same time, ordered to be prepared for the prince of the Usbccs, whom it was customary to address only by the title of Wali, or Master of the Western Tartary. The same clerk in the office made out the inventory of the presents for both the princes; and, at the head of the lift for Persia, he called Shaw Abas, Wali, or Master of Iran. The inventory, accompanied by a letter to the emperor, was fent with the presents to Lirbiet; and he, without examining either, demanded an audience of Abas, and placed both in his hands as he fat upon his throne. Abas, though otherwise an excellent prince, was much addicted to wine. He was intoxicated when he received Tirbiet, and with an impatience to know the particulars of the presents, he threw first his eyes on the inventory. When he read the Wali, or Master of Persia, he started, in a rage, from his throne, and drew his daggéi from his fide. The nobles shrunk back on either fide, and Tirbiet, who stood on the steps which led up to the Imperial canopy, retreated from the wrath of Abas. The emperor, still continuing silent, fat down. Amazement was pictured in every countenance.

"Approach," said Abas, " ye noble Persi- with Perans; and hear the particulars of the presents sent by the Emperor of the World," alluding to the name of ALLUMGIRE, which Aurungzèbe had " The Emperor of the World to the Master of Persia!" A general murmur fpread around, they all turned their eyes upon That lord began to fear for his life,

Hig.

A D. 1666. Hir 1076

and Ab is faw his conflernation "Hence, from my prefence," faid he, "though I own not the title of Aurungzébe to the World, I admit his claim to your fervice. Tell the implous fon, the inhuman brother, the murderer of his family, that though his crimes have rendered him mafter of Hindollan, there is full a lord over Perfia, who detells his duplicity and desplies his power Hence with these baubles, let him purchase with them the savour of those who are not shocked at guilt like his, but Abas, whose hands are clean, shudders at the iniquity of a prince covered with the blood of his relatiops"

peto n deavorn

lirbiet retired from the prefence, and wrote letters to Aurungzebe The emperor of Perlia. in the mean time, ordered every necessary pre paration for war The troops stationed on the fairts of the empire were commanded to affem ble, new levies were made, and a general ar dour for an invation of India ran through all the Persian dominions. Aurungzebe, upon receiv ing the letters of Tirbiet, wrote an immediate answer to that lord He laid the whole blame on the inadvertence and ignorance of a clerk in office, declaring, in the most solemn manner. that he never meant an affront to the illustrious " The trile of Allumgire," faid house of Sefi he. " is adopted from an ancient custom, pre valent among the posterity of Timur It is only calculated to impress subjects with awe, not to infult independent princes The prefents, which I fent, are the best testimony of my respect for Shaw Abas, but if that prince is bent on war, I am ready to meet him on my frontiers with an army Though I love peace with my neighbours I will not profirate my dignity before their ungovernable passions.

Abis.

Abas, whose choleric disposition was almost always inflamed with wine, would not admit Tirbiet into his presence. He sent an order to that lord to depart his dominions; and his ambassador was to be the messenger of the unalter- to appease able resolves of Abàs to Aurungzêbe. prince, when he had first received the letters of Tirbiet, called his fon Shaw Allum, with twenty thousand horse, from the Decan. He ordered him immediately to the frontiers, to watch the motions of Persia. Abas, in the mean time, having collected his army, to the number of eighty thousand, with an immense train of artillery, advanced, at their head, into Chorassan. Shaw Allum was reinforced by all the troops of the northern provinces. He, however, received strict orders from his father, not to risque the issue of a general action, but to harass the enemy in his march. He himself made preparations to take the field. An accident, however, happened, which threw him into great perplexity, and stopt his progress.

Amir Chan, the Imperial governor of the pro-Spies feizvince of Cabul, having feized four Tartars who had been fent as spies by Shaw Abas, to explore the state of the frontiers of India, sent them prifoners to Delhi The emperor delivered them over for examination to Alimâd, one of his principal nobles. Alimad, having cairied the Tartars to his own house, began to ask them questions concerning their commission from the king of Persia. They remained filent, and he threatened them with the torture. in One of them immediately fnatched a fword from the fide of one of Alimad's attendants; and, with one blow, laid that lord dead at his feet. Three more, who were in the room, were flain. The Tartars arming themfelves with the weapons of the dead, iffued forth, dispersed L lVol. III.

A D 1666. Hig 1076. dispersed themselves in the crowd, and, notwith-standing all the vigilance, astinity, and promises of Aurungzebe, they were never heard of more. The empetor, naturally suspicious, began to suppose that the Persian nobles in his service had secreted the spice. He became dark and cautious, placing his emissaries round the houses of those whom he most suspected.

A le ter

whom he most suspected Advices, in the mean time, arrived at Delhi, that Abas, having finished his preparations, was full march, with a well appointed army, A letter was intercepted from toward India that prince to Jaffier, the visier, a Persian by It appeared from the letter, that a con fpiracy was formed by all the Persian nobility in the fervice of India, to betray Aurungzebe into the hands of the enemy, should be take the field The emperor was thrown into the utmost per plexity His rage, for once, got the better of his prudence. He gave immediate orders to the city guards, to furround all the houses of the Persian nobility He issued forth, at the same time, a proclamation, that none of them should flir abroad upon pain of death He called the Mogul lords to a council, he secured their fide lity, by representing to them the urgency of the danger, and, contrary to his usual coolness and moderation, he fwore, by the living God, that should he find that there was any truth in the conspiracy, he would put every bne of the Per fian nobility to the fword

which oc caffon bept 9 nan nobility to the tword

The proolamation was "fearce promulgated, when Tirbiet arrived from Rirfia He prefented himfelf before the emperor, and informed him, that at his departure he had been called before Shaw Abas ' That prince, after venting his rage against Aurungzebe in very diffelpedful terms, concluded with telling the ambassador, That as

AD.

1666. Hig

1076

his master might soon be in want of swift horses to fly from his refentment, he had ordered for him three hundred out of the Imperial stables. whose speed would answer the expectations of his fears "We shall soon have occasion to try," added Abas, " whether this Conqueror or the World can defend the dominions which he has usurped in Hindostan" Aurungzêbe was enraged beyond measure. He commanded that the horses, as a dreadful denunciation of his wrath, should be killed before the gates of the conspirators The troops, at the same time, were ordered to stand to their arms, in the seven military stations, and to wait the signal of massacre, which was to be displayed over the gate of the palace.

A general consternation spread over the whole a general city. The people retired to their houses; and tion the streets were deserted. A panic seized all; they saw a dreadful tempest gathering; and they knew not where it was to fall. An awful filence, as a prelude to the storm, prevailed. The Perfians were numerous and warlike; the emperor implacable and dark. The eyes and ears of men were turned to every quarter. The doors were all shut. There was a kind of silent commotion; a dreadful interval of suspence. Ideal sounds were taken for the fignal of death; and the timotous feemed to hug themselves in the visionary fecurity of their houses. The Persians had, in the mean time, collected their dependents. stood armed in the courts before their respective houses, and were prepared to defend their lives, or to revenge their deaths with their valour.

Things remained for two days in this awful at Delhi, situation. Aurungzêbe himself became, for the -first time, irresolute. He was alike fearful of granting pardon and of inflicting punishment.

L. 1 2

10 G

There was danger on both fides, and his invention, fertile as it was in expedients, could point out no resource. He endeavoured, by promises and fair pretences, to get the principals into his hands. But they had tal en the alarm, and no one would trust himself to the elemency of an en raged despot Upon the sust intelligence of the conspiracy, the emperor wrote to his sister Jeha nara, who refided at Agra, to come with all expedition to Delhi The Perfian nobles, he knew. had been attached to Shaw Jehan, to whose fa your they had owed their promotion in the em pire, and he hoped that they would liften to the advice of the favourite daughter of the prince whom they loved He himself remained, in the mean time, fullen and dark he spoke to none, his whole foul being involved in thought.

Ad 170 of the Mogul lords

Tacr and Cubad, two of the most powerful, most popular, and respectable of the Mogul nobles, presented themselves, at length, before the emperor They represented to him, that it would be both unjust and impolitic to facrifice the lives of fo many great men to bare suspicion, for that no proofs of their guilt had hitherto appeared. but from the hands of an enemy who might have devised this method to fow division and dif fension in a country which he proposed to invade That the Persian nobles had become powerful in the state from their high military commands, their great wealth, the immense number of their fol lowers, that the common danger had united them, that the attack upon them would not prove a massacre, but a civil war That the Patan nobility, warlike, numerous, disaffected, still hankering after their ancient domination of which they had been deprived by the folly of their princes, as much as by the valour of the Moguls, would not fail to throw their weight into the

the scale of the Persians; and, upon the whole, they were of opinion, that peaceable measures should be adopted toward domestic traitors, at least till the danger of foreign war should be 1 emoved.

A D. 1666. Hig

The arguments of the two lords had their due in fivour weight with the emperor. He declared himself fin nofor lement measures, but how to essect a recon-bles. ciliation, with honour to himself, was a matter of difficulty. The princess Jehanâra arrived, in the mean time, from Agia. She had travelled from that city to Delhi, on an elephant, in less than two days, though the distance is two hundred miles. Her brother received her with joy. After a short conference, she presented herself, in her chair, at the door of the visier's house. The gates were immediately thrown open, and she was ushered into the apartments of the women. The vifit was a mark of fuch confidence, and fo great an honour in the eyes of the visier, that, leaving the princess to be entertained by the ladies, he hastened, without even seeing her himfelf, or waiting for her request to the emperor. When he entered the hall of audience, he proftrated himself before the throne. Aurungzêbe descended, took him in his arms, and embraced him in the most friendly manner. He then put the letter, which was the cause of the disturbance, in the visier's hand.

Jaffier, with a countenance expressing that fere- who are nity which accompanies innocence, ran over the reconciled letter, Aurungzêbe marking his features as he read. He gave it back, and positively denied his ever having given the least reason to Shaw Abas for addressing him in that manner. He expatiated on his own fervices; upon those of his ancestors, who had resided in Hindostan ever fince the time of the emperor Humaioon. He represented llle 1076 represented the improbability of his entertain ing any defigns against a prince, who had raised him to the first rank among his subjects, and had left him nothing to hope or to vish for but the continuance of his favour and the stability of his throne He concluded with a pertinent quellion " What could I expect in Perfix equal to the high office of vitier in Hindoftan? Let my com mon sense be an argument of my unocence, and let not the emperor, by an opinion of my guilt, declare to the world that I am deprived of rea fon "

408

च th tle empeter

Aurungzebe was convinced by the speech of Juffier, and he wondered from whence had pro ceeded his own fears. By way of doing him honour, he ordered him to be clothed with a magnificent dress, at the same time direding him to command all the Persian nobles to mal e their immediate appearance in the hall of audience. When they were all affembled, the emperor mounted the throne, and, after they had paid the usual compliments, he addressed them in a long speech. He excused his proceedings by reading the letter of Abas; and he reproved them gently for their contumacy in not obeying his orders. He argued, that the power of a monarch ceases when his commands are disputed, and, that the indignity thrown upon him by their disobedience, touched him more than their sup posed treason "But, continued he, "a prince, though the representative of God, is hable to error and deception. To own that I have been partly in the wrong, carries in itself an excuse for you Forget my mustake, and I promise to forgive your obstinacy Rest satisf fied of my favour, as I am determined to rely upon your gratitude and loyalty My father, and even myself, have made you what you are; let not the hands which raised you so high, repent of the work which they have made."

A D.

The speech of the emperor seemed to be well received by all the Pertians, excepting Mahommed Amin, the fon of the famous Jumla. That Infolence lord, haughty and daring in his disposition, was of Amin J diffatisfied with the conduct of the visier, hurt the submission of his countrymen, and piqued at the emperor's latter words. He looked flernly upon Aurungzêbe; and faid, in a scornful manner, "Since you have been pleafed so pardon us for offences which we did commit; we can do no less than forget crrois which you have made." The emperor, pretending that he did not hear Amin distinctly, ordered him to repeat his words, which he did twice, in a haughty and high tone of voice. The eyes of Aurungzêbe kindled with rage. He feized a fword, which lav by his fide on the throne. He looked around to fee, whether any of the nobles prepared to refent the affront offered to his dignity. They stood in filent astonishment. He sat down; and his fury beginning to abate, he talked to the visier about the best manner of carrying on the Perfian war.

The minds of the people being settled from Aurung-the expected disturbances, Aurungzêbe pre- the field pared to take the field. The army had already assembled in the neighbourhood of Delhi, and the Imperial tents were pitched on the road toward the north. He marched in a few days at the head of a great force; but the storm which he feared, diffipated without falling. When he was within a few miles of Lahore, expresses arrived from his son, who commanded army of observation on the frontiers of Persia, with intelligence that Shaw Abas, who

A D 1666. Hig 1076 had languished for some time under a neglected disease, expired in his camp on the twenty sists of September. This accident, of which a more ambitious monarch than Aurungzébe might have taken advantage, served only to change the resolutions of that prince from wir. He considered that nature seemed to have de signed the two countries for separate empires, from the immense ridge of mountains which divide them from one another, by an almost impassable line.

Death and character of Shaw Abas.

Shaw Abus was a prince of abilities, and, when rouzed, fond of expedition, and delight ing in war He was just in his decisions, mild in his temper, and affable in his conver fation Destitute of prejudices of every kind, he made no diffinction of countries, none of fystems of religion. He encouraged men of worth of every nation, they had access to his person, he heard and redressed their grievances, and rewarded their merit. He was however. jealous of his prerogative, and he was deter mined to be obeyed He could forgive the guilty, upon being convinced of their contri tion, but an infult on his dignity he would never forgive. His passions were naturally strong, he broke often forth like a flash of lightning, but when he was most agitated, a calm was near, and he feemed to be ashamed of the trifles which ruffled his temper. He loved justice for its own fake; and though his excelles in wine gave birth fometimes to folly. they never gave rife to an act of imuflice. He was fond of the company of women, and his love of variety produced the differencer of which he died

Peacewith Upon the death of Shaw Abas, his uncle re

Η̈́ε

1667 Hig

1077

He sent a messenger to Aurungzêbe, acquainting him of the death of his nephew; and that he left him to choose either peace or war. The emperor returned for ansver, That his own empire was ample; and that all he wanted was to defend it from infult and invelion. That the difrespectful words of Abas vanished with his life; for, conferous of his own integrity and power, that he neither feared the abule, nor dreaded the arms of any prince. He condoled with the family of Sheick Seff, for the loss of a monarch, whose most exceptionable action was his unprovoked attempt upon India. Aurungzêbe, however, left a powerful army on his frontiers. The Perfians might be induced to derive advantage from the immense preparations which they had made; and he resolved to trust nothing to their moderation. The prince Shaw Allum was, in the mean time, recalled to Delhi. The emperor, full of circumspection and caution in all his actions, was refolved to remove temptation from He feared that an army, unemployed in a foreign war, might be converted into an instrument of ambition at home. Shaw Allum copied his father's moderation and felf-denial upon every occasion, and he, therefore, was not to trusted.

During the alarm of the Persian war, the tri- War in butary sovereign of Bijapour began to shew a dis-Bijapour. respect for the Imperial mandates; and though he did not absolutely rebel, his obedience was full of coldness and delay. Dilêre Chan, by orders from the court of Delhi, led an army against the refractory tributary. He laid waste the country, and besieged the prince in his capital. Adil Shaw was foon reduced to extremities for want of provisions; and he was upon the point of surrendering himself at discretion, when orders arrived from the emperor, in the camp of Dilêre, to break up the fiege, and to return immediately with the army to Delhi. These unseasonable or ders proceeded from the palous, of Shaw Allum He knew that Dilere was in the interest of his younger brother, and he was assaud that a conquest of such splendor would give him too much weight in the empire. He had infinuated there fore, to his father, that Dilere had entered into a treasonable correspondence with the enemy Aurungashe was deceived, and the fiege was raifed.

1668 111g 10 R

Deligm of the prince Shaw Al

Shaw Allum, who had returned to the Decan, refided in the city of Aurungabad. To disappoint Dilere in his prospect of same, was not the only view of the prince. He meditated a revolt, and he was astraid of Dilere. His father's orders were favourable to his wishes. He had received instructions from court to seize the person of the suspected lord, should he shew any marks of disaffection, or to subdue him by sorce of arms, should he appear refractory. Thus sar the designs of Shaw Allum succeeded. Dilêre, apprized of the princes schemes broke up the siege, though with regret, as the place was on the point of surrendering. He moved toward Delhi, with a disappointed army of thirty thousand Patan horse, and the like number of infantry.

to rebel t

Dilcre arriving within fix miles of Aurungabad, encamped with his army in an extensive plain. The prince lay under the walls of that city with eighty thousand men. Dilcre sent a inessenger to Shaw Allum, excusing himself for not waiting upon him in person that evening, but he promised to present himself in the tent of authence by the dawn of next morning. The prince called a council of his principal officers, who had already sworn on the Coran to support him with their lives and fortunes. The Maraja, who was never happy but when he was hatching mischief against Aurungzebe, was present. prince proposed, that when Dilêre came into the presence, they should lay open to him their whole defign against the emperor, that in case of his appearing refractory, he should instantly be dispatched as a dangerous enemy. Though Shaw Allum did not altogether approve of the Maraja's violence, he consented that Dilêre should be feized; and they broke up their deliberations with that refolution.

A D

1668

Dilêre, who was no stranger to the conspiracy, Pursues fuspected the design against his person. He was also informed, by his friends in the 'camp, that the principal officers were that up in council with the prince. He struck his tents in the night, and, marching on filently, took a circuit round the other fide of the city, and when morning appeared, he was heard of above thirty miles from Aurungabâd, on the road to Delhi. The prince, being informed of the flight of Dilêre, was violently transported with rage. He marched suddenly in pursuit of the fugitive; but he was fo much retarded by his numbers, which, including the followers of the camp, amounted to two hundred thousand men, that in a few days, he found that Dilêre had outstripped him above fifty miles. He selected a part of his army, and leaving the heavy baggage behind, continued the pursuit with great vivacity. His officers did not, however, second the warmth of the prince. were afraid of the veteran troops of Dilêre; and threw every obstacle in the way which could retard their own march.

Dilêre, in the mean time, apprized Aurung-Emperor zêbe, by repeated expresses, of the revolt of his alarmed. The Imperial standard was immediately fon.

erected

414 ΛD 1668 Hir

1 79

crefted without the walls, and the emperor him felf took the field the very day on which he re ceived the letters. He took the route of Agra, with great expedition. He arrived in that city in three days, and he immediately detached a force to take possession of the important pass of Narwar Orders were, at the same time, fent to Dilcre to march to Ugein, the capital of Malava, and there to join the troops of the province Re inforced by thefe, he was directed to encamp be hind the Nirbidda, which divides the Decan from the rest of India, and there to stop the progress of the prince. Dilere, with his usual activity, complied with the orders, and prefented formi dables lines, mounted with artillery, at the fords of the river

Prince drem his defigns.

The prince, apprized of the strong position of Dilere, and the rapid preparations of Aurungzebe. returned toward Aurungabad He wrote, from that city, letters to his father He pretended that he had only executed the orders of the em peror, in pursuing Dilêre Aurungzebe seemed fatisfied with this excuse His fon was formida ble, and he refolved, by degrees, to divest him of his dangerous power A rebellion was begun and ended without shedding blood. art of the father was conspicuous in the son They looked upon one another with jealousy and fear, and it was remarkable, that when both were in the field, and ready to engage, they had carried their politenels fo far as not to utter, on either fide, a fingle word of reproach conperor himfelf, notwithstanding his preparati ons, affected to fay to his nobles, that he was perfectly convinced of the loyalty of his fon

D lere re marded

The true fentiments of Aurungzêbe, however, appeared in the diftinguishing honours which he bellowed on Dilêre. That lord had rendered eminent

eminent services to the empire. In his march to the Decan against Adıl Shaw, he had reduced fome refractory Rajas in the mountains, who, having joined in a confederacy, refused to pay their tribute. He deviated from his route into the country of Bundela, and attacked, in his territory, the Raja of Hoda The spoils of the enemy made ample amends for the tribute which had been with-held. Near two millions, in jewels and coin, were remitted by Dilêre to the Imperial treasury. The tribute of the reduced princes was increased, and the successful general himself became rich at the expence of his foes. rungzêbe added honours to his wealth, and without throwing any reflections on his fon, he publicly thanked the man who had fo gallantly opposed his designs.

The general peace which had been established Rebellion in the empire by the return of Shaw Allum to his duty, was, in some degree, disturbed by an insurrection of the wild barbarians of the north. The Afgan tribe of Eufoph Zehi, who possess the heads of the Attoc and the Nılâb, rushed down from their mountains like a torrent, with thirty thousand men. They spread terror devastation over all the plains of Punjab; having invested their chief with the ensigns of royalty under the name of Mahommed Shaw. prince, in the manifestoes which he dispersed in his march, averred his own descent from Alexander the Great, and a daughter of the king of This genealogy was probably fa-Transoxiana. bulous; but the Afgans have high claims on antiquity. A literary people, like the Arabs, and, by their mountains, their poverty, and the peculiar ferocity of their manners, secured from conquest, they have preserved among them many records

A D. 1668. Hig A D 1660 11 -10-0

in their posts alone. They formed themselves in squadrons, but they were surrounded, and three hundred chiefs came into the hands of the The flower of the rebel army fell in this action Amin, in the mean time arriving, purfued the fugitives through all their almost in accessible villes, and levelled every thing with the ground but the rocks, into which a few un fortunate Afrans found a refuge from the Iwords of the victors

A general Deice

A general peace was now established over all the empire Aurungzebe, to whom bufiness was amusement, employed himself in mal ing sa lutary regulations for the benefit of his fubjects He loved money, because it was the foundation of power, and he encouraged industry and com merce, as they encreased his revenue. He him felf, in the mean time, led the life of a hermit, in the midft of a court, unequalled in its fplendour The pomp of state, he found, from experience, was not necessary to establish the power of a prince of abilities, and he avoided its trouble as he liked not its vanity. He however encouraged magnificence among his officers at court, and his deputies in the provinces. The ample allowance granted to them from the revenue, was not, they were made to understand, to be hoarded up for their private use " The money is the property of the empire," faid Aurungzebe, " and it mult be employed in giving weight to those who exe

An opportunity offered itself to his magnifi se tree p- cence and generolity in the beginning of the ele t on of the venith year of his reign Abdalla, king of the leg of Leffer Bucharia, lineally defeended from the great Zingis, having abdicated the throne to his fon Aliris, advanced into Tibet in his way to Mecca He sent a message to Aurungzebe, re quelling a permission for himself and his retinue to to pass through India. The emperor ordered the governor of Cashmile to receive the royal pilgrim with all imaginary pomp, and to supply him with every article of luxury and convenience at the public expense. The governors of districts were commanded to attend Abdalla from province to province, with all their followers. The troops, in every place through which he was to pass, were directed to pay him all military honours; and, in this manner, he advanced to Delhi, and was received by the emperor at the gates of the city. Having remained seven months in the capital, he was conducted with the same pomp and magnificence to Surât, where he embarked for Aiabia.

A D. 1669 Hig 1079

AURUNG-

AURUNGZEBE.

CHAP VII

Observations—Education of Eastern princes—Genius of Auringzébe—His attention to justice—Contempt of pomp—Austerity—Clemency—Knowledge—Public buildings—Encouragement to letters—Charity—Skill in war—Manly exercises—Continence—Accossibleness—Amusements—Ceremonies of reception—Creation of nobles—Business of the morning—noon—and evening—Observations

Obferva

THOUGH History loses half her dignity in descending to unimportant particulars, when she brings information, she cannot fail, even in her most negligent dress, to please. The singular good fortune and abilities of Aurungzebe stamp a kind of consequence on every circumstance, which contributed to raise him to a throne, which his ment deserved to possess without a crime. The line of his public conduct, in rising to the sum int of ambition, has already been followed with some precision, but his private life, which prepared him for the greatness at which he had now arrived, remains still in the shade. To bring for ward ward the objects which have hitherto lain diftant and dim behind, will heighten the features of the picture, and perhaps recommend it to those who wish to see the glare of great transactions tempered with anecdote.

The education of the natives of Asia is con-Unfavourfined; that of young men of distinction always cation private. They are thut up in the haram from infancy till their seventh or eighth year; or, if they are permitted to come abroad, it is only under the care of eunuchs, a race of men more effeminate than the women whom they guard. dren, therefore, imbibe in early youth little female cunning and diffimulation, with a tincture of all those inferior passions and prejudices which are improper for public life. The indolence, natural to the climate, is encouraged by example. They loll whole days on filken fophas, they learn to make nolegays of falle flowers with tafte, to bathe in rose-water, to anoint themselves with perfumes, whilft the nobler faculties of the foul lose their vigour, through want of cultivation.

Princes are permitted, at ten years of age, to of eastern appear in the hall of audience. A tutor attends princes them, who imposes upon them no restraint. They receive little benefit from his instructions, and they advance frequently into life without having their minds embued with any confiderable knowledge of letters. They are married to some beautiful woman at twelve, and it cannot be supposed that a boy, in possession of such an enchanting play-thing as a young wife, will give much attention to the dry study of grammar. The abilities of the princes of the house of Timur, it must be confessed, extricated, when they advanced in life, their minds from the effects of this ruinous mode of passing youth. The most of them were men of letters, and given to in-M m 2 quiry;

quiry, but their attention to the education of their children, could not altogether superfede the unberent projudices of their country

Larly ge

Shaw Jehan was extremely anxious in training up his fons in all the literature and knowledge of the Last He delivered each of them into the hands of men of virtue as well as of letters he raifed the tutors to dignities in the flate, to impress awe upon their pupils, and to induce them to liften to their precents Aurungzebe. however, was not fortunate in his mafter genius flew before the abilities of the teacher. and the latter, to cover his own ignorance, em ploved the active mind of the prince in difficult and unprofitable fludies Being naturally re markably ferious, he gave up his whole time to application The common amusements of chil dren gave him no pleafure. He was frequently known whilst set he was very young, to retire from the puerile buffoonery of his attendants, to the dry and difficult fludy of the Persian and Arabic languages His affiduity prevailed over the dallness of his tutor, and he made a progress far beyond his years

Ilsattn tontojuf tices the dullness of his tutor, and he made a progress far beyond his years

Time had established into an almost indispensible duty, that the emperor, with his affestors, the principal judges was to sit for two hours every day in the hall of justice, to hear and decide causes Shaw Jeban, who took great delight in promoting justice, frequently exceeded the usual time. Aurungzebe, while yet but twelve years of age stood constantly near the throne; and he made remarks, with uncommon fagacity, upon the merits of the causes which were agitated before his father. The emperor seemed highly pleased at abilities which afterwards ruined his own power. He often asked the opinion of his son, for amusement, upon points of equity, and he frequently pronounced fentence in the very terms of Aurungzêbe's decision

When he was, in his early youth, appointed contempt to the government of a province, he was obliged, of pomp by his office, to imitate, though in miniature, the ry mode of the court. He had his hall of audience, he prefided in his court of justice; he represented royalty in all its forms, except in its pomp and magnificence, to which the natural aufterity of his manners had rendered him an enemy. exhibited, upon every occasion, an utter aversion to flatterers: he admitted not, into his presence, men of dissolute manners. The siist he thought infulted his judgment, the latter difgraced him as the guardian of the morality, as well as of the property, of the people. Musicians, dancers, and fingers, he banished from his court, as foes to gravity and virtue. Mimics, actors, and buffoons, he drove from his palace, as an useless race of men.

His dress was always plain and simple. He Affects wore, upon festival days only, cloth of gold, in dreis adorned with jewels. He, however, changed his dress twice a day, being remarkably cleanly in his person. When he rose in the morning, he plunged into the bath, and then retired for a short time to prayers. Religion suited the serious turn of his mind, and he at last became an enthusiast through habit In his youth he never stirted abroad on Friday; and should he happen to be in the field, or on a hunting party, he fufpended all business and diversions. Zealous for the faith of Mahommed, he rewarded proselytes with a liberal hand, though he did not chuse to persecute those of different persuasions in matters of religion.

He carried his austerity and regard for morali-His austety into the throne. He made strict laws against love

vices

vices of every kind. He was fevere against adultery and formeation and a ainst a certain innuatural crime, he issued various edicts. In the administration of justice, he was indefatigable, vigilant, and exact. He fat almost every day in justgment, and ne chose men of virtue, as well as remarkable for their knowledge in the lay for his affestiors. When the cruse appeared intricate, it was left to the examination of the beach of judges, in their common and usual court. They were to report upon such causes as had originated before the throne, and the emproportion of determined the first proportion of determined the first of ja ice

In the courts of the governors of provinces. and even often on the benches on which his deputies fat in judgment he kept fpies upon their conduct Though these were known to exist. the r persons were not known The princes, his ions as well as the other vicerovs, were in constant terror nor durit they exercise the least degree of copression against the subject, as every thing found its way to the ears of the emperor They were turned out of their office upon the leaft well founded complaint, and when they appear ed in the prefence the nature of their crime was put in writing into their bands. Stript of their estates and honours, they were obliged to appear every day at court, as an example to others. and after being punished for some time in this mauner, according to the degree of their crime, they were reflored to favour, the most guilty were banished for life.

Proce

Capital punifiments were almost totally un known under Aurungzebe. The adherents of his brothers who contended with him for the empire, were freely pardoned when they laid down their arms. When they appeared in his presence,

they

they were received as new subjects, not as inve-Naturally mild and moderate terate rebels. through policy, he feemed to forget that they had not been always his friends. When he appeared in public, he clothed his features with a complacent benignity, which pleafed all. Those who had trembled at his name, from the fame of his rigid justice, when they saw him, found themselves at ease. They could express themfelves, in his presence, with the greatest freedom and composure. His affability gave to them confidence; and he secured to himself their esteem by the strict impartiality of his decisions.

His long experience in business, together with Knowthe acuteness and retentiveness of his mind, ren-ledge of dered him master even of the detail of the affairs of the empire. He remembered the rents, he was thoroughly acquainted with the usages of every particular district. He was wont to write down in his pocket-book, every thing that occurred to him through the day. He formed a systematical knowledge of every thing concerning the revenue, from his notes, to which, upon eve-Ty necessary occasion, he recurred. The governors of the provinces, and even the collectors in the districts, when he examined either, on the state of their respective departments, were asraid of misrepresentation or ignorance. The first ruined them for ever, the latter turned them out of their offices

His public buildings partook of the temper of Public his own mind. They were rather uleful than buildings. splendid. At every stage, from Cabul to Aurungabâd, from Guzerat to Bengal, through the city of Agra, he built houses for the accommodation of travellers. These were maintained at the public expence. They were supplied with wood, with utentils of cookery, with a certain portion

Encou ragement to letters were repaired, bridges were built on the fin rivers, and boats furnified for paffing the large In all the principal enties of India, the emiror founded univerfities, in every inferior to he erecled schools. Mallers, paid from the trefury, were appointed for the instruction of you. Men of known abilities, honour, and learnin were appointed to examine into the programhich the learners made, and to prevent malence and mattention in the mallers. Ma portion of rice and other provisions. The hou which his producesfors had creefed on by roa lence and mattention in the malters. Ma houses for the reception of the poor and main were exceed which were endowed with a revinue from the crown. The imperor, in the me time, collicted all the book which could found on every subject, and, riter ordering ma copies of each to be made, public libraries we formed, for the convenience of learned me who had access to them at pleasure. He wro often to the learned in every corner of his don mons, with his own hand. He called them court, and placed them, according to their all littles, in offices in the state, those, who we raised to the dignity of judges, in the difference in the commettaries on the Coran, we courts of justice

Skill od Aurungzebe was as experienced in war, as coarage in was in the arts of peace Though his person courage was almost umparalleled, he always edeavoured to conquer more by stratagem than t force To succeed by art threw honour upc himself, to subdue by power acquired to othe same Such was his coolness in action, that, the rising and setting sun the times appointed for prayer, he never neglected to attend to the duty, though in the midst of battle. Devo of thanksgiving, and one of festivity and joy.

In the ait of writing, Aurungzêbe excelled in Learning ar comment degree. He wrote many letters with his own hand, he corrected always the diction of his secretaries. He never permitted a letter of business to be dispatched, without critically examining it himself. He was versed in the

of his fecretaries. He hever permitted a letter of business to be dispatched, without critically examining it himself. He was versed in the Persian and Arabic, he wrote the language of his ancestors the Moguls, and all the various dialects of India. In his diction he was concise and nervous; and he reduced all dispatches to a brevity and precision, which prevented all misconstruction and perplexity.

Though not remarkable for his strength of Skillingth body, he was extremely active in the exercises ercises of the field. He was an excellent archer, he threw the lance with grace, and he was fo good a horseman, that sew men durst follow him in the He understood the use of fire arms so well, that he shot deer on full speed from his horse. When he wandered over the country in pursuit of game, he did not forget the concerns of the flate. He examined the nature of the foil, he enquired even of common labourers concerning its produce. He understood, and, therefore, encouraged agriculture. He issued an edict, that the rents should not be raised on those who, by their industry, had improved their faims. He mentioned, in the edict, that fuch practice was at once unjust and impolitic, that it checked the spirit of improvement, and impoverished the state. " And what joy," said he, " can Aurungzêbe have in possessing wealth in the midst of public distress?"

Though

428 Chaffity

Though he entertained many women, accord ing to the cultom of his country, it was only for He contented himfelf with his lawful wives, and thefe only in fuccession, when one either died or became old. He frent very little time in the apartment of his women. He role every morning at the dawn of day, and went into the bathing chamber, which communicated with a private chipel, to which he retired for half an hour, to prayers Returning into his apartments from chapel, he fpent half an hour in reading fome book of devotion, and then went into the haram to drefs. He entered the chamber of juffice generally about feven o'clock, and there fat with the judges, read petitions, and decided causes till nine. Justice was dif penfed in a fummary manner, and rewards and punishments were immediate, the disputes, which were not clear, having been already weighed by the judges in their own court

Accession to

The people in general had access into the cham ber of justice, and there they had an opportunity of laying their grievances and distresses before their fovereign. Aurungzêbe ordered always a sum of money to be placed by his side on the bench, and he relieved the necessitious with his own hand. Large sums were in this manner expended every day, and, as the court was open to all, the unfortunate found, invariably, a resource in the Imperial bounty.

Amnfe

The emperor retired at nine to breakfast, and continued for an hour with his family. He then came forth into a balcony, which faced the great square. He sat there to review his elephants, which passed before him in gorgeous caparisons. He sometimes amused himself with the battles of tygers.

tygers and leopards, sometimes with those of gazzelles, elks, and a variety of serocious animals. On particular days, squadrons of horse passed in review. The sine horses of his own stables were also brought, at times, before him, with all their magnificent trappings, mounted by his grooms, who exhibited various feats of horsemanship. The balcony in which he sat was called the place of Privacy, as it looked from the haram, and the ladies saw every thing from behind their screens of gauze.

An hour being spent at this amusement, the His mode emperor, generally about eleven o'clock, made ing his appearance in the great hall of audience. There all the nobles were ranged before the throne, in two lines, according to their dignity. Ambassadors, viceroys, commanders of armies, Indian princes, and officers, who had returned from various fervices, were introduced in the following form: The Meer Hajib, or the lord in waiting, ushers each into the presence. At the distance of twenty yards from the throne, the person to be presented is commanded by one of the mace-bearers to bow three times very low; raising his hand each time from the ground to his forehead. The mace-bearer, at each bow, calls out aloud, that fuch a person salutes the EMPEROR OF THE WORLD. He is then led up, between the two lines of the nobles, to the foot of the steps which ascend to the throne; and there the same ceremony is again performed. He then moves flowly up along the steps, and, if he is a man of high quality, or much in favour, he is permitted to make his offering to the emperor himself, who touches one of the gold roupees; and it being laid down, the lord of the privypurfe receives the whole. The emperor fometimes times speaks to the person introduced when he does not, the person retires, keeping his face toward the fovereign, and performs the fame ceremonies at the same places as before the introduction of an officer, when he is g the no-raifed into the rank of Omrahs, is the fame with that already described. When he retires from the fleps of the throne, the emp for gives his commands aloud to clothe him with a rich drefs, ordering a fum of money, not exceeding a lack of roupee, to be laid before him. He is, at the fame time, prefented with two elephants, one male and one female, capatifoned, two horses with rich furniture, a travelling bed elegantly decorated, a complete dress, if once worn by his Imperial majefly the more honourable, a fword studded with diamonds, a jewel for the front of The enfigns of his rank are also his turban laid before him, files, drums, colours, filver maces, filver bludgeons, spears, the tails of pea cocks, filver fish, filver dragons, with his titles engraved, with a parchment containing his patent of dignity, and the Imperial grant of an estate.

and creat

The bull

The hall of audience in the city of Delhi, was n f of the called Chellittoon, or Hall of Forty Pillars, as the name imports. In the square which opened to the hall, the cavaliers, or foldiers of fortune, who wanted to be employed in the Imperial fervice, presented themselves completely armed on horseback, with their troop of dependents emperor fometimes reviewed them, and, after they had exhibited their feats of military dexterity before him, they were received into pay Manfebdars, or the lower rank of nobility, pre fented themselves in another square, artizans, with their most curious inventions, occupied a third, and they were encouraged according to the

THE HISTORY OF HINDOSTAN

432

felivity Though Aurungzebe bore all the marks of an enthuliast in his private behaviour, he did not stop the progress of business by many days of thanksgiving, for he often declared, that, without using the means, it were presumptious to hope for any benefit from prayer

APPENDIX.

ADIERTISEMENT

THE nature of a government is best underfleed from the power which it communicates to its officers The author of the preceding History has thought proper to subjoin to his Work the forms of commissions granted by the emperor to his fervants in the provinces. They will ferve to justify his observations on the policy of the Imperial house of Timur, who were too jea lous of their own authority to commit their power, without refervation, to the hands of their The Despot derived the stability of his throne from the opinion which the people form ed of his paternal care of their happiness and prosperity Wanton oppression is an act of folly, not of true despotism, which leaves to mankind a few rights, which render them worthy of being commanded

APPENDIX.

NUMBER I.

TENOR OF A NABOB'S FIRMAN.

THE mandate of the emperor, the shadow of God, from the fource of his bounty and favour, issues forth like the world-enlightening sun; conferring upon the most respected of nobles, the pillar of the empire, the strength of fortune, the pattern of true greatness, Mubariz-ul-dien Chan Bahadur, the high office of Lord of the Subadary, commander and governor of the province of Allahabâd, giving into his hands the full power of contracting, dissolving, appointing and dismissing, as he shall think proper and necessary in that province. But notwithstanding we have many proofs of his justice, humanity, experience Vol III. Nn and

and valour, he must conform to the scope and meaning of the following directions, nor permit the minutest article of them to pass unobserved

He must watch over the safety and happiness of that country, taking particular care that the weak shall not be oppressed by the strong, nor in any manner dispossessed of those tenements which have been long occupied by themselves and their progenitors

He shall make the usages of the country, and the rights of the subject his study, and shall be accountable for the revenues to commissaries of the royal exchequer, after a deduction of the hecessary expences of the province, and what shall be received by the agents of Jagueerdars

He shall punish such as refuse to pay the usual duties and supulated rents, as an example to others, and he shall, from time to time, and repeatedly, transsmit an account of all his transactions to the presence.

Be it known unto all Mutafiddys, Crones, Jagueerdars, Zemindars, Canongoes, Choudries, Muckuddums and Ryots, that this most respected of nobles is created Lord of the Subadary, that they they may not on any account dispute his just commands, and that they shall subject themselves to his authority. And should any Jagueerdar, Zemindar, or others, refuse to comply with his just orders or demands, he shall disposses them of their lands, and send a particular account of their behaviour to court, that we may judge of the same, and, if thought proper, send others from the presence to supply their places. In this proceed according to order, nor deviate from it.

NUMBER II.

A DEWAN'S COMMISSION.

AS it is some time since the particular accounts of the collections and disbursements of the province of Moultan, have been transmitted to the Imperial presence, we have reason to suspect that it is owing to the negligence of the present Dewan. On that account, we have thought proper to appoint the most economical and exact of our servants, the experienced in business Chaja Abdul Astar, to the office of Dewan, from the commencement of the ensuing term. He is therefore commanded to proceed in that bufinels, ac cording to the established rules and customs. to inspect the collections of the Malajat and Samat of the royal lands, and to look after the Jagueerdars, and in general all that belongs to the royal revenues, the amount of which he is to fend to the public treasury, after the gross expences of the province are discharged according to the usual establishment, the particular account of which, he is at the same time to forward to the presence, as well as the accounts of the former Dewan. He is commanded to treat the Ryots with mildness and humanity, that they may employ themselves without disturbance in their buildings, cultivation, and other occupations, that the province may flourish and increase in wealth from year to year, under our happy government. Let all officers of the revenues, Crones, Canon goes, and Jagreerdars of the above mentioned pro vince, acknowledge the aforefaid as Dewan by our royal appointment, and they are commanded to be accountable to him for all that appertains to the Dewanny, and to conceal nothing from him, to subject themselves to his just commands, in every thing that is agreeable to the laws, and tending to the prosperity and happiness of our + realms realms. In this proceed according to the tenor, nor deviate from it.

Nn 2

fore

NUMBER III.

TENOR OF A JAGIEER.

THE illustrious mandate, necessary to be obeyed, iffues forth commanding, That the fum of thirty lacks of Dâms, arifing from different lands in the Pergunna of Chizer-abad, possessed by the flower of nobility Mırza Feridon Beg, is from the commencement of the first harvest of the present year, confirmed and settled in Jagieer upon the most favoured of servants attending the royal presence, Muckirrib Chan Bahadur. Let all Chowdries, Canongoes and tenants who have any concern with, or who occupy the abovementioned lands acknowledge him as Jagurdâr, and pay unto him, or his agents, the usual rents belonging to the Dewanny without delay or refufal; and let the balances that may be due at that term be discharged to the former incumbent. In this matter let there be no obstruction, and let it proceed according to the order.

NUMBER IV

A FIRMAN GRANTING LANDS TO A

ZIMINDAR

ON this auspicious day, the Firman that communicates toy and happinels is issued forth have, of our royal grace and favour, conferred up on the learned, devout and experienced Shech Sadi, and his children, the extent of two thousand bigalis of arable land, in the Pergunna of By ram poor, in the Sircar of Kinnoge, for his benefit and subsistence, free of collection, to com mence from the beginning of the autumnal feafon of the present year, that he may appropri ate the produce of that estate to his own use, and exigencies from feafon to feafon, and from year to year, and continue to pray for the happi ness and permanence of our reign. Let the lords and public officers of that country, affign the above mentioned quantity of land, in a good foil, well meafured, and properly terminated, nor afterwards, upon any account whatever, make any encroachments upon him, nor charge him with with rents, customs, entrance money, yearly present, measurement, &c. charges and imposts of the Dewanny, nor for the dues of the empire. For it is our pleasure that he shall enjoy our bounty free and unmolested, nor be troubled from time to time for confirmations of this Firmân. Proceed according to the order, nor depart from it.

NUMBER V.

THE TENOR OF A CAZI'S FIRMAN.

The Order that issues forth like Fate.

AS in the number of our auspicious designs, it is proper that the people of God should be conducted from the dark and narrow paths of error into the direct road of truth and reason, which intention can only be accomplished, when an upright and devout judge, vested with his powers, shall be established in every city and country, to unfold the doors of virtue and justice, justice, before the faces of wiched and deligning

The laudable qualifications being found in the disposition of the learned in the laws, the extensive in knowledge, Eas-ul-dien Mahommed, we have, on that account, favoured him with the high and respectable office of Cazi of the city of Cabul, commanding him—To give the necessary application to that duty—To observe the established course of the noble law in his enquines—To pass judgment in all disputes, and arbitrations according to the same noble law, nor permit the smallest differences in the case to pass unobserved—To regulate his proceedings in such a clear and distinct manner, as if to-morrow were the day of examination on which every

Be it known to all rulers, and officers, and people, public and private, that the aforesaid learned in the law, is confirmed Cazi of the above mentioned city of Cabul, that they shall pay him all due respect, and revere his decisions totally and particularly, paying all due obedience to his orders, by such officers as he shall appoint for executing the laws receiving such of his words as are agreeable to the noble law into the ears of their understanding. In this business' proceed according to order, and let none oppose it.

NUMBER VI.

TENOR OF A CUTWAL'S FIRMAN.

AS a particular account of the capacity, experience and bravery of Mahommed Bakar, hath reached our high and facred prefence, We have, of our royal favour confirmed, and appointed him Cutwâl of the city of Dowlatabâd. He is commanded to make the practice of fidelity and truth his study, that he may be enabled to execute the duties of his office with propriety. He is to take care that the guards and watches of that city be strictly kept, that the inhabitants may be secured and protected in their persons and property, that they may bless our happy reign, and pray for its duration.

He is to use his utmost endeavours that no thieves, gamblers, or other miscreants shall make their their appearance, and that no nuisances shall be permitted to remain in the streets, or before the door of any person. That no infidious old women, pimps or jugglers, who lead the wives and daughters of honest men into the ways of evil, be tolerated, but have their hands shortened from such iniquitous practices. That he will as much as possible, prevent forestalling of grain, provisions, and other things, that the markets may be kept low, nor the people suffer from any combinations amongst the Bunias. What events may arise of a particular nature, he is to send a true and faithful account of them to the presence.

Be it known unto all Mutafiddiet, and officers, and all men, public and private, of the above-mentioned city, that the aforefaid Mahommed Bakar, is confirmed and appointed Cutwâl, and that all quarrels and vexations disputes which may arise in that city, shall be referred to his decision, and that they shall submit to his arbitration, according to the established customs of the empire. Let this business be proceeded on according to order, and let none oppose it

NUMBER'VII.

COMMISSION OR PERWANNA FOR A CARKUN OR

CHIEF OF A DISTRICT.

TO all Chowdries, Canongoes, Muckuddums and others of the Pergunna of Noor-poor, be it known, That we have appointed the chosen in office, the fervant of the faithful, Kınwir Râm, to the office of Carkun of the above-mentioned Pergunna. They are therefore to acknowledge him as fuch, and to make him acquainted with every general and particular transaction in settling or collecting of which, he is to keep an exact and faithful daily register, which must be attested by the Shackdar, Chowdries and Canongoes of the Pergunna, and transmitted regularly every quarter to the royal exchequer. He is to take care that the ancient usages and customs of the Pergunna shall not be violated, nor any new imposts or other innovations be permitted, and to examine the books of the above-mentioned Shackdars, Chowdries and Canongoes from time to time, that they are regularly kept. He is to receive his own pay from the Fotadar of the Pergunna. He is to demean himself with moderation, justice and integrity, that he may be beloved and respected.

In this business proceed according to order, without variation

NUMBER VIII

COMMISSION OR PERWANNA FOR A CRORIE.

TO all Chowdries, Canongoes, Muckuddums and Riots of the Pergunna of Rehimabad, be it known. Since by the mandate that subjects the world, and is refulgent as the fun, the office of Crorie of the faid Pergunna is conferred upon Chaja Mahommed Mauzum; from the commencement of next term, they are commanded to acknowledge him as fuch, and to be accountable to him for the usual rents and established rights of the Dewanny from term to term, and from year to year, without scruple or refusal, nor in any manner oppose his authority in the just execution of his duty in all that respects the royal revenues; nor conceal any thing general or particular from him, that properly ought to come under his cognizance

The above mentioned is ordered to fludy occonomy in his department, and to apply with dili gence gence to his duty, without permitting the minutest transaction in that district to pass unobserved. To behave with justice and humanity to the Riôts, that they may have no cause of complaint, but be encouraged to apply themselves diligently to their various occupations, and that the annual collections may increase yearly, as well as the happiness of the inhabitants. He is from time to time to lodge his collections in the provincial treasury. In this proceed according to the tenor, without deviation.

NUMBERIX.

COMMISSION OF A FOTADAR OR TREASURER

OF A DISTRICT.

TO our honoured and faithful Mirza Abrahîm Crorie of the Pergunna of Mahommed-abâd, be it known: That as the office of Fotadâr of the above-mentioned Pergunna hath become vacant, We have been pleafed to appoint our trusty and diligent fervant Jassier Beg to that office. You are therefore commanded to give into his custody custody all the rents and customs of the Dewanny in that district, and he shall lodge it with care in his treasury, and you are to take his receipts, which you are to send monthly to the royal exchequer, nor are you permitted to keep one Dam of the revenues in your own hands after the stated periods, and you must beware of treating any of his agents ill, which he may send to demand the collections. And should there be any desiciencies in his accounts, you are to be answerable for the same. Know this to be confirmed, nor deviate from the order

1...

[449]

GLOSSARY TO THE APPENDIX.

Canongoes. Literally, speakers of the law:

Registers of a district.

Carkun. The chief officer of a district, who lett the lands, audited the accounts, and preferved the ancient usages.

Cazi. A judge.

Chowdrie. The conftable of a small district.

Cutwal. A mayor of a town.

Crorie. The collector of the revenues of a dıstrict.

Dâm. An imaginary coin, the fortieth part of a rupee.

Dewan. The receiver-general of the 1e-

venues of a province.

Dewanny. The Imperial revenues of the De-wan's department.

Firmán. A royal commission or mandate.

Fotadâr. The treasurer of a district.

Jagueer. An estate generally granted during pleasure; as also the Imperial grant itself.

Jagueerdar. The possessor of the crown rents of a certain tract of land.

Malaját. The land rent.

Muckuddum.

MucLuddum

The principal clerk of a small department, or the chief of a village

Mutafiddy

A clerk of the cheque, or any writer employed about the revenues

Nabob or Nawáb The king's lieutenant or viceroy of a province, properly Naib, but changed to the plural number by the natives, who address all great men in that manner

Pergunna

A diffrict

Perwanna

A commission of an inferior nature to a Firman

Riots Sairiát Tennuts, husbandmen

All kinds of taxation, belides the

Sircar

A district, fometimes comprehend ing feveral pergunnas, as also the principal man of any business A kind of justice of the peace, or

Shechdar, Shackdar the most venerable man in a town or district of the Mahom medan faith

A possessor or farmer of lands

Zemindar Zemindary

The country farmed by a Zemin dar, which was sometimes of a great extent, and formed into a kind of county, having its own courts and particular jurifice

tions

I N D E X

TO THE

THIRD VOLUME.

ABA Chan flain by Shere, 31.

Abdalla, commands in Guzerat, 51. Rewarded for his fervices, 148. Quashes an insurrection in Behar, 170. Dismissed from his government, 176.

Abdalla, King of Bucharia, 418.

Attemad-ul-Dowlat, raised to the vizarit, 36. His wise and able administration, 37.

Acticad Chan, 36. His death and character, 58.

Adil Shaw, sues for peace, 150. Defeated by Aurungzebe, 221.

Afgans rebel, 38. Again rebel and are repulsed, 142. Rebel, 415. Defeated, 417.

Agriculture encouraged, 37.

Akbar, his great abilities, 1. His empire not so extensive as that of the Patans, 2. His death, 4.

Afi Murdan, delivers up Candahar, 171. Rewarded, 172. Promoted, 178. Made governor of Cashmire, 185. Invades Buduckshan, 194. His death and character, 219.

Vol. III.

Оо

Aliver dis

Aliverdi, his infolence, 187
Alla (Seif), his unhappy fate, 112
Allum (Chan) returns from Persa, 61
Andr Sineb, his rashness and death, 101

Amend reduces Chittagong, 207

Amin (Mahommed) the fon of Jumla, 216 Released by the Prince Mahommed, ibid. His infolence to Aurungzebe, 400 Sent against the Asgans, 417

Arabian fystem of philosophy, 2

Arfelan Aga, the Turkish ambassador, 180

Aliph Jul, 35 His daughter married to Shaw Jehan, 56 Made Vilier, 59 Oppofes coming to battle, 70 Croffes the Gelum, 92 Refolves to releafe the emperor, 93 Defeated by Mohâbet, 95 Taken prifoner, 96 His conference, 100 And schemes with Mohabet, 101 Raises Dawn Buxsh to the throne, 113 Defeats Sharikr, 114 Proclaims Shaw Jehan, 113 Continued in the vizant, 120 Arrives at Agra, 121 In high savour, 122 Commands the army, 144 Defeats Lodi, that Demands him of the Nizam, 145 Lajs waste the Decan, 151 His death, 181 His character, 183 His family, 184

Affamiles, invade Bengal, 172 Their country reduced,

Attalla Chan killed, 95

Azim Chan, opposes Selim, 3 Sent to Malava, 5 Abets a conspiracy, 6 Proposes to assassing the emperor, 8 Disgrace, 47 He is released, 57 Commands an army under his grandson, 74.

pardoned, 181 180 Removed, but

Azzz, his valour, 199. Defeated by Aurungzebe, 200-Azmut, the fon of Lodi, his fourt, 131 His gallant behaviour and death, 134.

Aurungzeke, born, 60 Delivered as an hoftage to Jehangure, 83 Prefented to his father, 121 'His age at his father's accession, 122 Sent to Bundela, 155 In high favour, 158 Accompanies his father to the Decan, 167 Marries the daughter of Shaw Nawaz, 169 Jealous of the insucence of Dars, 176 Removed from the Deceme 192. Sent to Guzernt, 193. Sent to command runt the Utheer, 199 whom he totally overthrowe, 200 Beffece Condahar in Cun, 206. Defect the Perfen, 207 Send Jumla to court, 217. Jest Justin, 210. Tikes Bider, 221. Defents Adil Show, 222. He plant with Jumbs, 223. His charactor, 231 Heart of his father's illness, 235. Embrice Mor d' proposil, 236 Gams over Jumli, 237. Marche for Autum bid, 230. His management of Mor d. 240 Arriver of the Nirhidda, ib.d. Joined by Mo al, 211 Defeate the Miraja, 242 Remains at U,c., 243 Furns the rear of Dara's army, 246. H. order of battle, 247 His resolution, 251. Gains the battle, 252. Hi great address, 257. Corrupts the rran of Sohmin, 258 Arriver before Agra, 261. Send a melinge to his father, 262. His conference with his fifter, ilid. His duplicity and address, 263, His scheme, 265. Seizes his father, 267. Writes to him, 268. Deceives Morad, 269. Prepares to purfue Dare, 270 His narrow escape, 271. He seizes Morid, 272 Quells the irmy, 273 Advances to Delhi, 274 and mounts the throne, 275 Pursues Dara, 291. Arrives on the Suttuluz, 202 How he receives the adhereats of his brother, 294 Marches to Moultan, 295. Ciuse of his return, 296 Duplicity toward Suja, 297 His preparations against Suja, 298 Marches down along the Jumna, 299 Offers battle, 300. Betrayed by the Marija, 301. His resolution, 302. Obtains the victory, 303. His speech to the nobles, 304 Ar-Tives at Agra, 306 Marches against Dara, 315. Offers battle, 317. His stratigem to deceive Dara, 318. Overthrows that prince, 321. Sends a force in pursuit of him, 324 Calls a council concerning Dara, 328. Condemns him to death, 331. His behaviour on feeing his brother's head, 334. Sends an infidious letter to his fon Milhommed, 344. Imprisons him, 347. His prudent administration, 356. Suspects his second son, 358. Expedient against Soliman, 359. His behaviour to that prince, 360. Receives an embassy from Persia, 362. His humanity, 364. His fickness, 368, Consternation of the people thereupon, 369 His anxiety, 370 His resolute behaviour, 371. He recovers, abid His demands on his father, 372 His health perfectly O 0 2 restored, 377 His progress to Cashmure, 378 His jealousy of Jumla, 281 Endeavours to appeale Shaw Abas II. 402 Suspects the Persians in his service, 405 His irresolution, 406. Sends for his sister Jehanara, 407 Reconciled with the Persians, 408 He takes the field, 409 Alarmed, 413 Rewards Dilere, 414 His genus, 421 Attention to justice, 422 His contempt of pomp and fiattery, tid Planness of dress, and ausserity, 423 His justice and elemency, 424 His public buildings, and encouragement of letters, 425 His courage, learning, and manly exercises, 427 His conunence, 428 Amuscanents, 429 His bustices in the morning, 430 noon and evening, 431

-1-

R

Babdar Shasa rebels in Guzerat, 51
Bakir, his faccefsful invasion of Golconda, 139
Bandar assassinates Chulero, 66
Bao Singh succeeds his father, 48

Bengal, disturbances in, 21

Buleradjit, fent into the mountains of Sewalic, 60 Killed, 72.

Bocharas taken, 118, Magnificent reception of its king, 418

Beckers Fernd) his fpirited refolution, 4. Sent in pursuit of Chusero, 11 Defeats that prince, 12 Disabled by a stroke of the pally, 35

Byspour, Raja of, beauty of his wife cause of his fall,

Bundels, its Rays revolts, 125

C

Calamaties, 149.
Candabar, besieged, 18 Lost to the empire, 83 Delivered up by Alı Murdân, 170

Cafer takes Chufero, 16

- governor of Bengal, takes Hugley, 154

Chaja Airlis his distress in the desart, 22. Arrives at Lahore 23 Promoted, 24. Made high-treasurer, ind. Made rilier, 35

Channe

C) www-zad defeats the Ushees, 84.

Chan Chanan, accompanies Purvez, 42. Disgraced, 43. Intrigues with the enemy, 55. Besieged in Brampour, 62. His death, 103. Character, 104.

Charafters of the natives of Asia strongly marked, 2.

Chittagong reduced, 397.

Churrum (prince) 19 Sent to command the army in the Decan, 45 Forces the Rana to a peace, 46 In great favour, 181d Returns to court, 47. Curies every thing before him, 48 All-powerful in the affairs of the state, 51. His name changed to Shaw Jehân, 54r

Chusero (prince), 3 His party struck with a panic, 4. Received into favour, 5. Meditates to rebel, 6. Refuses to assassinate his father, 8 His plot discovered, ibid. Flies from Agra, 9 Plunders the country, 10. Pillages the suburbs of Delhi, 11. Marches toward Lahore, 12. Deseat and siight, 13 He is deserted by his adherents, 14 In great distress, 15. He is taken and brought to his father, 16. His behaviour before him, 17. Closely consined, 19. Released, 56 Delivered up to Shaw Jehân, 63. His character, 64. Assassination, 65. Manner of it, 66.

Cipper-Sheko, accompanies his father Dara, 323. Bound and dragged from his father, 332. Sent prisoner to Gualiar, 333.

Coolies descated, 52.

Cruelty (excuse for), 120.

Ci 'tub rebels in Behar, 40. Killed with a brick-bat, 41.

Cuttub, king of Tellingana, 213. Imprisons the son of Jumla, 215. Offers terms to the prince Mahommed, ibid Defeated, 217.

Cuttub Chan quells a rebellion in Guzerat, 379.

\mathbf{D}

Data, 83. Presented by Asiph Jah to his father, 121.

His age at his father's accession, 122. Marries the daughter of Purvez, 157. Jealous of his brothers, 159.

Promoted, 175 Marches against the Persians, 186.

Dangerous sickness, 190 Speech against Aurungzêbe, 192. His great jealousy of that prince, 210. Un uccessful against Candahar, 211. Appointed to succeed to the throne, 212 Polleffes part of the Imperial power, 214 Assumes the government, 223 violence, 2-4 Sends his father to Agra, 226 Jumla out of his office, 226 His filial piety, 227 Carries all before him, ibid His character, 220 His ereat preparations, 214 Marches against Aurunezebe and Morad. 245 Charge given him by his father, 246 Ilis order of battle, 247 Ilis bravery, 240 By an accident, 250 is overthrown by Aurungzebe. 201 How received by his father, 255 His flight to Delhi, 256. Raifes forces, 257 Flies to Labore. 274 His irrefolution, 290. Retreat from the Bea. 201 Hesitates about giving battle, 202 He flies from Lahore, 293 Flies to Bicker, 208 Meditates to retire to Perlia, 309 Diffuaded by the favourite Sultana, 300. Arrives at Tatta, 310 His diffres in the desart, ibid. Arrives at Guzerat, 211 Gains over the governor, 212 Marches toward Apra. and Turns toward the dominions of the Maraja, 313 who deferts his cause, 314 He sortifies himself at Almere 315 Insulted in his lines, 317 Deceived by Aurungzebe, 318 Totally defeated, 321 His musfortunes, 322 Uncommon diffres, 323 Arrives at Tatta, 324 Prepares to fly to Persia, 325 De-tained by his regard for the Sultana, 326 Throws himself upon Jehan, ibid His grief for the death of the Sultana, 327 Betrayed and delivered to the eneniv, 228 Carried with ignominy through Delhi, 220. Humanity of the people for him, 330 His manly behaviour, ibid Circumstances previous to his murder, 222. Affassinated, 223 Reflections on his death, ibid. His head brought to Aurungzebe, 334

Dawir Buxsh, the fon of Chulero, 74. Railed to the throne, 113 A temporary emperor, 114. Depoled and murdered, 11,

Debere deceives Dara, 319 His valour, 320

Decan, a small part only conquered, 2 Invaded by Shaw Jehân, 138 Its princes sue for peace, 151 Invaded by Shaw Jehân, 166 Submits, 168

Differ, invades Bijapour, 411 Suspects the prince Shaw Allum, 412 Flies from him, 413

Diria defeats the Nizam, 129.

Dpw'stabld (the city of), taken, 145 The citadel taken by Mohab-t, 157

INDEX

E

Eder defeated by Abdalla, 52.

Elephant, killed by Aurungzebe, 159

Elephants, of Ceylon and Pegu, 329.

Eman Kullı, 118.

Eradit, receives Shaw Jehan, 137 In danger of a defeat, 141. Removed from the command of the army, 142. Takes Dowlatabad, 145.

Etabar defends Agra against Shaw Jehan, 68.

Executions (a dreadful kind of), 17.

F

Fakiers (remarkable infurrection of), 385 Quelled, 386. Famine, 363.

Fedar Chan, his gallant resolution, 95.

Ferid. See Bochari.

Ferose seizes Shariar, 114.

 \mathbf{G}

Ghazi raises the siege of Candahar, 18.

Government, becomes fettled and uniform under Akbar, 1 Its effects on the manners of the Indians, 2. That of the Tartar Moguls, 19.

H

Hakım advises the murder of Dara, 331.

Hidjar Singh revolts, 125. Defeated and flies, 127. Taken and pardoned, 128. Revolts, 154. His miffortunes and bravery, 155 His death, ibid.

House of Timur, extent of their dominions, 3. Their revenue, 2. Their forces, 3.

Hugley, taken by affault, 154.

Hussian Beg, joins Chusero, 9 His advice to that prince, 13. Attends him in his slight, 14. Taken, 16 Put to death, 17

Huffein (Abdul), obtains a victory in Malava, 62. Attacks Lodi, 133

Hussen, the son of Lodi, 134

J

Jam (Raja) receives Dara hospitably, 323 Ibrahim deseated and slain, 76

Jekan (Chan), his humanity, 328

Jebanara (the princess), her character, 122 Meets with an accident, 190. Her conserence with Aurugzebe, 262 Deceived by that prince, 263 Sent for by Autungzebe to appeale the Persians, 407

Jehangire, mounts the throne, 5 Confirms all the laws of his father, 6 Purines his fon Chufero, 11 His behaviour to him when taken, 17 Marches to Cabul. 18 Perplexed, 19 His defigns against Shere Afkun, 26 Refuses to fee Mher-ul Niffa, 33 He is captivated by her charms, 34 Marries her, shid Changes her name into Noor Mahil, 35 Her power over him, 36. His indolence, 37 Natural impatience, 43 Removes to Ajmere, 44 A whim, 46 Pays extravagant honours to Moin ul Dien, 49 His magnificence, 51 His reception of the English ambasfador ibid Leaves Ajmere, 55 Releafes prince Chusero 56 Arnves at Mando, 57 Marches into Guzerat, ibid Returns to Agra, ibid Makes a progress to Cashmire, 60 His public works, 61 Returns to Lahore, 62 Enraged at the murder of Chufero, 66 Declares Shaw Jehan a rebel, 69 His distress, 70. His dream, ibid Defeate Shaw Jehan, 72 Suspects Mohabet, 85 Calls him to court, 88 Surprised and taken in his tent by that officer, 90 His behaviour on the occasion, 91 great danger, of Marches toward Cabul, of Refules to put Mohabet to death, 90 Returns to Lahore, 100 Declines in his health, 105 His death, . 106 Character, 107 Wrote his own memoirs, 107 Anecdotes of his private life, ibid. Scheme of establish ing a new religion, 108 His violence, 109 Severe jultice, 111 His children, 116

Jihm, 325 Receives Dara, 326 Betrays him, 327
Delivers him up to the enemy, 328 Rewarded by Aurungzebe, 330 Slain by the people, 331

Illam governor of Bengal, 39. Reduces Affam, 172

Removed from his government, 176

Ymula, (Mahommed), his rife and character, 213 His influence with Aurungzebe, 215 Made vifier by Shaw Jehan,

INDEX,

Jehan, 217. Sent to the Decan, 219. Concerts meafures with Aurungzebe, 223. Returns to Agra, ibid. Turned out of his office, 226. Gained by Aurungzebe, 237. Imprisoned, 239. Arrives at court, 295. His resolution, 302. Sent in pursuit of Suja, 303. Turns his rear, 337. Attacks Suja in his lines, 338. Quashes a mutiny, 340. His speech to the army, 342. Defeats Suja, 343. Receives the prince Mahommed, 346. Drives Suja from Bengal, 348. He invades Assam, 381. which he reduces, 382. His retreat, death, and character, 384.

Justice, remarkable instance of, 111, 112.

K

Kilburga taken by Aurungzebe, 222. Koka slain by Shere Afkun, 31.

 \mathbf{L}

Lael defeated by Abdalla, 52.

Lescar, what, 44.

Lodi (Chan Jehan), accompanies prince Purvez, 42. Commands the army in the Decan, 103 Averse to Shaw Jehan, 115 Submits, 123. Affronted at court, 129 Shuts himself up in his house, 131 His distress, 132. Gallant behaviour and flight, 133. Attacked at the Chunbul, 134. Escapes, 135 Forms a confederacy in the Decan, 138. Commands their forces, 140. Disappointed in his views, 142 Defeated, 144. His slight, 145. Missortunes and death, 146 His character, 147.

M

Mahommed (prince), the son of Aurungzebe, 215 Takes Hýdrabad, 217 Deseats the king of Golconda, ibid. Returns to Brampour, ibid. Employed by his father, 265 to seize the person of Shaw Jehan, 266 Which he effects, 267 Rejects the offer of the empire, ibid. Resused admission to his grandfather, 280. Made governor of Moultan, 297. Joins his father, 298 His rashness, 299. Pursues Suja, 303 Joined by Jumla, 337. Deserts to Suja, 339 Marries that prince's daughter.

daughter, 310 His confidence, 343 His father's infidious letter to him, 344 Suspected and dismissed by Suja 345 He is seized, 346 and imprisoned, His death and character, 388

Malika Shade, 163

Malleck Amber, at the head of the rebels, 53 His bold nefs. sa

Man Singh favours Chusero, 3 Abrts a conspiracy, 6 His death, 47 Succeeded by his fon, 48

Marina rebels, 212 Reduced, 213 Parours Dara, 227 Oppofes Aurungzebe at the Nirbidda, 240 His folly and defeat, 241 Masculine behaviour of his wife, 242 Offended at Aurungzebe, 294 His treachery, 301 Plunders the baggage, 302 Carries a falle report to Agra, 30, Proposes to join Dara, 313 But 15 gained by Aurungzebe, 314 Sent to aid Shaifta, His plot to affaffinate that general, 367 Difcontented, 394

Mauxim (Mahommed the fon of Aurungzebe), 347 Em ployed by his father in a stratagem, 346

Asber-ul Niffa, her accomplishments and beauty, 24 Captivates the prince Selim 25 Married to Shere Afkun, ibid Her hulband flain, 31 She is brought to court, 32. Denied admittance to the emperor, 33 Her ingenuity, bid She captivates the emperor, 34.
Married by Jehangire ibid Her name changed to Noor Mahil, 35 Advancement of her relations, 36 Her magnificence, 51 Power over the emperor, 56 Her name changed to Noor-Jehan, ibid Builds a magnificent monument for her father, 58 Her flight from Mohabet, 92 Her intrepid conduct, 93 Seized by Mohabet, 96 Condemned to death, ibid. But pardoned 97 Her violence against Mohabet, 160 Obliges him to fly, ibid Procures a will in favour of Shariar 113 Confined by her brother, 114. Death and character 195

Mehabet, commands the army in the Decah, 43 Joins the emperor against Shaw Jehan, 71 Commands the army under Purvez 7. Defeats Shaw Jehan, 75 Marches toward Bengal, 79 Totally defeats Shaw Jehan, 80 Envired and fuspected, 85 Accused of treason, 86 His enemies at court, 87 Commanded to appear in the presence 88 His messenger grossly affronted, 80 He surprises the emperor in his tent, 90 Carries him to his own camp, 9:. Cuts off Sujait for his infolence, 92. Carries the emperor to his camp, 93 Defeats the visier, 95 and tales him piisoner, 96 Seizes and condemns to death the empress, ibid Pardons hei, 97. Manages the empire, ibid In danger at Cabul, 98. Resigns his power, 99 Obliged to sly, 100 His conference with the visier, 101 Pardoned, 102 Resides with the Rana, 103. Joins Shaw Jehan, 114. Commands in the Decan, 123 Sent against the Usbees, 125. and into Bundela, 127 His generous conduct to the Raja, 128 Deprived of the command of the army, 1295 Sent to the Decan, 157. Takes Dowlatabad, 158 Quarrels with prince Suja, ibid. His death and character, 161. Anecdotes of his private life, 162.

Mohabet (the younger), takes Kilburga, 222. Sent to Guzerat, 373.

Morad, emperor of the Ottomans, 178

Morad (prince), delivered as an hostage to Jehangire, 83. Presented to his father, 121. His age at his father's accession, 122. Distinguishes himself, 181 Marries the daughter of Shaw Nawaz, 186 Scut with an army against the Usbecs, 196 And through his impatience disgraced, 198 Sent to the Decan, 205 Removed, on account of his violence, from that government, 208. His character, 232 Proposals to Aurungzebe, 236. Deceived by him, 240 Commands in the center of battle, 248. His great bravery, 250 Deceived by Aurungzebe, 269 His counter-plot miscarnies, 270. He is again deceived, 271. Seized by his brother, 272. Sent prisoner to Agra, 273 His wise persuades her father, 311. to join Dara, 312

Mukir rib Chan, hi2 affection for his fovereign, 92
Mumtaza Zemani, the favourite Sultana Kudfia, 60 dies, 149 Her tomb, 189. &c.

N

Nadili Midani, a gallant officer, 38

Nadira, the daughter of Purvez, married to Dara, 157. Her misfortunes, 322. Overwhelmed with distress and fickness, 325. Her fortitude, ibid. Her death, 326.

Narsi sent by Asiph to Mohabet, 114

Nazir commissioned to murder Dara, 331

Nizam proposes terms, 145 Neor- Teban Vide Mher-ul-Niffa. Nor-Mahil Vide Mher ut Nills

Ð Peace between India and Perfia, 18 Another medication, 173 Universal peace, 387 Peace with Persia. Ato A general peace, 417 Perill, murders many of the imperial family, 116 Affrom Lodi in the presence, 121 Killed by Lodis fon, 134

Perha (origin of the quarrel with), 200 Perhans invest Candahar, 17

Pura Bani, only wife of Suja, 352 Her refolution and melancholy death, 353 Pents of the court of India, 2

Pertaguele, complaints against them, 153 Dastardly be haviour at Hugley, 154-

Purvez (prince), 10 Sent against the Rana, 41 mildnels and mexperience, 42 Recalled, 43 Politenels to the English ambassador, 48 Resides at Brampour, 53 Commands the army, abid Superfeded by the prince Churrum, 54 Purfues Shaw Jehan, 73 Defeats Shaw Jehan at the Nirbidda, 75 Totally defeats him in Bengal, 80. His infentibility and death, 102 His character, 103

R

Rahim, taken prisoner, 16. Put to death, 17 Rabin (Abdul) accompanies prince Purvez, 42.

Rays Mahil, destroyed by fire, 177 Rana rebels. At Sues for peace, 45 Breaks the treaty.

53 Reflections on the government of the Moguls, 119 On despotism, 188 On the cause of the civil war, 228 On the defeat of Dara, 252 On Aurungzeb-'s mount ing the throne 276 On the reign and character of Shaw Ichan, 28. On the art of Aurungzebe, 285 On the death of Dara, 333 On the death of Suja,

353 On the conduct of Aurungzebe, 355

Rhotas (new), taken, oo

Roads, improvement thereof by Jehangire, 61

Rodrigues

INDEX.

Rodriguez refuses aid to Shaw Johan, 153.

Ree (Sir Thomas), arrives at Brampour, 48. How received by Purvez, 49. Arrives at Ajmere, 51. His fuccess at court, 57.

Roshinara (the princess), her character, 122 Rustum Suffavi carries on the Persian war, 69.

S

Sadulla, made visier, 194. Settles the affairs of Balick, 198 His death, 214.

Seabosh totally defeated, 171.

Sefi, his feeble reign over Persia, 170. Marches an army toward Candahar, 171. Makes peace with Shaw Jehan, 173. Proposes to invade India, 185. His death, 186.

Seef commissioned to murder Dara, 331.

Selim, intrigues against him, 3. Mounts the throne, 4. Assumes the name of Jehangire, 5. Captivated by Mher-ul-Nissa, 25

Sewaji, his depredations, 365. War with him, 388. His strange conduct, 392 Insolence to Aurungzebe, 1bid. His slight, 393.

Shaista Chan, commands an army in the Decan, 138. The eldest son of Asiph Jah, 184. Second in command before Hyderabad, 217. Writes a letter to Aurungzebe, 247. Betrays Dara, 255. Condemned to death, 258. Rescued, 260. His panic, 305. Invades Malabar, 365. A plot to affassinate him, 367. Made governor of Bengal, 395. Gains over the Portuguese, 396. Reduces Chittagong, 397.

Shaw Abas I. 18. A great prince, 117. Suiprises Candahar, 67. His death and character, 136

Shaw Abas II. his accession to the throne of Persia, 205. Takes Candahar, 206. Enraged against Aurungzebe, 401 His death and character, 410

Shaw Allum (the prince), his art, 357. Suspected by his father, 358. Declared heir of the empire, 363. He intrigues for the throne, 369. Sent to the Decan, 374. His jealousy of Dilere, 411. His designs to rebel, 412. Pursues Dilere, 413. Drops his designs, 414.

Skaw Big, his unaccountable behaviour, 18 Defeats the Algans, 38 Quells an infurrection, 53

Shaw Jehan, 54 Success in the Decan, 55 Sent to quell the infurgents, 62 Suspected of affaffinating Chulero, 66 Rebels, shid Assumes the imperial ti les, 67 Attacks Agra to no effect, 68 Forms his camp at l'erid-abad, thid His demands on his father r fuled, ibid Endeavours to excuse himself, 60 Is totaly defeated, 72 His valour, 73 His party defeated in Guzerat, 74 Defeated at the Nirbidda, 75 Flies to Orixa, 76 Reduces Bengal, 77 and B har, thid Divides his army into three divisions, 79 Prepares for action, 80 Fotally defeated, ibid His bravery, 81 Flies to the Decan, 82 Belieges Brampour, bid His affairs ruined, 83 Is pardoned by his father, shid Prepares to rebel, for Informed of the death of his father, 114 Marches toward the capital, 115 Proclaimed emperor, 116 His titles, 120 His Pomp, ibid Attention to bufiness 121 His children, 1.2 His great abilities, ibid Vigour of his government, 125 His clemency, 127 Enraged against Lodi, 129 Alarmed at his escape, 136. Prepares to invade the Decan, 137 Atrives and detaches armies onto the enemy's country, 138 Relides at Brampour, 140 His vigilance, ibid And magnificence 141 Rewards Abdalla 148 Remits the taxes, 140 to those who had suffered by a public calamity, 151 Returns to Agra, 152 Persecutes the Hindoos, 153 Enraged against the Portuguese, ibid. Sends Mohabet to the Decan 157 Progress to Cashmire, 160. Returns to Agra, 163 Refolves to invade the Decan 166 Leaves Agra, 167 Lays waste the enemy's country, 168 Reduces the Decan, and Returns to Aimere, 160 Makes peace with Perlia, 173 A foe to oppression, 176 Punthes oppressive governors, 177 His excellent government, shid. His justice, 184 Gardens of Shalimar, 189 Arrives at Agra, shid Sends his fon Morad against the Usbecs, 196 Difgraces that prince for disobedience, 198 Returns to Lahore, 202 Jealous of his sons, ibid. Resides at Delhi, 204 Makes Jumla visier, 217 Makes a tour to the north 218 He falls sick, 224. Removed to Agra from Delhi, 225 Recovers, 226 His favour for Dara, 227 His great perplexity, 244. His charge to to Dara, 246 His behaviour to him after his deseat, 255. Writes to him, 264. His letter intercepted, 265. His schemes to seize Aurungzebe, ibid He is deceived and taken, 266. Offers the empire to Mahommed, 267. How he receives the news of Aurungzebe's having mounted the throne, 279. Restections on his reign, 281 And character, 282 Rejects the proposals of Aurungzebe, 372. His sierce answer to his son, 373. His death, 389. Anecdotes of his private life, 390, 391.

Shawriar, appointed by will to succeed to the throne, 113. Defeated, 114.

Shere Afkun, 21. Marries Mher-ul-Nissa, 25. IIIs spirit and high birth, 26. Fights and though unarmed kills a tyger, 27. Defeats a design against his life, 28. Discomsits forty assalins, 29. He is murdered, 31.

Sınla (Amır) rebels, 41.

Soliman, the fon of Dara, 234. Surprises and defeats Suja, 235. Deserted by his army, 287. Flies to Serinagur, 288. His slight, 359. He is taken and delivered up to Aurungzebe, 360. His behaviour in the presence of that prince, 362.

Succession to the throne (the mode of), 119

Suga (prince,) presented to his father, 121. His age at his father's accession, 122 Married to the daughter of Rustum Suffavi, of the royal line of Persia, 157. Expences on the marriage, ibid. Sent to command under Mohabet, 158 Is recalled, 160. Promoted, 175. Made governor of Bengal, 176. Narrow escape, 177. Sent to command in Cabul, 203 Returns to Bengal, Pays his respects at court, 209. His character, 230. He takes the field, 233. Surprised and defeated by Soliman, 235 His preparations against Aurungzebe, 296 On full march, 298. Fortifies himself, 299 His great resolution, 301. Defeated, 303 War against him, 336. His preparations, 337. Attacked in his lines, 338 Retreats, 339. Defeated near Tanda, 343. His suspicions, 345, and generous behaviour to Mahommed, 346 Driven from Bengal, 348. Takes refuge in Arracan, 349 His uncommon misfortunes, 350. Ordered to leave Arracan, 351. His refolution, bravery, misfortunes, and murder, 352. Deplorable fate of his family, 353.

1 1 27 3

Sugait,